WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - The Pentagon said Friday that four U.S. warships carrying more than 2,200 Marines would arrive ''shortly'' off the coast of war-torn Liberia in West Africa to evacuate Americans if necessary.

The Pentagon's public affairs office said Thursday night that the flotilla involved six ships, but it later said it was mistaken and that only four ships are headed to Liberia.

''The ships will arrive shortly. We can't say any more than that,'' said Pentagon spokeswoman Marine Maj. Robin Higgins.

''There's no order for them to do anything more than to be in position and to be prepared to help evacuate American citizens if that should become necessary,'' Higgins said.

The State Department recommended that all U.S. citizens leave Liberia immediately and said it has ordered non-essential government workers and the dependents of U.S. government personnel to leave.

There are about 1,100 private U.S. citizens and 102 government personnel and dependents in Liberia, the State Department said.

''While the probability of using these ships is low, they are being positioned as a precaution,'' Navy Cmdr. Dave Thomas said.

Liberia has been in the throes of a civil war for the past six months. Rebel leader Charles Taylor told United Press International his fighters are poised to capture the capital's airport, and vowed he would personally shoot Samuel Doe if the beleaguered president resists guerrillas advancing on Monrovia.

Taylor, who studied economics in the United States, was a civil servant in Liberia before starting the rebellion six months ago.

He predicted that he would capture Monrovia within three weeks, and expected government opposition to dissolve before his National Patriotic Front reaches the city. Taylor said he has 10,000 men under arms.

The U.S. flotilla includes the USS Saipan, a helicopter carrier. The vessel carries attack helicopters and AV-8B Harrier jump jets that can provide air cover for Marines and its troop-carrier helicopters.

The ships are carring 2,102 enlisted men and another 179 officers of the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Force who would be available to provide protection for Americans - including using military force - if necessary.

Thomas said the ships were ordered to take up a position in international waters off the coast of Liberia as a precaution and told ''to be prepared to evacuate American citizens in the event they would no longer be able to leave the country by commercial means.''

The ships are attached to the 6th Fleet, and some were ordered out of their stations in the Mediterranean as long as three days ago, Thomas said.

The Marine unit is based at Camp Lejeune, N.C., and at the Marine Air Station at nearby New River, N.C.

''Due to the deteriorating conditions in Liberia, the Department of State advises all U.S. citizens to depart the country immediately,'' read a travel advisory from the deparment. It recommended that Americans needing help call the U.S. Embassy in Liberia.

The other ships in the group are the destroyer Peterson, equipped with 5-inch guns and a variety of other weaponry; the Ponce, an amphibious transport dock that can carry landing craft; and the tank-landing ship Sumter. All four ships are based in Norfolk, Va.

Among the aircraft carried on the Saipan, besides the Harriers and AH-1T attack helicopters, are CH-46 Sea Knight and CH-53 Sea Stallion troop carriers and the UH-1 Huey utility helicopter.

The CH-53 was employed a decade ago in the unsuccessful attempt to rescue U.S. hostages held in Iran.

Taylor, in his interview with UPI, said his troops were awaiting his command to launch an attack on Robertsfield Airport, the nation's only international gateway, about 25 miles south of Monrovia.

A Western diplomat stationed in the capital of the West African nation also predicted the demise of Doe, a former sergeant who seized power in a bloody coup in March 1980. The diplomat estimated Taylor has 5,000 men under arms.

Diplomatic sources said earlier this month that Doe had lost control over his army and part of the northern territory to the insurgents.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has ordered an evacuation of all foreign nationals working for various U.N. relief agencies in Liberia.

In addition, the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization said between 160,000 and 200,000 Liberians had fled to neighboring nations of Guinea and another 67,000 to another neighbor, the Ivory Coast, after abandoning their villages because of increased fighting. The agency said there are at least 300,000 displaced persons inside Liberia.

The West African nation of some 2.5 million people is roughly the size of the state of Oregon. It sits on the coast of the Atlantic Ocean.

Liberia was founded around 1822 by U.S. black freedmen who settled there with the assistance of the American Colonization Society, a private organization dedicated to the African repatriation of freed slaves. It became a republic on July 26, 1847.

NEW YORK (JUNE 1) UPI - Stock prices were modestly higher in heavy trading early Friday after profit taking cut short an early rally tied to a surprisingly weak job report for May.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 1.90 Thursday, was up 9.99 to 2886.65 at 11 a.m. EDT.

Advances led declines 773-479 among the 1,781 issues crossing the NYSE tape.

Volume amounted to about 70,000,000 shares at 11 a.m., compared with 53,440,000 in the same period Thursday.

Stocks opened sharply higher, with the Dow industrials up more than 20 points at its high, after the government reported unexpectedly weak job statistics for May.

The jobless rate dipped to 5.3 percent but job growth of 164,000 was almost entirely due to the hiring of legions of temporary workers to canvass the country for the government's 1990 census.

Many economists predicted a jobless rate of 5.4 percent for the month but the economy was expected to have created 135,000 new jobs, excluding census workers.

The news sent the bond market on a tear, sparking speculation the Fed might loosen the reins on credit. In late morning trading the 30-year bond was up almost 2 points.

While stocks followed bonds in the early going, profit taking after the market's sharp gain Tuesday soon set in and prices fell from their highs.

On the trading floor, Varity was the most active issue, unchanged at 3 1/4.

Westinghouse followed, up 1/8 to 36 1/2. Moody's Investors Service confirmed the company's rating late Thursday after Westinghouse announced a 20 million share stock buyback. L.A. Gear was third, up 1/2 to 39 3/4 after sinking Thursday.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 1/8 at 43, IBM was up 1/4 to 120 1/8 in active trading, Merck was up 3/8 to 83 and Woolworth was up 1/2 to 33 7/8.

Prices were higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

I.C.H. Corp. led the Amex issues, up 1/4 to 4 1/4.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Retired Chief Justice Warren Burger, saying the law profession should ''hang its head in shame,'' criticized advertising by lawyers Friday and urged an attorneys group to determine whether regulation is needed.

''One of the most disturbing changes that have occurred in recent years is ... advertising by lawyers and law firms and the employment of a public relations firm to tout them,'' Burger said in a keynote speech at the sixth annual conference of the Inns of Court, a lawyers group created in 1980 and concerned with ethics and standards.

''A fringe of the profession ... seems bent on turning the practice of law into a trade or business like selling groceries, automobiles or real estate,'' Burger said. ''Because the law permits professionals to advertise in no sense means it is ... proper to do so.''

Burger called on the American Inns of Court members to assess advertising and other trends in the profession to decide which require regulation. He also questioned whether such practices should be regulated by Congress or by members of the profession.

Burger, who was appointed to the court by President Richard Nixon in 1969, criticized the conduct of prosecutors and defense attorneys who discuss their cases with news reporters.

''When a prosecutor speaks, his is the voice of the state,'' Burger said. ''The voice of the state in a criminal case should be heard only in the courtroom. Our profession is overdue in making it plain that a criminal charge is not to be tried on the courthouse steps by either side.

''We must constantly remind ourselves that the profession of law is a monopolyand that it is an article of faith in our country that monopolies must be regulated to protect the public interest.''

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 1) UPI - West German legislators Friday failed to settle differences on details of a draft treaty for economic, currency and social union with East Germany.

Authorities of the city-state of Hamburg had presented a compromise formula in a bid to get the Bundesrat, the council of federal states, to back the treaty, which needs to be ratified by both West German houses of Parliament.

But Hamburg officials failed Friday to obtain majority support for their proposal, which was intended to allay fears the Bundesrat may block the treaty when it comes up for final debate this month.

The two-thirds backing needed for parliamentary ratification of the document is only possible if the opposition Social Democratic Party gives supports the treaty, which is due to come into effect July 1.

Although some Social Democrats, including chancellery candidate Oskar Lafontaine, have strongly objected to the treaty, it is likely that the opposition party will eventually support the document in both houses.

Party members have said they supported the concept of economic union but wanted amendments or additions to the treaty to soften the blow that will be inflicted on East German workers once East Germany adopts the highly competitive West German economic system.

Under the treaty, East Germany will adopt West Germany's currency and its economic system, July 1, in what is seen as a crucial step toward full, political unification of the two states divided since World War II.

SEATTLE (JUNE 1) UPI - The treasures, traditions, and history of the world's last great imperialist city come alive in an unprecedented art exposition opening Saturday.

The centerpiece of an elaborate arts festival associated with the 1990 Goodwill Games, "Moscow: Treasures and Traditions" brings to the West for the first time artifacts and paintings culled from ten major Moscow museums, including many works that have not been available for viewing inside the Soviet Union in decades.

The exhibition illustrates more than five centuries of the inner life of Moscow, beginning with its medieval heritage, through its contacts with the West, influence by the New World, social reforms of the 1800s, socialist revolution of the 1900s and the East-West thaw under Gorbachev.

A press preview of the exhibit Thursday inside the Washington State Convention and Trade Center revealed an architecturally relevant space of murals, white columns and royal blue backgrounds carved out of an area to be used in the future for retail space. "We had the unique opportunity to design the space for the objects, which was nice," said C. David Hughbanks managing director of the exhibit.

The exhibit mesmerizes with golden vessels, jewel-encrusted artifacts, wardrobes of centuries past and inspired paintings of varying periods and themes, ranging from religion to realism, social reform to everyday life. The flow of objects in the galleries helps the viewer capture with an hour's stroll Moscow's grandeur through eight distinct historical periods.

As curator Donald R. McClellend describes in the exhibition catalog, "Moscow experienced many cycles of reviving its great breadth of traditions, to be enriched each time with an array of new influences.

"Certainly as we stand on the brink of this era of 'glasnost,' Moscow will once again see its heritage in a new light, and in the process help preserve the glories of its past as well as shape the challenges of the future."

The treasures begin with the medieval theme of "Honoring the Kingdom of Heaven," highlighted by a guilded cross donated by Czar Ivan the Terrible to the Orthodox Church following the fall of Constantinople, when Moscow considered itself "the third Rome."

They continue with "The World Beckons" from 1550-1690, when Moscow was still isolated from the West but began to have "new visions" influenced by the New World. "A New Capital, A New Age" chronicles the period during the reign of Peter the Great, an admirer of the West who thought the wooden village of old Moscow unbefitting of a capital and moved it to St. Petersburg.

"Once Again the Heart of the Nation" highlights the period from 1800-1860 when life in Moscow, once again the capital, took on the look, feel, and thought of Western Europe. It concludes with a glorification of soldiers, who ousted Napolean and drove him back to Paris after a fire started just as he occupied Moscow destroyed most of the the old city but spared the Kremlin.

Another period of Russian art runs from 1850-1903 in which the western ideals of classical beauty became irrelevent to the harshness of Russian life and art began to depict real life and serve the social interest of the people.

That is followed by "reaching for a new vision" in the years leading up to the 1917 communist revolution and art under the new Soviet society, including its new embrace of Western democracy and free enterprise under glasnost.

"This is an auspicious beginning to what should be a summer of good will," said Jay Gates of the Seattle Art Museum, which will benefit from $200,000 worth of donated cases and other equipment after the exhibit closes Sept. 30.

Gates noted that more and more cultural exchanges between East and West serve as a means of diplomacy and improving relations. "I don't think there's any question that the exposition accomplishes that," he said.

Irina Rodimtseva, director of the State Museums of the Moscow Kremlin, said the idea of the exposition is "to feel the spirit of Moscow, our Muskovite character, our Moscow good will. "When you feel the spirit, the history, and the emotion of these objects, you will better understand our city and want to come to Moscow."

Tickets for the exhibition are $7.50 for adults, $6.50 for seniors and students and $4.50 for children 3-12, and can be obtained by calling (206) 292-1990.

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (JUNE 1) UPI - The military took control of strife-torn southeastern Sind province Friday as the death toll from six days of ethnic violence climbed to more than 175 with six deaths reported Friday.

A curfew remained in force on Hyderabad for the fifth consecutive day and a curfew was also in effect in Karachi, Pakistan's largest city. Residents of both cities were given a two-hour break from their confinement to attend Friday prayers.

Troops remained stationed in both cities in an effort to restore order after violence that erupted Sunday when troops fired into a crowd of women protesting in Hyderabad. In Karachi vehicles with mounted guns patrolled the streets.

A brigadier general took over joint army and police operations and asked for a list of vacant houses in the various cities of the area, apparently to requisition them as army command and observation posts, authorities said.

The general also asked for a list of all people wanted in connection with killing, looting, arson and kidnapping, authorities said. And there were signs that additional military forces would be detailed to the civil administration's law enforcement efforts.

The latest moves to reassert governmental control over the province came one day after the Sind administration announced a series of tough new steps to put an end to the violence.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, a native of Sind, traveled to the province Wednesday and appealed for calm. The announcement by the provincial administration followed a lengthy meeting Thursday between Bhutto and the Sind chief minister.

Bhutto postponed an upcoming trip to four Middle Eastern countries Thursday, apparently because of the conflict in Sind province.

Another six people died Friday from the violence between natives of Sind province and ethnic Mohajirs, the descendants of people who immigrated to Pakistan from India at the time of partition in 1947.

Two of those who died were wounded Thursday night when snipers opened fire on a bus traveling between downtown Karachi and one of the suburbs, hospital sources said. The latest deaths brought the toll in the bus attack to 17 people killed and 33 wounded.

Another four people were slain in violence in two different districts of the city, police said. Family members of three people killed in the western district of Karachi said the government's paramilitary Rangers were responsible for the killings.

Police said they were slain by snipers.

More than 175 people have been killed this week in ethnic violence.

The latest round of violence was triggered last Sunday in Hyderabad, where security forces opened fire on a crowd of ethnic Mohajir women protesters, killing about 70 people. The encounter touched off a series of revenge attacks.

(JUNE 1) UPI - In Tokyo, a government spokesman says Japan will study a U-S request to contribute up to two-BILLION dollars for an eight-BILLION-dollar project to build a superconducting supercollider in Texas. A U-S delegation led by Deputy Secretary of Energy Henson Moore has been in Tokyo since Tuesday, conferring with Japanese officials on Japan's participation in the plan.

The government of France says it's withdrawing some of its troops from Gabon following an improvement in security conditions in the troubled West African nation. French Foreign Minister Dumas also said that France played a role in initiating talks that opened yesterday between President Omar Bongo's government and opposition leaders.

Hand-sewn clothes belonging to sharp-dressing American statesman Daniel Webster were stolen from the museum at his former law office, according to officials in Marshfield, Massachusetts. Officials say a cape, coat and vest belonging to the 19th-century orator are beyond price. Webster moved to Marshfield in 1832 and lived there until his death in 1852 at the age of 70.

Talk about civic responsibility. A 34-year-old man hurrying to jury duty did NOT stop to fish hundreds of five and 20-dollar bills as they floated down the Miami River. Miami police say it's a good thing Carlos Rangel decided to report his find to a Dade County bailiff. The money... all 20-thousand dollars' worth... was bogus. Said one official- ''It's great we do have citizens in Dade County that are honest and are willing to become involved.''

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 1) UPI - The government presented legislation to Parliament Friday intended to scrap a 37-year-old law segregating buses, trains, toilets, libraries, swimming pools and other public amenities.

The bill, which was proposed by President Frederik de Klerk in November when he outlawed segregated beaches, rescinds all discriminatory legislation dealing with separate public amenities for blacks and whites and would take effect on Oct. 15.

It was referred to committee for study but is expected to be approved soon. Only the right-wing Conservative Party is certain to oppose the bill branding it the first step toward forced integration in the racially divided country.

The National Party, which has ruled the country since 1948 on a platform to protect minority white interests, introduced the Reservation of Separate Amenities Act in 1953 partly in response to a defiance campaign led by black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela.

Then a partner in the first black law firm in Johannesburg and a member of the African National Congress' youth wing, Mandela sent groups of blacks into ''European Only'' entrances to railway stations and whites-only counters at post offices.

After losing several court cases that ruled segregrated facilities must at least be equal, the ''Grand Apartheid'' government of Hendrik Verwoerd passed the act specifically stating separate amenities did not have to be equal.

A defiance campaign similar to the 1952 protest was held across South Africa in the run-up to last September's parliamentary elections that returned the National Party to power. Blacks entered whites-only hospitals for treatment, boarded whites-only buses and went swimming in whites-only pools.

A memorandum attached to the Friday's bill submitted in the segregated Parliament in Cape Town declares the legislation's intention to scrap all laws which ''authorize differentiation between persons on a racial basis in relation to public amenities.''

In recent years, many public facilities have been desegegrated, including hotels, municipal parks, movie theaters, and bus and train services, yet the legislation will begin to give substance to De Klerk's pledges to abolish apartheid.

It specificially targets the Reservation of Separate Amenities Act of 1953 and provisions of other laws, including a section of the contentious Group Areas Act of 1950 governing residential segregation that applies to nightclubs and restaurants.

It also amends sections of the Road Transportation Act segregating public transport.

''At the commencement of the Act all public amenities under the control of local authorities and the provincial administrations will be open to all persons irrespective of race or color,'' said an announcement by the Ministry of Planning and Provincial Affairs.

''It is the responsibility of local authorities to anticipate situations where difficulties may arise and to provide for adequate law enforcement, especially during peak times,'' it said.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 1) UPI - Prominent Palestinians declared a boycott of all contacts with U.S. officials and harshly condemned the United States Friday for vetoing a U.N. mission to the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

More than 35 Palestinians ended a 13-day hunger strike to demand U.N. observers in the occupied territories, charging their cause had been undermined by the United States.

On Thursday, the United States vetoed a U.N. Security Council proposal to send a three-member team to the territories to devise measures to protect the Palestinian population. The 14 other council members voted in favor the resolution put forward by Arab states.

''What the United States did yesterday in the Security Council, it was a shock, a slap to all those people who believe in peace in this area,'' said Faisal Husseini, the prominent pro-PLO activist in the territories.

Israel reacted favorably to the U.S. action. Foreign Minister Moshe Arens in an interview with Israel Radio criticized the Western European nations for taking a position contrary to Israel's.

''Nevertheless, I think we can all be pleased that at the U.N Security Council, the United States vetoed the resolution that was presented,'' he said.

Husseini told a crowded news conference in an East Jerusalem hotel that the U.S. action had put another osbtacle in the way of the peace process.

''Instead of helping the people here under occupation, to protect the people here under occupation, they simply stopped the whole peace process '' he said.

U.N. diplomats said the U.S. veto reflected a toughening of the American position following the foiled attempt by Palestinian guerrillas to attack the Israeli coast Wednesday.

In a statement read at the news conference, the Palestinian activists announced they were severing contacts with U.S. officials.

''We declare our boycott, our refusal to conduct any official contacts with the American consulate, with any American representative and emissary and our refusal to accept any invitations from the American consul,'' it said.

Asked if he advocated breaking off the dialogue between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the United States, Husseini said it was a question for the PLO to consider.

Deriding the ''arrogance, the obstinancy'' of the Bush administration, the activists blamed the United States for destroying the international consensus in favor of dispatching the U.N. team to the territories, an arrangement Israel said it would not accept.

''This veto expresses the real nature of the American position, which is hostile to the cause of our people in particular ... and to human rights and international peace in general,'' the statement said.

They also said the veto ''affirms the American administration's loss of credibility as a great power and is an indication of its unfitness to have any responsible role in the peace process.''

Israel mounted a major diplomatic campaign to scuttle the proposal to send U.N. observers. The United States first opposed the idea at a special May 24-26 session of the Security Council in Geneva at which PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat spoke. The United States indicated it preferred sending an envoy of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The Palestinians began the hunger strike on May 20, the day seven Arab workers were killed by an Israeli dressed as a soldier south of Tel Aviv. At least 14 Palestinians were killed and hundreds wounded in the rioting that followed.

Several activists were hospitalized during their hunger strike outside the offices of the International Red Cross in East Jerusalem. At the news conference, Abed Abu Diab, an official with the Jerusalem Electric Co., collapsed and was treated by a doctor in a corner of the hot, crowded room.

After the news conference, Husseini and most of the hunger strikers walked through East Jerusalem to the Old City to pray at the Al Aksa Mosque or Church of the Holy Sepulchre. Police did not intervene.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - New construction spending fell 0.7 percent in April to $432.4 billion on a decline in the building of private housing, public schools and highways, the Commerce Department said Friday.

Private analysts expected a 1 percent decrease in construction activity. Housing and commercial real estate markets are overbuilt from New England to the nation's capital and in the West.

''The report is further evidence the construction sector is quite weak,'' said Lynn Reaser, senior economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

The rate of construction spending for March stood at a revised $435.6 billion, after climbing to a revised $438.5 billion in February from $425 billion in January, according to the department's Census Bureau.

In December, construction spending totaled $415.1 billion.

During April, private construction remained unchanged at $344.8 billion while public construction slipped to $87.6 billion from $90.8 billion, a nearly 4 percent plunge, the government said.

All the figures were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors, such as the weather, and were calculated at an annual rate.

''The declines were significant in residential building and public construction,'' Reaser said. ''Non-residential building was fairly flat. The major weakness, as one might expect, was in offices and hotels.''

Work on new single family homes as well as small apartment buildings decreased during April while work on larger apartment complexes increased for the month, the Commerce Department said.

Private industrial construction also increased in April, but public highway and street spending was off dramatically as was construction spending on public schools and water and sewer systems, the department said.

Work on military installations also dropped off in April.

Construction spending has been sluggish for most of the year, despite a surge in activity during January's unexpected warm spell. In another report Friday, the Labor Department said construction hiring, for example, was below normal in May.

Nonetheless, some economists are looking for signs of a turnaround.

''Longer term, the slower pace of construction spending seems to be moderating suggesting the possibility a bottom at hand - but do not expect a rebound anytime soon,'' analysts at Mitsubishi Bank in New York said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - China bought 99,500 metric tons of soft red winter wheat at subsidized prices from U.S. exporters in its first purchase of the new marketing year, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The wheat was worth about $12.2 million, based on prices in Kansas City, Mo. There are 36.7 bushels of wheat in a metric ton of 2,204.6 pounds, so the transaction called for delivery of 3.65 million bushels during September.

In a related announcement, the government said Saudi Arabia bought 255,000 tons of barley at discount prices through the Export Enhancement Program, the major U.S. export subsidy program.

Beijing bought its wheat on the opening day of the new wheat marketing year. Although it was the first purchase of the year, China already had ordered 1.44 million tons for delivery in the new year.

In the marketing year that just ended, China bought 5.68 million tons of U.S. wheat, or about 42 percent of all its imported wheat. The department has estimated China will import 13.5 million tons during 1990-1991.

Despite being one of the leading wheat importers in the world, China also is one of the major wheat producers. It harvested 91 million tons of the grain last year, compared to the damage-shortened U.S. crop of 55.4 million tons. Chinese farmers are projected to harvest 93 million tons of wheat this season.

In the latest purchase, China bought its wheat through the EEP, which gives U.S. exporters bonus amounts of surplus commodities if they lower their prices to make a sale to a targeted country. Two firms were given subsidies worth 36.7 cents a bushel for the sale.

China has the option to buy an additional 1.5 million tons of wheat at discount prices.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev accused Israel Friday of trying to provoke conflict by its settlement policies and urged the United States to work more closely with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

During a wide-ranging, unstructured discussion with a group of congressional leaders at the Soviet Embassy, Gorbchev described current Arab-Israeli tensions as difficult to resolve and said, ''I do not see any other way (to find a solution) than to internationalize the process.

''If we are to begin with internationalizing the process we will be able to restore diplomatic relations with Israel.''

He continued, ''We are ready to be with you the guarantors of independence and security for the Israeli state - of all Middle Eastern states, including Israel.''

Some of the current difficulties, he said, are the result ''of certain actions of the Israeli government'' - including how Israel is handling the flow of Jews now being allowed to leave the Soviet Union, now at the rate of more than 10,000 people per month.

''People are leaving and they (the Israelis) settle them in occupied territories, provoking clashes,'' Gorbachev said. ''They are provoking a problem between us and the Arabs. The Arab presidents are remonstrating with us.

''This is something that I think the Israelis are doing on purpose in order to make a solution very difficult.''

The Israeli government has said that less than 1 percent of the immigrants are being settled in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. But, by American calculations, which include the expanded and annexed city of Jerusalem, about 10 percent of the new immigrants are settling in occupied areas.

Gorbachev said he feels the United States would really like to establish a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization and Arafat.

Gorbachev continued, ''Let me tell you about Arafat. I think he is the person with whom you can work for a settlement.

''He has the kind of attitude that makes that possible and if you are able to work with him, to apply some influence, I think he may evolve even further.''

Gorbachev said he would discuss his ideas on the Middle East with President Bush in their summit talks Friday and Saturday.

The State Department and the White House expressed ''serious concern'' Wednesday and Thursday over an attempted attack by Arab gunmen on a beach near Tel Aviv, which Israel charged was carried out by a PLO group.

Arafat, in Baghdad, denied Thursday the group was acting under PLO direction.

(JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev have agreed to put aside the thorny of a unified Germany's alliance for now. This morning, Gorbachev talks with congressional leaders before resuming meetings with Bush on U-S-Soviet trade. A published New York report says Bush will O-K a trade pact with the proviso that the Soviet Union lift its ban on emigration and lighten up on Lithuania.

The government says the nation's jobless rate dipped to five-point-three percent in May, nudged down by temporary workers hired to do the U-S Census. Some analysts had predicted a higher jobless rate, but the temporary Census jobs sent it down one-tenth of one percent. About 164-thousand jobs were added to non-farm payrolls, including 147-thousand temporary posts at the U-S Census Bureau. The report shows private payrolls were little changed, as factories continue to eliminate jobs.

Americans are being urged to leave Liberia and six Navy ships were ordered to the coast of the West African nation to help with the evacuation. The State Department ordered non-essential government workers and the dependents of U-S government personnel to leave. Liberia has been in the throes of civil war for six months. Rebel leader Charles Taylor told U-P-I this week that his fighters are on the verge of capturing the airport in the capital at Monrovia.

Boston fire officials say an investigation determined both men are white and would NOT have been hired if they had been on the non-minority list of applicants.

Actors Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn were among the guests at last night's White House state dinner. KATMANDU, NEPAL (JUNE 1) UPI - Rep. Stephan Solarz, D-N.Y., on the last leg of an Asian tour, Friday hailed Nepal's successful pro-democracy movement as ''a miracle'' and pledged to find ways the United States can assist the transition.

''The American people greatly admire the establishment of multi-party democracy,'' the chairman of the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs said upon arriving in Katmandu from New Delhi.

''What happened in Nepal in such a brief period is a miracle,'' he said.

Nepal's pro-democracy movement ended after two months in April when King Birendra relented in the face of violent strikes and protests and lifted a 29-year ban on opposition political parties.

''I want to see how the effort to establish an enduring democracy in Nepal is proceeding and what the United States can contribute to the consolidation of democracy made in the last few months,'' Solarz said.

During his nine-hour visit, Solarz met with Birendra, who discussed developments within the kingdom with a foreign politician for the first time since the pro-democracy protests began Feb. 18.

''For someone who has just lost most of his power, the king seems to be remarkably comfortable with the change of his position and status,'' the congressman said after the talks.

''I sense a very great commitment on his part to institutionalize his position to play a constitutional role in the establishment of a democratic political system in Nepal,'' he said.

Before concluding a weeklong tour that took him to Pakistan and India, Solarz met with Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai and Ganesh Man Singh, supreme leader of the Nepali Congress Party and symbol of the pro-democracy movement, along with Communist Party members and former government leaders.

''Great strides have been made towards a genuine development of democracy in Nepal,'' he said after the meetings. ''I am very pleased by the spirit of cooperation amongst those involved in this process.''

Recalling his visit six months earlier, Solarz said, ''Then the prospects (of success) appeared somewhat problematic.''

Solarz said that during his just-concluded visit to India, he discussed New Delhi's 15-month-old policy of trade and transit sanctions against its land-locked neighbor.

''Nothing will please me more than an agreement between India and Nepal'' to resolve the embargo, he said. ''I have a strong impression that the issue can and will be resolved in the near future.''

BEIJING (JUNE 1) UPI - Chinese authorities Friday praised last year's military crackdown on the democracy movement and told thousands of schoolchildren they owe their right to assemble in Tiananmen Square to the valor of the army.

The comments came during International Children's Day celebrations held in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, the heart of massive student-led democracy protests crushed by the army last June 3-4.

As the anniversary of the crackdown approached, the northern half of the square encompassing the central martyr's monument was cordoned off Friday for organized children's activities.

The sensitive area was to remain closed to the public ''these few days'' except to those with special passes, according to one of the scores of paramilitary guards standing guard at the entrances to the square.

''A year ago today, Tiananmen Square was covered by black clouds,'' said Beijing Communist Youth League leader Qiang Wei in an apparent reference to huge demonstrations and a three-week student occupation of the square last spring.

Qiang was addressing several thousand Chinese children standing in formation on the square.

''A few who wanted to convert China to capitalism carried out activities here and deprived you of your right to celebrate your festival,'' he said in a speech broadcast on state television.

''It is the brave People's Liberation Army who ... quelled the turmoil and counterrevolutionary rebellion and took back the square. This makes it possible to celebrate here,'' Qiang told the children.

Communist Party head Jiang Zemin, Chinese Premier Li Peng and other senior officials were shown attending the ceremonies. All sported the red scarves of the Young Pioneers, the party's youth branch.

The nightly news broadcast featured children singing, dancing, and goose-stepping in formation in organized activities in Beijing and other cities around the country.

Some residents of Beijing, where resentment of the hard-line government runs deep, derided Friday's lavish celebrations in the square.

''It's disgusting. People aren't that stupid,'' an intellectual said of the strategically timed activities.

Last year's Children's Day celebrations in Beijing were carried out on a subdued scale, overshadowed by a 6-week-old democracy movement that began on college campuses and spread nationwide.

Thousands of students occupying Tiananmen Square allowed children to mount the plaza's monument to the people's heroes to have their photographs taken and receive official certificates commemorating the occasion.

Many children took time to pose for their camera-snapping parents beside a 30-foot-high ''Goddess of Democracy'' statue erected by students directly opposite a huge portrait of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

VATICAN CITY (JUNE 1) UPI - The Dalai Lama, exiled spiritual and temporal leader of the Tibetan people, discussed world peace and other ''important problems of humanity'' with Pope John Paul II Friday during a private audience, the Vatican announced.

The 54-year-old Buddhist leader, in exile from his China-occupied country since 1959, has been in Italy since May 24, seeking support for his people. He has already visited Venice, Milan, Florence and Siena, meeting religious leaders and addressing public meetings on the situation in Tibet.

A brief Vatican statement issued after his audience with the pope did not specifically say whether they discussed the situation in Tibet, where China on May 1 lifted martial law imposed a year ago to crush pro-independence protests and anti-Chinese rioting.

''As on previous occasions,'' the Vatican statement said, ''it was a meeting of religious character on some of the most important problems of humanity today, such as peace in the world and religious life as a way of achieving it.

''Today's visit comes within the context of relations which the Holy See has habitually with personalities of all the religions of the world,'' it said.

In his addresses at public meetings and in news conferences during his Italian visit, the dalai lama, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1989, has spoken out strongly against the Chinese occupation of his country.

''Very little is spoken of Tibet and the world often is not aware of the drama of our people, about 6 million people who today face the risk of extinction,'' he told a Milan news conference on Monday.

''Strong international pressure is needed to help Tibet,'' he said. ''Two things are extremely serious at present: the incredible violations of human rights and the massive influx of Chinese citizens to Tibet - about 7 million of them.

HUDSON, N.Y. (JUNE 1) UPI - Boxer Mike Tyson's $85,000 gold Mercedes Benz has been impounded, and the car could be put up for auction at the end of the month.

The Albany Times Union reported Friday that the car, a 1990 500 SL convertible complete with car phone, leather interior, sweatshirt and sneakers, was impounded by Hudson police.

Patrolman Paul Kisselbrack pulled the car over May 2 for not having license plates or a registration sticker.

The driver, Isadore Philip Bolton of Los Angeles, told Kisselbrack he had just used the car to bring Tyson's girlfriend to a hospital to give birth. Bolton received two tickets and the car was impounded.

Now, the gold Mercedes sits in Hudson Police Sgt. Eugene Shetsky's impound lot, in the company of less distinguished vehicles.

''It's certainly the cream of the crop,'' Shetsky told the newspaper. ''The nearest thing we have to it would be the 1983 Alliance. There are a lot of other things to think about than an $85,000 car. I just don't like it laying around.''

Shetsky mailed letters to Tyson's New York office and to his attorney Thursday, notifying the fighter he had 10 days to claim the car or it would become city property.

Should Tyson fail to claim the car, it could become the property of almost anyone. The Hudson impound lot is getting full, and an auction is possible at the end of June, the sergeant said.

If the car is auctioned, Tyson would have a year to claim proceeds from the sale, but not the car itself. Shetsky said he expects Tyson to claim the car.

''We all know Mike,'' he said. ''He's not going to leave it here.''

Tyson, who lost his heavyweight title to Buster Douglas in February, is scheduled to fight Henry Tillman in Las Vegas, Nev., June 16.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Attention focused Friday on whether President Bush's concerns about Soviet economic sancations against Lithuania would prevent the signing of a completed landmark U.S.-Soviet trade agreement.

As Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev began a second day of meetings, the uncertain fate of Lithuania's drive for independence clouded prospects for the trade pact, which the Soviets strongly desire to help their economy.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the fate of the agreement, once touted as a centerpiece of the second Bush-Gorbachev summit, remained unclear as it was discussed on Thursday by Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

The New York Times, citing senior American officials, reported Friday there was a good chance the pact would be signed, but that a waiver required to put it into effect would not be sent to Congress until the administration was satisfied on emigration and on the situation in Lithuania and its Baltic neighbors.

Gorbachev, in a meeting with congressional leaders Friday at the Soviet Embassy, said he would not ''beg for anything'' in a trade agreement with the United States nor tolerate a great deal of outside interference.

''Certainly, we're not asking for a free ride. We'll be asking for normal credits,'' Gorbachev said. ''For us it would be humiliating if we were to beg for something from you and, of course, hopeless.

Many of the lawmakers who met with Gorbachev have expressed concern over Soviet economic sanctions imposed on Lithuania, and there is a good chance that any U.S.-Soviet trade pact would encounter serious difficulties on Capitol Hill as long as the Baltic situation is unresolved.

Gorbachev said a ''favorable gesture'' from Congress would ''be very helpful mostly, I would say, politically, because of course even if the (most-favored-nation trade status) is adopted it is not going to be very soon that things will begin to move because really the trade relationship now between us is very primitive.''

There is considerable room for growth in U.S.-Soviet trade. Last year, trade between the countries totaled about $5.6 billion, up from $3.5 billion the year before, but still a mere fraction of U.S. trade with other nations.

''It's obvious we still have quite a ways to go in trying to develop a better trade relationship with Russia,'' said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

The pact would help the Soviet Union receive the lowest available tariffs in the United States. This, in turn, could entice U.S. and other foreign companies to establish manufacturing joint ventures with Soviet concerns.

The agreement also would lead to the removal of long-standing restrictions making the Soviets eligible for U.S. credit and guarantee programs provided by the Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corp.

The United States won concessions on taxes and investments to aid U.S. businesses trading with the Soviets, software copyright protection and a promise by the Soviets to begin repaying $674 million in debt from the lend-lease program of World War II.

The agreement's fate has been clouded by the Soviet's economic sanctions against Lithuania and the failure to pass a law easing emigration restrictions.

The 1974 Trade Act requires a number of conditions be met before a country is granted most-favored-nation trading status, which allows countries to receive the lowest possible tariffs. Among the requirements is the Jackson-Vanick amendment that demands that nations allow the free emigration of citizens.

Trade experts said the agreement could be signed by both presidents, which would give Gorbachev a valuable political symbol to take home. But the agreement, alone would not trigger the favorable tariffs.

The Jackson-Vanick amendment contains a complicated congressional review process that allows a waiver to be vetoed by either the House or Senate, said Robert Cullen, editor of the newsletter Soviet-American Trade.

Also, a waiver of the amendment does not automatically give most-favored-nation status. That's where the trade agreement comes in. If the waiver is granted, both countries would either have to return to the 1972 trade agreement, which was never signed, or negotiate a new pact, which they have completed except for the signatures of Bush and Gorbachev.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Signaling a growing confidence in the strength of the U.S. oil and gas industry, investors in May lined up to buy stock in Global Marine Inc., a Houston, Texas, contract drilling outfit.

The stock will be available June 4, when Global's largest shareholder, Banque Francaise du Commerce Exterieur, will sell its 13.3 percent stake to Global Marine's underwriters, according to an agreement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission May 25.

The underwriters, Salomon Brothers Inc. and Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs Inc., have already found new buyers for all 13.4 million shares. In fact, the private placement was oversubscribed by a three to one ratio.

Only a year ago, underwriters would have been fortunate to resell any of the stock. Global Marine was just emerging from bankruptcy at that time, and the domestic oil and gas exploration industry was still mired in a decline that had begun in the mid-1980s.

But analysts say some investors think the oil and gas industry will recover, a turnaround they say Global Marine is ready to exploit.

''If you believe that there is a great need for more development of oil and gas, Global Marine is the company with the newest and most modern rig fleet,'' says Joe Messina, a senior analyst for Moody's Investor Services in New York.

''If you believe there will be drilling in the future, Global Marine is the company you would look to to take advantage of that.''

Messina says that the replacement value of Global's rig fleet is much higher than the company's actual book value, which makes the stock a better investment.

Heavy borrowing to bolster that fleet during the oil boom of the early 1980s helped bankrupt the company several years later, when the oil industry ''headed south,'' says Alex Krezel, Global's assistant general counsel.

Messina says the company still has ''some issues to be addressed'' before it returns to full financial health. But he does believe the company's performance could well improve in the future.

Much of that improvement will hinge on the willingness of domestic oil companies to invest in oil and gas exploration. Increased exploration leads to more drilling business for Global, allowing the company to increase its drilling rates and better utilize its fleet of rigs.

There are signs that such an expansion is now occuring. Global's rig utilization, which averaged only 63 percent in 1988, increased to 70 percent in 1989. The figure jumped to 97 percent for the first quarter of 1990.

Global's fleet of 27 rigs represents one of the largest in the industry.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - China bought 99,500 metric tons of soft red winter wheat at subsidized prices from U.S. exporters in its first purchase of the new marketing year, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The wheat was worth about $12.2 million, based on prices in Kansas City, Mo. There are 36.7 bushels of wheat in a metric ton of 2,204.6 pounds, so the transaction called for delivery of 3.65 million bushels during September.

In a related announcement, the government said Saudi Arabia bought 255,000 tons of barley at discount prices through the Export Enhancement Program, the major U.S. export subsidy program.

Beijing bought its wheat on the opening day of the new wheat marketing year. Although it was the first purchase of the year, China already had ordered 1.44 million tons for delivery in the new year.

In the marketing year that just ended, China bought 5.68 million tons of U.S. wheat, or about 42 percent of all its imported wheat. The department has estimated China will import 13.5 million tons during 1990-1991.

Despite being one of the leading wheat importers in the world, China also is one of the major wheat producers. It harvested 91 million tons of the grain last year, compared with the damage-shortened U.S. crop of 55.4 million tons. Chinese farmers are projected to harvest 93 million tons of wheat this season.

In the latest purchase, China bought its wheat through the EEP, which gives U.S. exporters bonus amounts of surplus commodities if they lower their prices to make a sale to a targeted country. Two firms were given subsidies worth 36.7 cents a bushel for the sale.

China has the option to buy an additional 1.5 million tons of wheat at discount prices.

LONDON (JUNE 1) UPI - The Isle of Wight ordered to court Friday 3,800 people who have not paid their poll taxes, touching off a protest on the southern island to the first legal crackdown on reluctant taxpayers in England.

About 1,800 of the 3,800 people who were cited paid their $570 local tax by Thursday night, and many more arrived at court with money in hand.

Defiance was voiced, however.

About 200 people gathered outside the court to register their opposition to the tax, chanting, ''We won't pay the poll tax!''

David Icke, spokesman for the Green Party and a sportscaster, has refused to pay the poll tax.

''It is amazing, you know, that if you stand up against unjust laws in places like Poland, and Eastern Europe and China, then the system in this country sees you as a hero. You stand up against unjust laws in this country, then you are a villain.''

Steve Nally, secretary of the All-Britain Anti-Poll Tax Federation, condemned the levy.

''We think it's a very barbaric act for the Medina Council to be taking people to court for no other reason than they cannot afford to pay the poll tax. We think it is barbaric to intimidate, and harass and frighten pensioners, the sick, the disabled, the low paid and the families who live on the Isle of Wight.''

Nally vowed to disrupt courts in defiance of the law. ''We will help clog up the court system,'' he said.

Roads around the court were closed, causing traffic delays and forcing buses to reroute. Extra police were dispatched to the Isle of Wight from the mainland.

''We obviously didn't realize that we were the first in the country when we issued the summonses,'' said Medina Council Treasurer Peter Greenwood. ''Maybe we misjudged it, but we'll give it our best shot.''

Opposition to the poll tax has been widespread because it requires the rich and the poor to pay the same amount. It was imposed in England and Wales April 1, and in Scotland last year, to replace property taxes to pay for local services.

Riots have occurred throughout England to protest the tax, the largest of which occurred two months ago in London's West End.

KUALA LUMPUR (JUNE 1) UPI - Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad Friday said Western liberals have turned into ''high priests of democracy'' who use sanctions, trade restrictions and vicious campaigns to force their standards on struggling nations.

''There is fear that democracy has become the kind of religion that communism became,'' Mahathir told the inaugural summit of the Group of 15 on South-South Consultation and Cooperation.

The G-15, comprising Algeria, Argentina, Brazil, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Mexico, Nigeria, Peru, Senegal, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zimbabwe and Malaysia, was formed at the Non-Aligned Summit in Belgrade in September to explore trade and economic opportunities for the Third World.

Mahathir, chairman of the three-day conference, blamed the North, orindustrialized world, for the staggering debt problems of the developing nations, or the South.

He contended the fiscal woes could not be due to South-South interaction since ''we have very little to do with each other.''

With the external debt of the G-15 countries amounting to $600 billion of the $1.3 trillion total for all developing nations last year, Mahathir called on the lenders to devise workable solutions ''and, if all else fails, to accept losses.''

''You cannot tell a people to live at subsistence levels until they pay off their debts,'' Mahathir said.

''Liberal democrats in the West have now set themselves up as the high priests of democracy,'' Mahathir charged. ''There is a holier-than-thou attitude about them.''

Senegal President Abdou Diouf urged the G-15 members to talk less and initiate more joint efforts for economic advancement.

Noting cooperation in the South was non-existent in the past, Abdou said it was up to the current leaders to change the situation.

''We have to look for measures for more consistent results and set the guide for all developing countries,'' he said.

Echoing Mahathir's sentiments, Abdou said, ''The current international economic situation is not favorable for the Third World and the gap between the North and South is getting wider.''

''While welcoming the democratic reforms in Eastern Europe, the easing of the Cold War and the impending reunification of West and East Germany, Mahathir said, ''The simple fact is that most of our problems arise from our relations with the North.''

He said, ''For the liberal democrats, chaos, instability and retarded economic growth with the accompanying massive and debilitating poverty among their converts are a small price for these people to pay for the liberalism of democracy.

''Murder and assassinations of citizens are regarded as much more acceptable than any governmental action to prevent violence and instability,'' Mahathir said. ''Sanctions and trade restrictions and vicious campaigns that impoverish the already poor are the weapons they use to force their liberal democratic ideas on those they deem not measuring up to their standards.''

By threatening the exports of developing countries, democratic norms are foisted on them, Mahathir charged. ''Like imperialism in the past, the subject nations languish and suffer without any means of redress.''

Fearful of a general decline in Western aid to the South in the rush to rehabilitate Eastern Europe's crumbling economies, Mahathir and other summit officials said it was time for the South to initiate its own solutions.

''We are not self-appointed arbitrators and regulators of the world's economic affairs, neither are we conspirators against the North,'' Mahathir said.

He expressed hope that G-15 would foster a dialogue with the North, ''the absence of which has caused the economic gap between North and South to widen further.''

Prime Minister Guillermo Larco-Cox of Peru said he would ask the summit to revive the dialogue with the Group of Seven industrialized countries - to solve problems.

Noting the last dialogue was six years ago, Larco-Cox said, ''It is time we revived it.''

Beside economic doldrums, President Rorbet Mugabe of Zimbabwe said the summit would consider developments in South Africa and Palestine.

Julias K. Nyerere of Tanzania, chairman of the South Commission and the new group's main architect, urged the delegates to consider actions ''through which underdeveloped countries could reduce their economic and cultural dependence'' on the developed ones.

The former Tanzanian president stressed the need for collective self-reliance among the countries of the South to combate increasing protectionism in the North and to counter the threat posed by the unification of Europe in 1992 and the free-trade pact between the United States and Canada.

Distributing to the delegates the commission's office report on Third World problems, Nyerere urged the fledgling organization to establish a secretariat for the South to enhance cooperation and solidarity.

COCOA, FL (JUNE 1) UPI - The American Civil Liberties Union and parents of sixth graders punished for drawing mustaches, horns and tails on yearbook pictures have lodged complaints with school officials over the disciplinary action.

''The kids, they paid their money. ... I don't think they can tell them what to write in it,'' said Louanne Rippon, the mother of one sixth grader who was punished. ''I feel like that's a violation of their constitutional rights.''

At least six sixth graders at Fairglen Elementary School were disciplined for writing or drawing in their $4 yearbooks, Rippon said.

Parents complained to school officials and notified ACLU attorney Jim Hooper, who raised objections in a letter to Brevard County school officials.

School officials did not return phone calls on Friday.

The books were distributed on May 31, and late in the day, school officials told children not to deface them.

Rippon said that by then, students, including her son, Scott, 12, had already drawn pictures, including horns and a tail, on the photograph of at least one schoolmate.

School officials tried to confiscate the books and replace them with new copies, Rippon said.

Principal Lorena Ruiz initially said the children had no right to deface yearbooks when it was forbidden.

''I said, 'All kids write in their yearbooks. All kids deface their yearbooks,''' Rippon said. ''I drew in my yearbook when I was a kid.''

''One boy put horns on a teacher. Another boy drew an arrow through the assistant principal's head,'' Rippon said.

The students were forced to miss a faculty-student softball game and eat lunch in the principal's office for a week, Rippon said.

''Whether it's an infringement of their rights or not I don't think they should be punished for something they did before they were told not to,'' she said.

LONDON (JUNE 1) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly higher Friday in moderate trading on the London International stock exchange boosted by a flurry of takeover speculation in the brewery sector.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which eased 1.1 points Thursday, catapulted 26.3 points to 2,371.4.

For the week, the key index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, rocketed 105.8 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average surged 27.4 points to 1,882.4 and climbed 86.3 points for the four day week.

Volume amounted to around 499 million shares compared with 466 million shares shares changing hands on Thursday.

Analysts said strong rumors which prompted heavy buying in the brewery sector coupled with the advance in New York, boosted equities.

The unconfirmed rumor of a forthcoming bid from Europe surrounded Allied Lyons, one of Britain's largest producers of a wide range of alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks and owners of large number of restaurants and hotels.

Allied Lyons climbed 36 cents to $7.96 on the speculation.

Analysts said that a stock shortage in the brewery sector may have also accounted for some price rises in other brewery stocks.

Rank Organization, the communications and entertainment group, fell 27 cents to $12.65 after launching an estimated $855 million takeover bid, by offering new Rank shares for Mecca Leisure PLC shares.

Mecca Leisure gained 8 cents to $1.43 after rejecting the takeover bid.

Cadbury Schweppes gained 11 cents to $5.56.

Recent restructuring lifted Polly Peck 9 cents to $6.89 and British Aerospace gained 14 cents to $8.78 following news of an Iberia Airlines order for eight airbuses.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed higher in moderate trading boosted by stocks of large chemical companies and blue-chips issues.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which gained 4.27 points Thursday, added another 12.14 points to 1,856.95 and gained 33.78 points overall for the week.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 1) UPI - Former Agriculture Secretary John Block called on the United States Friday to confer most-favored-nation trading status on the Soviet Union as soon as possible.

Four former agriculture secretaries and 26 U.S. farm groups and corporations joined Block in issuing the statement.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators have completed work on a trade pact, but it remained to be seen whether President Bush's concerns over Moscow's economic sanctions against Lithuania would prevent its signing at the summit in Washington.

''The Soviet Union is our third largest agricultural customer. It presents an important market and tremendous potential for the future, not only in sales of agricultural products, but in transfers of know-how and expertise '' said Block, who was in President Ronald Reagan's Cabinet.

''To achieve this potential, however, we simply must place our economic relationship on a more consistent footing,'' Block said. ''It is clear that economic development and market-based reforms are in the best interests of both the United States and the Soviet Union.''

The statement said that ''an important part of that agreement would be most-favored-nation status for the Soviets, giving the Soviets the same access to our market as enjoyed by most of our trading partners.''

''While MFN will not solve the Soviet Union's economic problems, it would help to build a relationship that all sides can count on for the long term and be a basis for bringing the Soviet Union more fully into the world trading system,'' it said.

Signing the agreement along with Block, who is chairman of the National Agricultural Advisory Committee of the Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs, were former agriculture secretaries Orville Freeman, Earl Butz, Bob Bergland and Richard Lyng.

Many of those invited to meet with Gorbachev when he visits Minnesota Sunday are members of the NAAC. The citizens network is a nonprofit, bipartisan organization dedicated to public education and public policy that addresses the growing importance of our international relationships.

The NAAC is a focal point for the nation's agricultural leaders to communicate their views to foreign policymakers.

NEW YORK (JUNE 1) UPI - Former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos, who collapsed at her racketeering trial, was reported Friday in stable condition with hopes she might be able to leave the hospital this weekend.

Marcos fainted face down on the witness table Thursday. She had to be carried from the courtroom on a stretcher, suffering from stomach pains and bleeding from the mouth.

''Mrs. Marcos condition is much improved and she has stabilized,'' said Margaret Moore, a spokeswoman for New York Hospital.

''The abominal pain is no longer present and if she remains stabilized her doctors will probably allow her to go home Sunday in care of her personal physician who stays with her,'' she said.

Marcos, 60, wearing an oxygen mask, her face pale and eyes closed, was carriedinto an ambulance Thursday morning and taken from U.S. District Court in lower Manhattan to New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Doctors diagnosed her as suffering from a severe inflammation of the stomach lining - a condition that is not life-threatening - and said that Marcos would be hospitalized for ''several days.''

She was in stable condition early Friday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

It was the third time Marcos, who suffers from high blood pressure, has collapsed in court since her lengthy trial began April 3.

''She was choking on her own blood and bleeding from the mouth,'' said Marcos's longtime attorney, John Bartko, just after she collapsed.

Marcos is being tried on charges that she and her late husband, former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, conspired to buy New York real estate, art and jewelry with $222 million stolen from their homeland.

When she arrived at the courthouse Thursday, Marcos told a reporter that she felt sick to her stomach.

After she was taken to the hospital, a court clerk said she had been worried about Marcos's ''particularly gray'' appearance when she arrived in court, and had advised the courthouse nurse to stay at her post and not go to noon mass at a nearby Catholic church.

Dressed in her customary black of mourning for her husband, Marcos had been sitting at the witness table listening to her trial lawyer, Gerry Spence, question an associate of her co-defendant, former Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi.

When Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella began his questioning about 11:40 a.m., Marcos suddenly slumped over, her face flat on the table, as spectators gasped.

Bartko said when Marcos collapsed, she murmured, ''No, no, no.'' Asked what she meant, he replied, ''She wanted the trial to go on - she didn't want this to happen to her.''

Two doctors among the spectators rushed up to the fallen Marcos, as well as a few of her supporters. The doctors called for a stretcher and Marcos was carried out as Judge John Keenan cleared the courtroom. Later, he recessed the trial until Tuesday.

''She made a sound. I looked over, and she put a hand to her face and she fell forward, bleeding from the mouth and vomiting,'' said Khashoggi's lawyer, James Linn.

Doctors at the hospital later Thursday issued a statement saying tests showed Marcos has ''erosive gastritis,'' an acid-related condition in which part of the stomach lining is eroded.

The condition, which is unrelated to Marcos' high blood pressure, requires intravenous medication to suppress her production of acid, the statement said.

''It is expected that she will be in the hospital for several days until her condition, which is not life-threatening, has improved,'' it read.

Marcos broke down in tears April 26 during testimony and had to be escorted from the courtroom and treated for high blood pressure.

Since then, she has worn a blood pressure monitor. On May 8, she again collapsed in tears when a witness testified about her daughter receiving secret funds.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - A government study has shown for the first time that a comprehensive anti-drug program can significantly reduce cocaine use among teenagers, researchers announced Friday.

A five-year study of 5,500 students in Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., found those who had not gone through the program were about twice as likely to have used cocaine within the past month as those who had participated.

''I would like to emphasize that this is the first time we have data on the impact of prevention programs in reducing the use of cocaine, including crack cocaine,'' said Charles Schuster, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse at a news conference.

If the findings are extrapolated nationwide, the 2 percent reduction in cocaine use produced by the program would mean nearly 500,000 fewer American teenagers between the ages of 12 and 17 would be using cocaine, he said.

Researchers credited the program's success to involving schools, parents, the media and community leaders, which apparently produced significant reductions in teenagers' use of cigarettes, alcohol and marijuana - so-called gateway drugs, he said.

Only 36 percent of the students who went through the program drank alcohol in the last month, compared with more than 50 percent of those who had not. Only 24 percent of the students who went through the program smoked cigarettes in the last month, compared with 32 percnt of the teens not in the program. And only about 14 percent of the students had tried marijuana in the last month, compared with more than 20 percent of the non-participators.

Most strikingly, a preliminary analysis of eight of the schools showed only 1.6 percent of the students in the progrm had used cocaine in the last month, including the highly potent and addicting form known as crack, compared with 3.7 percent of those who were not in the program.

''This study clearly demonstrates that a comprehensive prevention program can work in reducing not only the use of cigarettes and alcohol, but also the use of illicit drugs as well,'' said Mary Ann Pentz of the University of Southern California, who led the study.

More than 62,000 students in 50 middle and junior high schools in Kansas City and 57 schools in Indianapolis, Ind., have gone through the National Institute of Drug Abuse's Midwestern Prevention Research Program since it began in 1984.

The program, which costs about $24 per student each year, involves classroom instruction beginning in sixth grade on how to recognize and respond to social pressures and resist using drugs and alcohol.

In addition, parents are involved through homework assignments that encourage parents to establish rules about drug use and discuss drug use with their children.

The messages conveyed at home and in school are reinforced through the mass media, which is encouraged to air anti-drug commercials and to address drug use on news programs and talk shows. Community leaders are also encourged to become involved.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - A federal grand jury has charged Nynex Corp. with criminal contempt for providing prohibited information services to MCI Communications Corp., the Justice Department said.

This is the first criminal case charging a violation of the 1982 consent decree that broke up American Telephone and Telegraph Co., the department said Thursday.

Nynex is one of seven regional holding companies created as part of the divestiture of AT&T's local telephone service subsidiaries ordered in the decree, which bars Nynex and the other regional companies from various lines of business, one of which is information services.

Information services ''most commonly are services that allow customers access over telephone lines to computers for data processing or information retrieval,'' the Justice Department said.

James F. Rill, assistant attorney general for the department's antitrust division, said the indictment charges that, from April 1986 until February 1987, Nynex, through subsidiary Telco Research Corp., ''provided prohibited information services in violation of the criminal contempt statute.''

The department alleged Telco provided a service to Washington-based MCI giving it access over telephone lines to Telco's computer in Nashville, Tenn.

New York-based Nynex, parent company of New York Telephone Co. and New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., acquired Telco Research, a software developer, in April 1986.

After buying Telco, Nynex said it tried to sell the computer and software to MCI. Lack of agreement on the sale led to termination of the lease, Nynex spokesman John Bonomo said in White Plains, N.Y.

Nevertheless, the grand jury returned a single-count indictment charging that Nynex ''willfully disobeyed'' the 1982 consent decree. Rill said that ''a willful violation of any consent decree is a very serious matter, deserving of criminal penalties.''

Bonomo said Nynex does not believe it violated the law and will fully respond to the charge once a public trial is conducted.

''We do not believe that we provided an information service,'' he said. ''All we did was to lease a computer and software to MCI, but it was MCI that entered the data into the computer and managed the computer.''

Bonomo said that ''provision of such equipment is allowable'' under the consent decree that broke up AT&T.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 1) UPI - The Bank of America said it purchased Arizona's insolvent Western Savings & Loan Association, the state's second largest thift with 62 branches.

The deal helps fulfill Bank of America's goal of being the dominant financial institution in the western United States, said newly-appointed chief executive officer Richard Rosenberg.

The Resolution Trust Corp., which is in charge of the nation's failed thrifts, announced late Thursday that Bank of America had won the bidding for Western.

The acquisition of Western marked Bank of America's first entry into banking in Arizona. Bank of America Arizona obtained a state charter Thursday, hours before the RTC announced the sale of Western.

''This acquisition provides us with an excellent vehicle for entering Arizona and advancing toward our strategic goal of being the premier provider of retail and wholesale financial services in the western United States,'' said Rosenberg.

As part of the deal, Bank of America received $3.5 billion in deposits and

The RTC gave Bank of America 120 days to review the assets it is acquiring and to return those that are found to have documentary deficiencies or specified defects such as loans in which timely payments are not being made.

Western's 61 branches in Maricopa County, which has a population of about 2 million people and includes the Phoenix metropolitan area, and its Salt Lake City branch, will operate according to normal schedules, the RTC said. Deposits will be insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Western had total assets of $4.6 billion and total liabilities of $5 billion, including $3.4 billion in 360,240 deposit accounts. Its core, or local retail, deposit base was estimated to be $1.8 billion.

The RTC, in addition to prior cash advances of $1.1 billion, will provide an initial cash outlay of about $1.7 billion to Bank of America and will retain $2.9 billion of Western's assets. Those assets include noninvestment grade securities; multi-family residential mortgages; land, commercial and construction loans; real estate owned; and investments in subsidiaries.

The RTC said four proposals were submitted for Western and Bank of America's offer was determined to be the least costly. Other bidders were Security Pacific Corp., Wells Fargo & Co. and Norwest Bancorp.

The RTC will recover a portion of its cash advances through the sale of assets that were not purchased by Bank of America.

The RTC estimated the ultimate cost of the Western Savings bailout at $1.7 billion.

Bank of America already holds a dominant position in California, where it has about 1,000 branches.

The Arizona acquisition was the bank's largest since it purchased the foudering 183-branch Seattle First National Bank in 1983. The bank also has 14 branches in Nevada and one in Oregon.

Western's troubles stemmed from millions of dollars in real estate loans the thrift made during the mid-1980s when construction was hot in Arizona. When the real estate boom suddenly ended, Western suffered losses of $202 million in 1988 and another $100 million during the first quarter of 1989.

David Weymouth, 42, recently hired from ABQ Bank, a thrift in Albuquerque, N.M., was named by Bank of America as president of the Arizona operation.

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, AK (JUNE 1) UPI - A Soviet mountain climber zoomed up America's highest mountain so fast that even park rangers who reported the feat Friday shook their heads in disbelief.

Anatoyla Burkreuv accomplished in half a day what most climbers would take two weeks to do.

Burkreuv reached the summit of 20,320-foot Mount McKinley in 10 1/2 hours, said Bob Seibert, chief mountaineering ranger for Denali National Park climbers.

''This goes in our books as a record speed ascent for that route,'' Seibert said from Talkeetna.

Burkreuv, whose age and home town were not listed on his registration form had just completed a successful ascent of McKinley with a guided expedition.

After he came back down last week, he decided to attempt a one-day climb, Seibert said.

''He was very well-acclimatized and in exceptionally good condition,'' Seibert said.

Burkreuv went up alone, traveling with almost no gear and supplies, ''depending on his speed and stamina to keep him out of trouble,'' Seibert said. But there was great risk involved because of McKinley's changeable weather, the climber's lack of food and fuel and the possibility that even an acclimatized climber can suffer altitude sickness.

''If you're going to shoot that in one day, you just pick a good day,'' Seibert said.

Park rangers do not encourage speed climbs, but Seibert said, ''That's part of mountaineering.''

Climbers generally start from the 7,000-foot base camp and head up the West Buttress route, with the fastest climb to the summit being 18 1/2 hours. Burkreuv set out from the base of the West Rib, at the 11,000-foot level, and climbed the Northeast Fork route. Despite the ''head start,'' leaving at a higher level, rangers entered his accomplishment in their record books, and Seibert called the feat ''very impressive.''

Burkreuv returned to base camp the same day, making the round-trip in less than 24 hours. Other climbers reported that Burkreuv zipped by them. Most climbers typically take almost three weeks to climb McKinley from base camp to summit.

Rangers said Burkreuv is an experienced climber in the Soviet Union and assisted in the guided expedition up McKinley.

CHICAGO (JUNE 1) UPI - Electrical workers tearing out old equipment at O'Hare International Airport accidentally severed a cable Friday, disrupting communications between the tower and the Air Traffic Control Center for more than an hour.

Barbara Dettmer, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said the communications break forced the cancelation of all departing flights and caused delays to inbound flights.

Illinois Bell spokeswoman Floria Pope said the break occurred at 10:41 a.m. and was fixed at noon.

''It affected 142 computer systems that control 3,408 lines,'' Pope said. ''But we don't know exactly how many lines went out.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Prosecutors and Mayor Marion Barry's lawyer Friday offered their final suggestions on the nearly 100 questions that will be posed to potential jurors when Barry's cocaine and perjury trial begins Monday.

The questions expected to be asked of 250 potential jurors focus on, among other topics, their views on legalizing drugs, their political affiliations and whether they have ever politically supported Barry.

Attorneys will use the answers as a guide in whittling the pool of potential jurors down to 12 jurors and an as-yet unspecified number of alternates. Jury selection is expected to take a week or more.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts asked U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to allow prospective jurors to express their personal feelings about law enforcement agencies, sting operations and undercover investigations.

''I believe it is important to identify anyone who shows overt support for the defendant, because that would show a predispositon to be biased,'' Roberts told the judge in court.

Barry, mayor of Washington the past 12 years, said this week he believes it will be difficult to find a jury that would convict him.

''I think the prosecutors know that in this town all it takes is one juror saying, 'I'm not going to convict Marion Barry. I don't care what you say ''' Barry said in a published interview.

Prosecutors also cited Barry's public statements about becoming a born-again Christian since his return from seven weeks of substance abuse treatment as a basis for inquiring about a prospective juror's religious convictions.

''We would like the question to read: 'If a defendant claimed he asked God for forgiveness for his crime, would that effect your views in the case?''' Roberts told Jackson.

Jackson did not rule on the requests. The questionnaire, with Jackson's final additions or deletions, will be presented to prospective jurors Monday.

Friday's hearing, which Barry did not attend, lasted less than 45 minutes.

Outside the courthouse, U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens said the government was prepared to go to trial Monday.

Neither Stephens nor Barry defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy would comment on reports that they are considering a plea agreement.

''This is not the time to talk. The time to talk is almost through and the time to fight is beginning,'' Mundy said. ''We are preparing for trial and as far as we're concerned, all of our efforts between now and the opening statements will be devoted to preparing for a full-fledged, full-blown trial.''

Barry was indicted Feb. 15 on three felony perjury counts and five misdemeanor charges of cocaine possession. Six more misdemeanors - five for cocaine possession and one for conspiracy to possess cocaine - were added to the indictment last month.

Mundy has argued that the sting operation threatened the mayor's life. This week Barry, for the first time, acknowledged in a published interview that he smoked crack cocaine supplied by FBI agents during the sting operation.

If convicted of all the charges against him, Barry could be sentenced to 26 years in prison and fined more than $1.8 million.

He would be precluded from seeking a fourth term only if convicted and imprisoned on a felony.

DOVER, DE (JUNE 1) UPI - The first challenge has surfaced to a new Delaware law enacted this week letting state-chartered banks sell and underwrite insurance.

A group of insurance agents has asked the Federal Reserve Board to make a final decision on whether or not it will assert authority over the business activities of bank subsidiaries.

The Alliance for Separation of Banking and Insurance also has asked for a temporary restraining order against Citicorp to prevent the company from setting up an insurance operation in Delaware, the Wilmington News Journal reported Friday.

The challenge comes after Gov. Mike Castle signed a bill into law this week granting state-chartered banks the power to sell insurance. Under the new law, Citicorp and other banks chartered in the state will be able to market a large variety of insurance nationwide.

State officials had expected that the insurance industry would attempt to block the measure.

Paul Equale, a vice president with the Independent Insurance Agents of America, said the Fed ruled several years ago in a case involving South Dakota that federal law ''forbids bank holding companies from setting up a subisidiary in a permissive banking state if they are going to use the subsidiary to principally sell insurance.''

Equale would like the Fed to take the same stance on the Delaware law. The Fedhas long had authority over bank holding companies and their corporate, non-banking subsidiaries but has not regulated state-chartered banks.

Citicorp has yet to file with the state to establish an insurance division but bank officials indicated earlier this week they planned to as soon as possible.

The Castle administration has not decided what role it will play in defending the new law, sought by the governor as an economic development tool.

WELLESLEY, MA (JUNE 1) UPI - Here are exerpts from Barbara Bush's and Raisa Gorbachev's speeches Friday to Wellesley College graduates:

Barbara Bush

Decisions are not irrevocable, choices do come back, and as you set off from Wellesley, I hope many of you will consider making three very special choices. The first is to believe in something larger than yourself, to get involved in some of the big ideas of our time.

I chose literacy because I honestly believed that if more people could read, write, and comprehend, we would be that much closer to solving so many of the problems that plague our nation and our society.

And early on, I made another choice, which I hope you will make as well. Whether you are talking about education, career, or service, you are talking about life and life really must have joy. It's supposed to be fun. One of the reasons I made the most important decision of my life, to marry George Bush, is because he made me laugh. It's true, sometimes we laugh through our tears, but that shared laughter has been one of our strongest bonds.''

The third choice that must not be missed is to cherish your human connections, your relationships with family and friends. ... But as important as your obligations as a doctor, a lawyer, a business leader will be, you are a human being first and those human connections with spouses, with children, with friends are the most important investment you will ever make. At the end of your life, you will never regret not having passed one more test, winning one more verdict, or not closing one more deal. You will regret time not spent with a husband, a child, a friend, or a parent.

Somewhere out in this audience may even be someone who will one day follow in my footsteps and preside over the White House as the president's spouse and I wish him well.

Raisa Gorbachev

The president of the Soviet Union asked me to convey to you his warm regards. ... We know that people in America show great interest in what is happening in the Soviet Union, the land of perestroika. This word nowadays sounds the same in all languages of the world.

Perestroika was conceived and is being implemented for the sake of the people, their dignity and equality. This goal - its goal is to make humane ideals and values a reality.

This vast and difficult task is a tough challenge, but we are confident that perestroika will succeed. The guarantee of that is the patriotism and talent of our people, their tenacity, their strength and their desire to overcome obstacles on the way, on the road they choose.

... The Soviet people know the value of a peaceful life. We wish to have good relations with the American and other peoples.

People on both sides of the great ocean realize more and more clearly there are values that bring us closer. Such values are love for one's own native country, love for one's relatives, children, the belief in what is good, and belief in solidarity into combat, wars, violence, hunger, catastrophes, and other threats to mankind.

These values are now more important than anything else. Hamlet's question - ''To be or not to be?'' - today confronts not only individuals or nations, but the entire humanity.

We women have our special mission. Always, even in the most cruel and troubled times, women have had the mission of peacemaking, humanism, mercy and kindness. And if people in the world today are more confident of a peaceful future, we have to give a great deal of credit for that to women who are active in advocating friendship, cooperation and mutual understanding among nations.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 1) UPI - East Germany's former ruling Communist Party reacted with outrage Friday to a government decision to seize assets of all political organizations that existed prior to the communists' defeat last fall.

At a hastily arranged news conference in East Berlin, Gregor Gysi, chairman of the Party of Democratic Socialism - formerly the Communist Party - said the decision was part of a plan to eliminate his party.

Gysi vowed that the party rank and file would fight the decision. ''One should not underestimate us,'' he said.

Under legislation introduced Thursday, parties and organizations which existed prior to last fall's peaceful revolution in East Germany will have to transfer properties and finances to a government trust agency pending a report later this month to determine whether the assets were legitimately acquired.

Although the legislation also applies to Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere's Chrisitian Democratic Union party, which for 40 years served as a satellite party of the former ruling Communists, the PDS has by far the most to lose.

According to a report in the West Berlin daily Der Tagesspiegel, the former communists control a virtual business empire in West Germany, worth anywhere from $180 million to $600 million.

The communists have called for mass demonstrations Saturday to protest against the legislation which Gysi said ''seeks to destroy the possibility of a socialist alternative in Europe.''

Gysi said he had received threats against his party, but would not say who issued the threats.

''Threats against the party, our buildings, and myself have greatly increased in the past days. I have received rat poison and more anti-semitic letters in the mail,'' he said.

Some of Gysi's ancestors were German Jews and he has been the target of anti-semitic slurs in the past.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - The vexing issue at the center of the superpower summit, German unification, is not about whether or when Bonn and Berlin merge into a single political and economic power, but what happens afterward.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev have accepted unification as inevitable and as a choice the German people are free to make. But the last few months show the process cannot take place in a vacuum.

The talks that began Thursday and may continue Saturday with a relaxed walk in the woods at Camp David involve a historic geopolitical shift that could leave both superpowers with diminished roles in Europe.

It is a process that at times has outpaced U.S. policy. It also is one Gorbachev early on tried without success to slow, prompted in part by painful memories of the high cost of German aggression in World War II.

Soviet officials cite 27 million war dead in explaining their concern about the re-emergence of a united Germany as the dominant economic and military power in central Europe, a scenario made no more palatable for Gorbachev by the West German commitment, tentatively backed by East Germany, to keep the new Germany fully imbedded in NATO.

The Soviets have balked, insisting NATO itself becomes obsolete as the risk of war fades. Their objections complicated talks on conventional force reductions in Europe and unification talks involving East and West Germany and the four wartime allies.

The Soviets are not alone in their concern. Poland, which likewise suffered the ravages of world war, has demanded legal guarantees of its postwar border with Germany and may keep Soviet troops on its own soil as an interim hedge against future German intentions.

In advance of the summit, U.S. officials said Bush would not so much try to win Gorbachev over on the advantages of NATO membership for Germany, but persuade him that Soviet security can be ensured.

An important component of that campaign has been public empathy.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has acknowledged the ''legitimate security interests'' of Poland and the Soviet Union. On the eve of the summit, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said, with Gorbachev at his side, that the Soviets had been victims of ''inadvertent insensitivity.'' Bush asserted Thursday that the United States has been ''quite sensitive'' to the wartime roots of worries about a resurgent Germany.

At the same time, the summit has brought out soft spots around the edges of the Soviet position that may not lead to outright endorsement of a Germany in NATO, but grudging acquiesence.

Gorbachev first demanded that Germany become neutral, a prospect U.S. officials called even more dangerous to Moscow because it would leave Germany - unconstrained by allied obligations - free to pursue its own foreign and defense policies.

Days ago, he traded that tough stand for what sounded like a possible compromise: Germany in NATO, but - like France - only in a political sense and not part of its military structure.

The United States was quick to say nyet. Not only that, some U.S. officials suggested the Soviet gambit might only increase pressure on France to rejoin NATO's military command, which it left in 1966.

That has left fundamental positions intact. Around the periphery of standoff, however, lie variables that could enable Bush and Gorbachev to paper over their differences even without seeing eye to eye.

Kohl, for example, has offered to not station NATO troops on what is now East German soil and has said Soviet troops - now 380,000 strong - might remain there for a ''transitory'' period. He also has foresworn development of an independent German nuclear or chemical weapons capability.

For psychological or political reasons, Gorbachev seems to want more. And the conditions moving NATO toward removal of its ground-based nuclear weapons and a sharply reduced U.S. military presence in Germany offer pieces to a possible solution to the German conundrum.

U.S. officials have dangled before Gorbachev the prospect not only of far lower levels of NATO troops in Germany, but of caps on German armed forces in a subsequent agreement to the current negotiations on conventional forces in Europe.

Because the Germans object to being singled out for limitations, U.S. officials have taken pains to not formally link them to unification. For their part, West German officials have hinted at unilateral reductions without framing them as inducements to Gorbachev.

Timetables for troop reductions and changes in NATO strategy or force posture to lessen the Soviet perception of a military threat are among the other variables considered negotiable or subject to revision by the alliance.

A final card, in which the Soviets have an undisguised interest, is the role of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which Gorbachev would like to see assume some of the peace-keeping roles of NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Bush has supported a broader role for the CSCE, but with limitations. U.S. officials view it as an amorphous collection of aligned and non-aligned countries. Because its actions are subject to veto by any one of its 35 members, they consider it a forum for talk but a poor substitute for NATO in managing change in Europe.

That is not to say that U.S. backing for a pan-European security structure coupled with assurances of constraints on German military power and peaceful intents by the West will not combine to provide a framework - real or implied - under which Gorbachev will feel free to leave the issue of NATO membership to the German people without appearing to hardliners at home to be participating in the dismemberment of the Warsaw Pact.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Two Republican members of Congress told a Lithuanian independence rally at the Capitol Friday that the Soviet Union will not get the elevated trade status it wants until the Baltic states win their freedom.

''There will be no most-favored-nation status until the people of Lithuania and the Baltic republics are free,'' said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who on April 6 was barred from entering Lithuania from Poland a few weeks after the republic declared its independence.

''Mr. Gorbachev, I have a message for you,'' said D'Amato, who then said in both Lithuanian and English: ''Lithuania will be free.''

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., made the same pledge that Gorbachev ''will never get most-favored-nation status - never - as long as the Baltic states are oppressed.''

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland told the flag-waving, chanting crowd of about 1,500, including dozens of women in colorful native Lithuanian dress that organized labor supports the independence movement because ''we know which side we're on.''

''It is now time to ask the Bush administration: Which side are you on?'' Kirkland said.

Gintare Gecys, a doctor from Philadelphia who is of Lithuanian heritage, said she came to the rally because she ''wanted to let Gorbachev know that we mean business.''

DETROIT (JUNE 1) UPI - General Motors Corp. said Friday it is recalling 410,000 1985 model Buicks, Oldsmobiles and Pontiacs to correct a problem with their electronic emissions control systems.

Affected by the recall are the Buick Regal Somerset with a 3.0 liter V-6, Buick Century a 3.8 liter V-6, Buick Electra Park Avenue with a 3.8 liter V-6, Olds Ciera with a 3.8 liter V-6, Olds 98 with a 3.8 liter V-6, Olds Calais with a 3.0 liter V-6 and Pontiac Grand Am with a 3.0 V-6.

GM spokeswoman Toni Simonetti said these cars ''may be emitting pollutants in excess of federal emissions standards.''

Dealers will replace the ''prom'' in the electric control module, at no charge regardless of mileage, she said.

Simonetti said the problem was identified by the Environmental Protection Agency through its in-use emissions testing program.

''We've been cooperating with them. We decided to voluntarily recall'' the cars, she said.

Letters to owners of the cars were being mailed Friday, she said.

YONKERS, NY (JUNE 1) UPI - A state judge ordered 2,800 teachers and other school employees to end a strike that closed the 18,000-student Yonkers public school system Friday and directed them to resume contract negotiations.

Acting on the request of the city of Yonkers and its Board of Education, state Supreme Court Justice Matthew Coppola, sitting in White Plains, continued a restraining order against the strikers who shut down schools in the state's fourth-largest city.

He acted within hours after they walked off their jobs to enforce demands for a more than 40 percent wage increase over a period of four years.

School Superintendent Donald Batista immediately advised parents not to send their children to school Monday unless advised otherwise but said classes might resume Tuesday.

Teachers, building administrators and custodial employees set up picket lines at 5 a.m. at Saunders High School, where the Yonkers Board of Education has offices, City Hall and the home of two members of the City Council. Batista said only 10 of the city's 1,000 teachers reported for work and all of the 1,000 administrators and 100 custodians stayed off their jobs.

A restraining order against the strikers went into effect automatically under the state's no-strike Taylor law barring strikes by public employees. The law provides a penalty of two days loss of pay for every day out on strike.

The current Yonkers school term was not scheduled to end for three weeks, with final exams and state Regents' exams still to be given.

The Board of Education signed a preliminary agreement in May with the Yonkers Federation of Teachers and unions representing school administrators and custodians for two retroactive wage increases - 4.5 percent wage beginning July 1989 and 4.5 percent beginning in February 1990 - and 5 percent in each July and February for three years beginning next month.

''But the city has not been willing to fund these increases,'' said John Eshoo, staff director of the teachers' local. ''It has offered only a 6.5 percent across-the-board increase for all employees.''

''This seems grossly unfair because school employees have been under a salary cap of 4.5 percent for four years and the Yonkers schools have fallen to 53rd place on the 53-school Westerchester-Putnam counties school system in regard to salaries,'' Eshoo said.

No formal action has been taken by the City Council, which would have to amend its current city budget to accommodate any school wage increases.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - The National Science Foundation Friday ousted Bassam Shakhashiri, leader of the government's efforts over the past six years to boost Americans' scientific knowledge.

Erich Bloch, foundation director, announced an organizational shake-up that replaced Shakhashiri, chief of the foundation's education directorate with another foundation official, Luther Williams.

Williams will head a newly formed directorate that will combine education programs and ''human resources'' initiatives like recruiting more women and minorities for scientific professions.

''I am puzzled why I am in essence being fired,'' said Shakhashiri, a colorful personality noted for his habit of wearing ''Science is Fun!'' buttons.

''I came here when science education was zero - when it was decimated. I am poised to continue the effort ... to help achieve the president's goal of making the United States No. 1 in science and math by the year 2000.''

During Shakhashiri's six-year tenure, funding for the science foundation's effort to improve Americans' scientific literacy jumped from $55 million to more than $250 million. Staffing of the science education office also doubled from 40 to 80.

At a news conference, Raymond Bye Jr., the foundation's public affairs director, said Bloch decided to replace Shakashiri ''because the feeling was that we needed a new level of leadership'' to ''elevate the visibility'' of science education and to improve coordination between different federal agencies. Bye added that Shakhashiri had done ''an outstanding job,'' and he did not consider his removal from the education post a firing.

Shakhashiri, who will remain with the science foundation as an adviser to Bloch, declined to comment on Williams' ability to spearhead the science education effort.

''I am convinced the National Science Foundation is the vehicle to accomplish sweeping changes in science and math education across the nation. I would not say or do anything to harm the agency or harm that cause,'' he said. ''I intend to continue to be an outspoken advocate of great advances in science education.''

Williams, a former president of Atlanta University, said he agrees with the effort to combine science education and human resources programs.

''I believe in making high-quality science and mathematics education available to all students, at all levels,'' he said. ''I am committed to finding ways to recruit more women and minorities into science and technical fields, not only because it is the appropriate thing to do but because the nation needs these people.''

The executive committeee of the National Science Teachers Association issued a statement Friday that said: ''We support the movement towards a concentration of all National Science Foundation resources for education into one well-supported directorate.''

Bloch, who steps down as science foundation director in two months, was not at the news conference because he was meeting with Soviet science officials as part of the U.S.-Soviet summit.

(JUNE 1) UPI - Oval Office talks between President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev have resumed and are said to be focused on improved U-S-Soviet trade. Gorbachev is rallying hard for improved trade to keep his ailing Soviet economy afloat, but earlier today told congressional leaders that he would NOT ''beg'' for favors. U-S lawmakers say any trade agreement would be hinged on Soviet responses to Baltic independence.

Observers say Washington's relationship with the Palestine Liberation Organization depends greatly on how the group responds to a U-S request to denounce Wednesday's guerrilla raid on Israeli shores. P-L-O chief Yassar Arafat has said he had nothing to do with the raid and is expected to mull over Washington's written demand that he expel those who did. A P-L-O response is NOT likely for several days.

The Pentagon has dispatched four U-S warships to Liberia in West Africa to stand by for the possible evacuation of Americans. Liberia has been in the throes of civil war for six months, but now rebels are poised to capture the capital's airport. The State Department wants all U-S citizens to leave the country immediately and has ordered all NON-essential U-S personnel out as well.

NO deal was struck between West German lawmakers on differences on a draft treaty on economic, currency and social union East Germany. Hamburg officials offered a compromise plan to get the council of federal states to back the treaty... which needs to be ratified by the West German Parliament. But they did NOT get majority support for their plan designed to allay fears that the council of federal states may block the treaty when it comes up for debate.

TORONTO (JUNE 1) UPI - After a two-hour meeting, a majority of holders of Campeau Corp. debentures agreed Friday to the debt-ridden company's request to delay payment of past-due and future interest until the end of 1991.

More than two-thirds of the holders of the 70.52 percent of the debentures represented at the meeting voted in favor of an extraordinary resolution delaying the semi-annual interest payments, the meeting's chairman said.

''We are no happier about what's happening than you are,'' Paul Campbell, president of Campeau Canada, told the meeting.

As expected, Robert Campeau, the company's chairman, did not attend the meeting.

The special meeting of holders of Campeau's Series A 7.5 percent convertible subordinated debentures was called after the company failed to pay $5.8 million in semi-annual interest due March 31.

The holders approved an extraordinary resolution ''to waive certain existing and future defaults'' related to the publicly traded debentures, valued at $156.4 million when they were issued in September 1987.

Robert Campeau, his wife Ilse and Olympia & York Developments Ltd. collectively own, control or direct 67.3 percent of the debentures.

Olympia & York is one of Campeau's two key creditors, along with Edward J. DeBartolo Corp., which has headquarters in Youngstown, Ohio.

The meeting turned stormy after Campbell and Bill Kennedy, Campeau's general counsel, made presentations explaining the need for and the content of the resolution.

Campbell told the holders: ''In the months ahead, we will face many more challenges and we continue to work hard to steer the corporation through its difficulties.''

But a number of beneficial owners of debentures argued vigorously that they had a right to ask questions and cast ballots, despite their not having registered in advance to attend the meeting.

''That's pretty shabby treatment,'' said John Andrachuk after being told he was out of order by the meeting's chairman.

Three other holders then jumped to their feet to defend Andrachuk and demanded the right to question Campeau's representatives.

''You are treating us like schoolchildren,'' one said.

After a lengthy delay that included exchanges between Andrachuk and Kennedy, the meeting was adjourned to allow those not registered to ask questions.

A handful of questioners asked Campbell about property valuations, the ranking of Campeau's secured and unsecured debt and their voting rights.

The meeting then was reconvened and promptly adjourned after the results of the ballot were announced.

On May 4, Campeau announced plans to sell off a substantial portion of its Canadian real estate assets as part of a five-point plan to restructure the company, drawn up in connection with the Chapter 11 bankruptcy filings of most of Campeau's subsidiaries, including Federated Stores Inc., Federated Departments Stores Inc. and Allied Stores Corp., operating in the United States.

Campbell said there is ''nothing mysterious'' about the plan.

''Our task, then, is to sell a sufficient number of properties to generate enough cash to reduce our debt levels to an amount where our main operations can operate from positive cash flows and we can await the outcome of the U.S. reorganization,'' Campbell said.

''It's premature to make any predictions on the outcome'' of the bankruptcy protection hearings, Campbell added.

Campeau's 1989 year-end financial results have not yet been finalized but should be available by mid-June, Campbell said.

Robert Campeau's bid to regain majority control of the company he founded four decades ago remained in doubt Friday. The National Bank of Canada, which was owed $34 million Thursday as part of a deal reached two months ago, declined to say whether payment was received.

The bank seized the Campeau Corp. securities in January after an estimated $127.5 million personal loan to Campeau fell into default.

In return for two payments of $34 million, the bank said it would return to Campeau 13 million ordinary shares, $51.4 million in principal of 7.5 percent convertible subordinated debentures and 4 million preferred shares.

If the deal remained in force Friday, Campeau and his family would have become the dominant shareholders of the debt-ridden real estate and retail company, holding a 50.9 percent interest on a fully diluted basis.

MIAMI (JUNE 1) UPI - Eastern Airlines trustee Martin Shugrue met Friday with federal prosecutors to discuss allegations airline managers falsified maintenance records shortly before three unions launched a crippling strike in 1989, an Eastern spokesman confirmed.

Shugrue flew to New York for a meeting with U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney, Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said.

''He is meeting with the U.S. Attorney concerning the investigation at Kennedy,'' Matell said. ''This is a meeting we have been trying to set up for months now and, quite frankly, it's an opportunity to present the facts in the case.''

A grand jury investigating the airline's maintenance procedures at Kennedy International Airport is reportedly considering indictments against Joseph Leonard, Eastern executive vice president and chief operating officer, and Edward Upton, a former vice president for maintenance and engineering.

Shugrue hopes to head off those indictments, The Miami Herald reported Friday.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's office said she had no comment.

The inquiry centers on whether carrier managers falsified maintenance records at airports in Miami, Atlanta and New York before unions representing the carrier's pilots, flight attendants and ground workers struck the airline in March 1989.

That strike forced Eastern to file for protection from its creditors five days later.

Shugrue has been trying to restore faith in the troubled airline since his appointment by a New York bankruptcy court judge in April to head the company. The selection of Shugrue as Eastern's trustee stripped parent Texas Air Corp. and its chairman, Frank Lorenzo, of control of the airline.

Leonard and Upton, who resigned from the carrier in February, have not been notified that they are subjects of a grand jury probe, Matell said.

Shagrue was meeting with representatives of the Air Line Pilots Association in Washington before flying to New York to meet with Maloney, Matell said.

The pilots' union, which called off its sympathy strike in November, is seeking reinstatement of its members.

Those talks were suspended after three days, Matell said.

(JUNE 1) UPI - The prime minister of Malaysia says industrialized nations have become what he calls the ''high priests of democracy...'' using sanctions to force struggling nations to conform. The Malaysian leader laid the blame on the industrialized nations of the world for the problems in Third World countries. Malaysia's prime minister addressed a summit of the Group of 15 in his country.

Texas authorities are trying to assess the damage from more crazy weather. The Red Cross has set up shop in northwest Texas, where a line of powerful thunderstorms and at least seven tornadoes overnight destroyed several homes and a church sanctuary in Hanford. Some areas in rain-weary east Texas report that storms dumped up to nine inches of rain in a 30-hour period.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 1) UPI - The military government Friday clarified its plans to hand over power to the opposition party that won Sunday's elections, saying no referendum or further elections would be necessary - only the passage of a new constitution.

Kyi Maung, acting president of the victorious National League for Democracy, said his party would have the new constitution ready within two and a half months.

The NLD continued to add to the massive majority won in Sunday's general elections, piling up a total of 392 seats out of the 485 seat total, according to unofficial returns tabulated by the party.

Previously, military leader Gen. Saw Maung said only that the government would hand over power to a new government according to law. He also said the military would continue to take responsibility for ''law and order,'' raising doubts the military would yield power either quickly or fully.

Since the previous constitution provided for no opposition party and was abrogated by the military takeover in 1988, it was assumed that a new constitution would have to be passed.

When the old constitution was passed in 1974, the government held a nationwide referendum to approve it.

Some analysts feared that the military would insist on such a referendum again, followed by new elections in a process that could take years.

At a news conference Friday, however, government spokesman Lt. Col. Ye Htut told reporters all that was required was the drafting and passage of a new constitution by the newly elected Parliament.

Once a new government is formed under that constitution, the military government will hand over power, he said.

Ye Htut said it would be up to the Parliament whether a referendum or plebiscite would be needed to ratify the constitution.

The speed of the process was also up to the winning party, he said.

Kyi Maung told foreign correspondents his party has not made a decision yet on the exact sequence of steps in the transfer of power.

''You see, we have had no experience in this sort of thing, so we shall have to take up this question for full discussion at the next central executive committee meeting on Monday,'' he said.

He said the party has so far received no official communication from the military government.

''But if a constitution must be a prerequisite to the transfer of power, we can provide one in two and one-half months,'' he said.

(JUNE 1) UPI - A federal judge in Orlando, Florida, dismissed charges against three Tanzanian sailors accused of conspiracy in one of the biggest hashish hauls in U-S history. The judge said that prosecutors failed to prove that the sailors knew drugs were aboard the vessel. The suspects were part of the crew on an ocean-going tug seized by the Coast Guard off the east coast of Florida last February. More than six tons of hashish were aboard the ship.

Health officials in Rhode Island say 23 schoolchildren spent the night in a hospital after a mass food poisoning filled three hospitals with 80 children. State health officials say doctors suspect that ham served for lunch yesterday at three East Providence elementary schools was contaminated. A hospital spokesman says most of the children admitted were given fluids to prevent dehydration.

PARIS (JUNE 1) UPI - Defending champion Michael Chang and Andre Agassi made sharp comebacks at the French Open Friday - Chang on the court and Agassi with his mouth.

Chang, as has become customary with him, overcame a two-set deficit to beat Swedish qualifier Christian Bergstrom to gain the fourth round, and Agassi breezed to a straight-sets victory over another qualifier, Frenchman Arnaud Boetsch.

Following his 6-3, 6-2, 6-0 triumph, Agassi suggested he might boycott all four Grand Slam championships if a proposed new dress code is enacted.

''I don't know how far I'm willing to take it, I don't know how far they will take it,'' the outspoken American said of a proposal by Philippe Chatrier, president of the International Tennis Federation, that a predominantly white costume be required for Grand Slam events.

''I've never been a pushover, and I don't plan on it now. I've got to make a statement. It's like with the Davis Cup. I didn't play that, not because of me, but because I think things need to be run differently for the players' sake. Sure, I'll be willing to make a stand.''

Agassi, known almost as well for his outlandish outfits as for his skills, was mentioned specifically on the initial statement by Chatrier, whom Agassi jokingly called a ''bozo.'' A second statement was identical, except Agassi's name was omitted.

In a Center Court duel reminiscent of last year, when he shocked Ivan Lendl in the fourth round after being two sets down, Chang defeated Bergstrom 2-6, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2, 6-4.

This is the third time Chang has come back from a two-set deficit to win a match, and he now has a career record of 5-1 in five-setters.

''For me it's just a matter of taking everything point by point and game by game,'' said the 18-year-old Californian, seeded 11th despite his French Open victory last year. ''You can't come back all at once. It happens sometimes that I'm leading 5-2 and lose the set, but I never give up.''

''After the second set I think he let up a whole lot and it took him a while to get back to the way he wanted to play. I took advantage of it.''

Jim Courier, the 13th seed, routed Johan Anderson of Australia 6-0, 6-2, 6-1, setting up a fourth-round date with Agassi, a rivalry that dates to their days at the same tennis academy in Florida.

A year ago, Courier defeated Agassi in the third round of the French, but Agassi won a rematch at Key Biscayne, Fla., in March.

Andrei Chesnokov, the eighth seed from the Soviet Union, won his third-round match from Jean Fleurian 7-5, 6-4, 6-2.

The match between 15th seed Guillermo Perez-Roldan and Yannick Noah was suspended because of darkness with Perez-Roldan leading 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 4-6.

Among the women, No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 8 Katerina Maleeva, No. 9 Conchita Martinez and No. 11 Jana Novotna all won third-round matches in straight sets, and No. 15 Nathalie Tauziat won in three sets.

Top seed Steffi Graf had her third-round match with Sandra Cecchini postponed a day because of darkness.

There were 19 service breaks in the Chang-Bergstrom match, played under a brilliant sun, 11 in the first two sets.

Bergstrom, ranked No. 106 in the world, took advantage of a slow-starting Chang by sweeping the first four games. There were five consecutive service breaks to start the second set, with Chang jumping ahead 4-2. But Bergstrom broke in the eighth and 12th games to go up by two sets.

Chang, seemingly non-plussed by the hole he had set for himself, captured the next nine games, carrying him to 3-0 in the fourth set.

There was only one service break in the final set, that coming in the seventh game when Bergstrom netted a forehand. Chang, who next plays Javier Sanchez, then served out the match, yielding a total of three points on his final two service games.

About the only difficulty Agassi experienced against Boetsch, ranked No. 263, came in the last game when he needed four match points to close the 1 hour, 32 minute contest. On the first match point, the 20-year-old from Las Vegas, Nev., was blinded by whirling sand.

After diving to the clay later in the game, Agassi picked up a towel and approached the courtside seats, where he asked a young lady to wipe the dust from his back. She obliged.

''To say the least, I feel very confident,'' Agassi said of his next match with Courier. ''I'm much stronger than I was last year. I'm a much different person. I'm even stronger than Key Biscayne.

''Tennis is a funny sport; anything can happen. I'll go out there and make him earn his money.''

Asked how much different he would be if he had to conform to a dress code, Agassi replied: ''I'd still be the same person, but I'd be more boring.''

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 1) UPI - NATO will give a clear signal to the Warsaw Pact next week that it still wants an early agreement on conventional forces in Europe, Western officials said Friday.

Officials said the semi-annual meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Turnberry, Scotland, June 7-8, is bound to be greatly influenced by any agreements at the summit meeting in Washington between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The officials gave the impression some uncertainty prevails in preparations for the spring session of the North Atlantic Council, as they are still awaiting the outcome of the Washington talks and because of the rapidly changing situation in the Soviet Union.

Next week's session is one in a series that leads up to a meeting of NATO heads of state and government in London early July.

In NATO's Nuclear Planning Group, defense ministers discussed the alliance's nuclear policy in Canada May 9-10. The same ministers, meeting as the Defense Planning Committee, reviewed the alliance's conventional strength and needs in Brussels last week.

Both sessions reflected NATO recognition of the greatly reduced threat from the Warsaw Pact. The Western alliance has shelved plans to modernize short-range nuclear forces in Europe and agreed to lower the readiness and availability of standing allied forces.

The task of foreign ministers next week will be to ''incorporate the outcome of these two meetings in a political context,'' a senior NATO official said. ''They have to define the role and function of NATO in the changing environment and set the stage for the summit.''

Arms control will be at the center of the debate, ''to move our objectives forward on all issues,'' the senior official said.

NATO foreign ministers will ''stress the urgency of moving toward completion of the (conventional forces in Europe) talks,'' the senior NATO official said.

A NATO summit in Brussels in May 1989 called for completion of the so-called CFE talks this year and, until a few months ago, Western officials felt this was well within reach. But the Soviets have dragged their feet lately in the Vienna CFE talks, as speedy progress toward German unification has made them uneasy.

The NATO official said the foreign ministers are likely to ''give a new signal of flexibility in view of the final phase'' of CFE. But how this signal will be shaped in detail will depend to a large extent on the outcome of the Bush-Gorbachev talks, he said.

''We will leave no stone unturned to bring the negotiations to a good end '' he said, as even with the greatly diminished threat from the Warsaw Pact, a CFE agreement would offer major advantages.

It would firmly establish the legitimacy of agreed ceilings on conventional forces, an important aspect for the long term, and it would include a starting point for wide-ranging verification.

''It would put the entire military scene in Europe in a new degree of transparency,'' the senior official said. ''The need for such a treaty remains undiminished. It would be a dramatic breakthrough in European security.''

WELLESLEY, MA (JUNE 1) UPI - The first ladies of the world's two superpowers told a cheering graduating class at Wellesley College Friday that women have a special mission in the world - whether it's changing society or raising a family.

Under postcard-perfect skies, Barabara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev each spoke briefly to an enthusiastic crowd of 5,000 people gathered in a large white tent for graduating ceremonies, with Bush, good humoredly but pointedly, disarming a controversy that had swirled around her invitation.

''Our conversation is only beginning,'' she said, speaking to the students who had protested her invitation as ''inappropriate'' because she is prominent for her husband's accomplishments rather than her own. ''And a worthwhile conversation it has been.''

She noted she had not been the students' first choice but that feminist author Alice Walker, best known for her novel ''The Color Purple,'' had been.

''Instead, you got me,'' she said, ''best known for the color of my hair.''

But the American first lady, who dropped out of Smith College in her freshman year to marry George Bush, did not back down or apologize for the choices she has made or the life she has lived, defending her role as wife and mother before a graduating class of 150 women, many of whom will choose professional careers outside the home.

Wellesley, she said, is known as a place where ''diversity is not just tolerated but embraced'' and the graduates should refuse all stereotypes.

Wearing a black robe trimmed in purple - the doctoral robes of Smith College, where she received an honorary doctorate for her work in literacy - Bush told the graduates they come ''from a first-class school, so you can't live a paint-by-the-numbers life.''

Taking note of the rapid changes in roles of men and women in society, Bush said: ''Maybe we should adjust faster, maybe slower. But whatever the era, whatever the times, one thing will never change: Fathers and mothers, if you have children, they must come first.

''Your success as a family - our success as a society - depends not on what happens at the White House, but on what happens inside your house.''

Gorbachev, who like Bush is a grandmother but who also holds a doctorate in philosophy, told the graduates that women have a special mission as peacemakers in the world.

''We women have our special mission,'' she said. ''Always, even in the most cruel and troubled times, women have had the mission of peacemaking, mercy and kindness,'' she said.

''And if people in the world today are more confident of a peaceful future we have to give a great deal of credit for that to women,'' she said.

Gorbachev, speaking in Russian, said the Soviet embrace of perestroika would make her nation ''open to the world.''

After the graduation ceremonies, the two first ladies toured nearby Boston before returning to Washington for a summit dinner at the Soviet Embassy.

Before the graduation ceremonies - the 112th commencement on the rolling 500 acres of the picturesque New England campus - students who had earlier protested Mrs. Bush's appearance released a letter to the first lady urging her to be more visible and outspoken on women's issues.

''We ask you, Barbara Bush, as a concerned mother and as a symbol of service to others, to take a definitive and vocal stand on the following critical issues that shape the lives of women in the United States.''

The list included day care, family and medical leave, welfare cuts, AIDS research, education, ''deterioration of women's reproductive rights,'' and the wage gap between men and women.

''We think she should begin to focus on women's issues more publicly,'' said senior Ruth Potee.

''We are saying we are excited she is here. But we are also saying that as a woman in her position, she has the opportunity that people like you and I might not have to make a strong statement about women,'' she said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - There is plenty of credit available for potential home buyers despite claims of a credit crunch squeezing the nation's home builders, the Mortgage Bankers Association said Friday.

''There is not a credit crunch as it relates to finding permanent money to purchase a home,'' said Ronnie Wynn, the association's president and president of Colonial Mortgage Co. of Montgomery, Ala.

A survey of 56 of the association's leading members showed that more than half, 52 percent, said their current loan application volume was greater in the first quarter of this year.

Wynn said the association conducted the survey to give an accurate assessment of the current mortgage market conditions because of reports that credit has tightened in commercial lending and in the supply of funds for development and construction of homes.

Mortgage lenders said they picked up a good degree of market share from savings and loan institutions, which have tightened lending practices because of stricter federal regualtions.

Fifty-four percent of the responding lenders said they are not turning down more borrowers than six months ago. Those who are turning away credit-seekers attributed their action to higher interest rates and weaker applicants.

More than two-thirds said their underwriting standards have not changed. The remaining one-third said they are taking a closer look at the income requirements of borrowers and their credit histories.

Last month, the National Association of Home Builders released a survey showing evidence that a credit crunch created by last year's thrift bailout bill has crippled the housing industry.

Private economists, however, noted that higher interest rates also have contributed to the slowdown in housing construction.

Wynn said the credit crunch in commercial real estate lending could bring about a housing slowdown and push prices higher.

On Wednesday, the Commerce Department reported that sales of new single-family homes dropped 1.6 percent in April to an annual rate of 546,000, the fifth monthly decline and the lowest level since December 1982.

Housing inventories rose to their highest level since July 1982 with an 8.1-month backlog.

Lyle Gramley, the association's chief economist and a former Federal Reserve governor, said the weakness in housing should not be enough to send the economy into a recession, although it will contribute to slower growth.

CHICAGO (JUNE 1) UPI - Grain and soybeans closed mostly lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, pressured by a late slump in prices.

Trading was described as light for much of the day.

Soybeans closed with sharp declines, which traders said was caused by forecasts of drier weather that pressured new crops.

At midday, soybeans dropped to their lowest level in seven weeks as traders learned that the dry weather was allowing farmers to catch up on planting.

Rain forecast for the Midwest early next week was believed to be light, thus having little effect on planting.

Corn closed lower on long liquidation.

Traders said declines in corn were also based on the drier, warmer weather outlook for the next 30 days.

The July wheat contract hit a low. Traders said reports that China had its October bid for soft red winter wheat rejected by the USDA pressured prices.

Also reportedly keeping a lid on wheat was another rejection of Jordan's bid for hard red winter wheat.

At the close, corn was off 2 1/4 to off 1, soybeans off 7 1/2 to off 5 1/4 wheat off 4 1/2 to off 1 and oats off 1/2 to up 1 cent.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 1) UPI - West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher reiterated Friday that a united Germany be part of NATO, arguing thatmembership in the Western military alliance will contribute to European security.

In Brussels, however, East German Prime Minister Lothar De Maiziere said the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, or CSCE, should grow into becoming the continent's future security structure.

The future of Germany has been a key topics at the superpower summit in Washington. The Soviet Union initially objected to German membership in NATO, but President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev indicated at the summit they have made some progress toward resolving the issue.

Genscher told a news conference that ''every country is allowed the right to join an alliance of its choice ... That means that a unified Germany will have the right to make a decision and we have made it - for the Western alliance.''

Speaking after he met with his East German counterpart Markus Meckel, Genscher said it was a decision that would contribute toward European security and stressed that Germany was fully aware of the security interests of the Soviet Union.

He said the ideological conflicts which in the past had been the basis for NATO and its East bloc counterpart, the Warsaw Pact, were now being increasingly overcome.

Genscher has made a series of similar statements in recent days, obviously aimed at allaying Soviet fears about the power NATO would gain if a united Germany were part of it.

East Germany's De Maiziere, meanwhile, told a news conference after a two-day visit to Brussels, ''Our starting point is that the major aim for the future is to institutionalize the CSCE.''

The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe was made official in 1975 by the signing of the Helsinki Declaration by 35 nations. They included all European countries minus Albania, plus the United States and Canada. The group was aimed at improving East-West ties, improved economic relations and human rights protection.

Soviet objections to the proposed NATO membership form one of the major hurdles in the process toward reunification.

Moscow has suggested a series of concepts - rejected by the West - including neutrality and continued allegiance by both Germanys to their respective alliances. Under the latest Soviet suggestion, a united Germany could be a NATO member without participating in the command structure of the alliance.

Gorbachev would like to see the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe assume some of the peace-keeping roles of NATO and the Warsaw Pact, while Bush has supported a broader role for the CSCE, but with limitations.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 1) UPI - Minnesotans plan a warm welcome for Mikhail Gorbachev but a demonstration Friday for Baltic independence showed the Soviet president won't escape criticism in the American heartland.

Nikita Khrushchev's visit to an Iowa farm in 1959 started the thaw in the Cold War, disclosing a surprising reservoir of goodwill in the Midwest for the Russians.

Iowans genuinely enjoyed the visit of Gorbachev's pudgy predecessor, an earthy and pugnacious man every bit as rough as a cob of the American corn he so admired.

Gorbachev, on the other hand, is a charmer - cool, correct and evidently always in control of his emotions.

His equanimity may be tested Sunday by the polite but persistent protesters who paraded in bright sunlight at high noon Friday in downtown Minneapolis in support freedom for Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

And Lao and Cambodian people promised to march Sunday from the Capitol to the governor's residence in the adjacent city of St. Paul to protest Soviet military aid for Vietnam.

The Minnesota sons and daughters of Iron Curtain countries paraded on the plaza in front of the Hennepin County Government Center, carrying protest posters and the flags of the Baltic nations.

They hoisted signs demanding, ''Red Army, go home!'' and ''Baltic independence now!''

''I was one of the lucky ones,'' said Paul Abele, born in Latvia 75 years ago. ''I got out.''

But Abele was still in his native country in 1940 when the Soviet Union illegally and forcibly annexed the independent republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia under a secret pact by Stalin and Hitler.

''I was there when Latvia was occupied,'' said Abele, a retired electrician who came to the United States from Germany as a refugee in 1950. ''I remember what it was like under the Russians.

''Some of our people were deported to Siberia,'' Abele said. ''Now Latvians are scattered all over the world. The luckiest ones came to the United States.

''Many people in the West are saying Gorbachev is so nice,'' Abele said. ''It is like we are waiting for a king.''

And so it is.

The family of Richard Brand was busy sprucing up their dairy farm, 25 miles south of Minneapolis, for an expected visit by Gobachev. Geraniums and marigolds have been potted and petunias have been planted in the window boxes on the white barn.

The Brands were so busy getting ready for Gorbachev and being interviewed by the media they had to hire a neighbor to plant 80 acres of soybeans.

Just about everyone wants a piece of the Gorbachev action. There are the usual T-shirts and bumper stickers.

The John Birch Society, a household word during the Cold War, is getting some ink by grumbling that President Bush shouldn't be making any agreements with Russians.

Mark Griffin, Minnesta coordinator for the ultra-conservative group, charged that the Soviet Union hasn't ''lived up to agreements in the past.''

Griffin said the society will run an ad Saturday in the Minneapolis Star Tribune with this headline: ''Another welcome mat for Gorbachev? Hold on a minute!''

But by the time Minnesotans see that ad, new agreements will have been signed by Presidents Bush and Gorbachev and it will be too late to unpot the petunias.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 1) UPI - Embattled Liberian President Samuel Doe appealed for help from the United States Friday as forces loyal to rebel leader Charles Taylor edged within 23 miles of the capital.

Doe, in danger of being ousted by Taylor after 10 years as president of the West African nation founded by freed U.S. slaves, asked the Bush administration for aid in holding free elections by 1991 and said he would not run for president again, the official news agency LINA reported.

Saying Americans are ''traditional friends'' of Liberia, Doe also appealed for help in ending the civil war from former U.S. President Jimmy Carter and the United Nations, LINA said.

''I wish to announce today my firm decision not to stand for re-election in 1991,'' LINA quoted Doe as saying.

His statement followed a vow Thursday that he would not resign to help end the fighting, setting the stage for a showdown battle in Monrovia between the government and rebel armies.

Taylor's troops have moved to within 23 miles of the capital and are poised to attack in a few days, a senior rebel leader told United Press International Friday.

The Bush administration Thursday urged all Americans to leave Liberia and dispatched four Navy ships with more than 2,200 Marines to the Liberian coast to evacuate Americans if necessary.

There are about 1,100 private U.S. citizens in Liberia and another 102 government personnel and dependents, the State Department said.

Taylor, a former civil servant in the Doe government who studied economics and lived in the United States for 10 years, predicted Thursday he would capture Monrovia within three weeks. He said he expected government opposition to dissolve before his National Patriotic Front, which he said has 10,000 men under arms.

More than 1,000 people have died since Taylor launched his insurgency six months ago.

Taylor has said his political heroes include former U.S. Presidents Ronald Reagan and Richard Nixon and that he would like to make Liberia a democracy with a market economy and close links to the West.

But Liberian opposition leaders in the neighboring Ivory Coast Friday told UPI reporter Mark Huband they were concerned about Taylor's intentions and said they were working with support from several U.S. congressmen to ensure his rebellion creates a truly democratic system.

Former Liberian Finance Minister Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf said she fears Taylor might refuse to give up power once he takes over.

''We have to have the concern that Charles Taylor might just stay in power. After all, power does things to people,'' said Johnson-Sirleaf, one of the most outspoken critics of the Doe regime since she was forced into exile in 1986.

''It is almost a foregone conclusion that Taylor will head the transition government,'' Johnson Sirleaf said. ''That is rightfully deserved because he has led the struggle to this point, because he has done all the planning and put himself at risk.''

There has been speculation that Taylor may have received support from Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi as well as the African state of Burkina Faso.

Political sources said a group of U.S. congressmen was prepared to support Taylor if he organizes elections by the end of the year.

The sources, contacted at Danane on the Ivory Coast border with Liberia, said at least 10 American congressmen who are in touch with moderate Liberian opposition leaders might lobby the Bush administration to resume U.S. aid to Libya if Taylor's rebellion succeeds.

American aid to Liberia was suspended last year after the government fell $7 million in arrears.

''Taylor is the one person recognized by the Liberian people who can remove Doe,'' Johnson-Sirleaf said. ''He has the support of the Liberian people, though it may be short-lived. But the struggle we have waged is only going to end by giving the Liberian people a choice.''

Johnson-Sirleaf, imprisoned without trial for seven months in 1986, said she would respect the eventual appointment of Taylor as president. But she said she would not accept a post in government until she had seen the direction that Taylor intends to take.

''I am still unclear about his objectives, and his policy statements have left a lot unsaid,'' Johnson Sirleaf said.

She said she was unlikely to accept a post in a transition government and would fight for elections in which her own party, the Liberian Action Party, could run. She was a candidate in the Liberian Action Party when Liberia last elections were held in 1985.

Victory in that election was claimed by Doe amid accusations of widespread ballot-rigging. Johnson-Sirleaf fled to the United States after being released from prison but she said she intends to return to Liberia if Taylor is successful.

As a master sergeant Doe seized power in a bloody coup April 12, 1980. His government has been widely criticized for systematic abuses of human rights extreme even by African standards.

MIAMI (JUNE 1) UPI - A car bomb detonated Friday as a woman was starting her van in the driveway of her home, throwing her from the vehicle and scattering debris as far as a block away, the FBI said. There were no injuries.

The blast occurred about 6:30 a.m. EDT, startling neighbors getting ready for work in a residential area known as Kendall, where the woman, whose name was not released, lived with her family.

''We looked out the door and we saw there were flames (around the car) and my father had a fire extinguisher and put it out,'' said Carole Griffin, a neighbor.

FBI spokesman Paul Miller said agents did not know of any motive for the bombing and did not know whether the woman was the target.

''We don't know who the actual target may have been,'' Miller said. ''Mistaken identity is possible.''

The woman worked for Eastern Airlines, but Miller said there was no evidence that her job had any connection with the blast.

Unions representing Eastern machinists, pilots and flight attendants struck the airline in March 1989, forcing the company to file for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

The company continued to operate with the help of replacement workers and non-union employees. Only the machinists union remains on strike.

The explosion broke several front windows on the woman's home and scattered debris as far as a block away, Miller said. The van was destroyed, but the woman was uninjured because she started the vehicle with the driver's door open.

''The force of the blast was vented out the door ... preventing her from receiving more serious injuries,'' Miller said. He said the force of the blast threw the woman through the open door.

Metro-Dade County police were assisting the FBI in the investigation, Miller said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Congressional leaders who verbally sparred Friday with Mikhail Gorbachev described the Soviet president as self-assured despite his problems at home but said they were disappointed his verbose nature prevented them from asking more questions.

''He would serve in the U.S. Senate with great distinction. He filibusters on just about everything,'' observed Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., after a nearly 90-minute meeting with Gorbachev at the Soviet Embassy.

The dozen congressmen emerged from the meeting virtually unanimous in their personal assessment of the Soviet president, joining with other Americans who have met Gorbachev during the summit in noting his confidence.

''Gorbachev is not down in any sense. ... He still has a sense of humor. He still has incredible energy,'' said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

But there was some unhappiness on the U.S. side that only four congressmen got a chance to question Gorbachev because he took so much time to present his views on such subjects as Lithuania and the Soviet economy.

''He wanted to get across his propaganda points, which he did ably, but not very briefly,'' said Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who did not get a chance to question Gorbachev.

''We had a lot of good questions that we didn't have an opportunity to raise today, like, 'How long are you going to send aid to Cuba and Afghanistan and Angola? If you need help why don't you ask for a refund from (Cuban leader Fidel) Castro?''' noted Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he was disappointed there was only little discussion about a reunited Germany and contended the Soviets were ''getting the horse in front of the cart'' by taking a hard line against Germany's membership in NATO.

Nunn said there should first be an agreement on arms and troop cuts in Europe, which would make German participation in NATO less frightening to the Soviets.

Gorbachev spent much of the meeting describing his need for better trade relations and his efforts to resolve the problem of the breakaway Baltic republics through what he called constitutional means.

But the congressmen said - as they have in the past - that an agreement giving the Soviets most favored nation trade status would have little chance of winning approval as long as the Soviet crackdown on Lithuanian continues and the Soviets fail to codify their recent liberal emigration policies.

Republicans such as Dole and Boschwitz also said they wanted to see the Soviets end support for leftist governments such as Cuba and Angola.

Meanwhile, two Republican members of Congress told a Lithuanian independence rally at the Capitol that the Soviet Union will not get the elevated trade status it wants until the Baltic states win their freedom.

''Mr. Gorbachev, I have a message for you,'' said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who earlier this year was turned away at the border when he tried to enter Lithuania.

''Lithuania will be free,'' vowed D'Amato in both Lithuanian and English.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 1) UPI - Someone deliberately set a fire Friday aboard a hard-luckluxury liner that ran aground in the Delaware River only five days earlier after another fire, officials said.

There were no injuries.

''The fire marshall has determined that the fire was intentionally set,'' said Fire Dept. Lt. Jack Christmas.

The smoky blaze, which started in a lower deck storage room about 5:15 a.m., was the second fire in less than a week on the 24,000-ton M.V. Regent Star. It prompted the Coast Guard to cancel a two-day ''Cruise to Nowhere'' scheduled for Friday afternoon and disappointed dozens of passengers who arrived at Penn's Landing lugging suitcases crammed with vacation gear.

The fire was discovered by a crew member during a routine patrol and was brought under control by firefighters in about an hour, Christmas said. He said the crew was evacuated. No passengers were on board when the fire broke out.

The Coast Guard has called in agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to help investigate the fire. Coast Guard officials would not say when the 642-fot-long ship, which is registered in Nassau, Bahamas, would be cleared for departure.

The Regent Star has been plagued by misfortune since Sunday, when it ran aground in the Delaware Bay off Fortescue, N.J., as it returned from a Caribbean Cruise.

Investigators believe Sunday's fire was caused by a short in a circuit breaker in the ship's control room. That fire knocked out power to the ship, causing it to run aground and forcing the evacuation of 890 passengers.

The liner was freed early Tuesday after passengers were loaded onto a ferry and fuel was pumped from the ship to make it lighter.

It was unclear whether Apple Vacations of Newtown Square, which charters the ship, had tried to notify passengers that the cruise had been canceled. But many people who had booked passage on Friday's cruise were unaware the voyage had been called off until they arrived at the terminal. Some took the news hard.

''This was our last opportunity to take a cruise before starting a family '' said a disappointed Janet Snyder, who drove from her home in Reading with her husband. ''Now we're not going to be able to do it.''

John Presta of Aston, Delaware County, said he'd gladly board the ship - fire or no fire.

''I wouldn't care if we were stuck on a sandbar for three days,'' he said.

Had the ship been cleared to sail, Presta might have had to leave his wife behind. Cathy Presta said she wasn't convinced the ship was safe.

''I'd be worried it was someone on the crew (who set the fire) and that he was still on the ship,'' she said.

Others were even less anxious to book passage on the star-crossed liner after two fires in five days.

''I didn't want to go anyway,'' said Nancy Santalini of Vineland, N.J. ''Three times is bad luck. I'm Irish but I don't push it that far.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 1) UPI - Muscovites fearful of price hikes and disillusioned by President Mikhail Gorbachev's failure to improve their lives say they are not impressed by the glamour of the superpower summit.

''I don't think that Gorbachev can represent the Soviet people as a whole '' said Yelena Shalnov, 29, out for a walk in Gorky Park with her husband and their 5-year-old daughter, Tanya. ''Today there are few people who believe in him or the (Communist Party's) Politburo. There is no faith in them.''

Many residents of the Soviet capital said Moscow favorite Boris Yeltsin's parliamentary election as president of the Russian republic has stirred them far more than another trip to the West by Gorbachev.

''Of course, this (summit) is a big event, but we are very displeased with Mikhail Gorbachev's criticism of ... the most popular man in Russia, Boris Nikolaevich Yeltsin,'' said Vladimir Peskarov, who said he retired last year after a 40-year career as a Communist Party functionary. ''The people are heartsick about it and are offended by the way our president behaves.''

Gorbachev's departure for Canada, where he spent a day before flying to Washington, was upstaged by the renegade Communist Yeltsin's dramatic election to head the massive Russian republic, one of the 15 republics that make up the Soviet Union.

Asked about his most famous critic when he landed in Ottawa, Gorbachev said of Yeltsin: ''If he is playing political games, then we may be in for difficult times.''

During an active campaign against Yeltsin's election, Gorbachev had accused his rival of abandoning socialism and trying to break up the Soviet Union withhis calls for Russian sovereignty.

Yeltsin is wildly popular in Moscow, where he was Communist Party boss until Gorbachev removed him in late 1987 for criticizing what he described as the pace of the Soviet leader's ''perestroika'' reform program.

Marina Krasavina, another young mother strolling through Gorky Pork with her infant daughter on a balmy spring evening, said she was not following Gorbachev's trip.

''I am indifferent,'' Krasavina said. ''I don't think anything will come of it. The world will remain as it is. Gorbachev is not the man to run our country, and he is not going to achieve anything.''

Oksana Glaskova, sitting nearby on a park bench with her 4-year-old daughter, Dasha, said: ''I don't expect any results at all from this (summit) meeting. Can we really expect anything with the situation we've got in this country?''

Shalnov said she thought Gorbachev should spend more time in the Soviet Union.

''We must direct more effort on our internal problems, not external,'' she said. ''If we fail to straighten out our domestic life, then our foreign relations will be a complete failure. There is not much respect left for our country.''

But Anatoli Petrov, a 45-year-old education professor, said improved U.S.-Soviet relations and decreased international tensions will ultimately benefit his country.

''We hope that a further disarmament will take place thanks to this summit '' he said. ''We have got a large army, and it must be reduced. We must save the money for our internal needs. We have holes in education, in industry, so this (army) is a luxury.''

Petrov added: ''It is very good that after so many years of Cold War and confrontation, we have turned our faces toward each other.''

During Gorbachev's summits with former President Ronald Reagan, hundreds of Muscovites would crowd in front of a giant outdoor TV screen on downtown Kalinin Avenue and watch coverage of the meetings.

On Friday night, the giant screen was dark and people walked by without looking up.

Many Muscovites are worried by the government's plan to triple the price of bread and other grain products on July 1, which sparked panic buying when it was announced last week.

Yeltsin has sharply criticized the economic-reform program and said Russia should pursue a separate strategy. Yeltsin began his remarkable political comeback in March 1989 when more than 6 million Muscovites, virtually every eligible voter, elected him to the Soviet Congress of People's Deputies.

(JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and his Soviet counterpart Mikhail Gorbachev plan to sign a series of agreements this afternoon... including some formal accords on the destruction of chemical weapons and limits on nuclear testing. Still up in the air is whether they'll sign a major trade deal to help the Soviet economy.

Earlier, Gorbachev moved the summit spotlight from trade to the subject of Lithuania during a breakfast meeting with leaders of Congress. Gorbachev defended the way he has dealt with the independence movement... saying he has NOT cracked down on Lithuania in what he calls ''a test for perestroika.''

Soviet President Gorbachev says P-L-O leader Yasser Arafat can be trusted. The Soviet chief today urged congressional leaders to work more closely with Arafat on a peace settlement for the occupied territories. He also said the Soviet Union is prepared to help guarantee security for Israel.

While Bush and Gorbachev continued their superpower summit, their wives Barbara and Raisa engaged in their own round of diplomacy during commencement speeches at Wellesley College in Massachusetts. Graduates responded enthusiastically to Barbara Bush as she talked about her role as wife and mother.

Doctors say former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos may be released from the hospital this weekend. Yesterday Marcos fainted face down on the witness table during her trial on racketeering charges. She was diagnosed at a New York City hospital as suffering from severe inflammation of the stomach lining.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev held a wide-ranging discussion with U.S. congressional leaders Friday, using the occasion to defend his dealing with breakaway Baltic republics and to describe the difficulties his country faces in overhauling its economy.

The nearly 1 1/2 hour televised meeting at the Soviet Embassy with a dozen Senate and House leaders also touched on U.S.-Soviet trade and peace efforts in the Middle East.

The congressmen later said they were encouraged by his comments about the Soviet economic reforms but unconvinced by his arguments on the independence bid by Lithuania and other Soviet republics.

The generally amiable session was important for Gorbachev since the congressional leaders will have a key role in determing future U.S. trade and other economic policies toward the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev, flanked by about a dozen aides, faced the U.S. lawmakers across a long green conference table in the ornate Soviet Embassy Gold Room. The Americans heard his translated comments through earphones.

Later, Gorbachev returned to the White House for the first of two additional sessions of talks with President Bush, and in the afternoon he accepted peace awards from a variety of groups back at the Embassy. And he also made one of his crowd-pleasing stops along the motorcade route to shake hands with spectators.

Gorbachev told the U.S. lawmakers he is trying to resolve the issue of independence for Baltic republics through a constitutional process and asked the leaders for their understanding.

''We will be trying to use every opportunity to find a solution without extreme measures within the framework of the constitutional process, because this is the key to resolving similar issues with other republics '' Gorbachev said.

''We're not looking at it simplistically. ... I hope the Congress of the United States will understand us,'' he said in response to a question from Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

After leaving the embassy Dole said, ''I understand his response, but I don't think it addresses our concerns.''

Dole noted there are many Lithuanians living in this country, ''and we tried to make him understand we have a political problem too. President Bush has a political problem. He (Gorbachev) is not the only one receiving pressure.''

Dole said the discussion did not resolve the issue, ''but at least we had the dialogue and I think we understand his point of view better.''

During the exchange on the Baltic republics, Gorbachev cited the U.S. invasion of Panama and chided the congressional leaders for not opposing it. But Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said there were ''very significant differences in the two situations'' and that the invasion had the overwhelming support of the Panamanian people.

Mitchell said that if Lithuania were allowed to vote it would ''produce an overwhelming result in favor'' of independence.

In response to an opening question from Mitchell, Gorbachev gave a lengthy description of the problems his country faces in switching to a market economy, noting that bread prices will rise July 1 to reflect actual costs and the rest of the economy will follow in January for the start of a two-year transition.

The Soviets have begun ''a change of direction that is very dramatic. Some people are scared,'' particularly about sharp price increases, he said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 1) UPI - Byelorussia became the second large Soviet republic to reject the central government's plan for price hikes Friday, providing further evidence Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reform program may be doomed.

The Parliament in Minsk, capital of the republic of 10 million people, rejected ''any decisions to increase state retail prices without offering corresponding compensation and social protection to the population or without a nationwide discussion of these issues,'' the official Tass news agency said.

The Ukraine, the second largest republic in the Soviet Union with 51.2 million people, rejected the planned price increases almost immediately after they were officially introduced by Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov in Parliament last week as a key part of the move toward a market economy.

Boris Yeltsin, the new leader of the huge Russian republic, has criticized the plan for price increases and indicated Russia may also refuse to implement them.

The announcement of the transition to a ''regulated market economy'' in stages including price hikes to take effect beginning July 1 sparked panic buying in many Soviet cities.

The Byelorussian resolution cites ''the worsening situation on the consumer market caused by panic buying'' and says deputies were ''seriously alarmed by the possible drop in living standards.''

Because of the panic buying the Moscow city government imposed temporary rationing and restricted purchases to those who show passports with local residency stamps, angering people from outside the capital. An estimated 1 million visitors shop in Moscow daily.

Several regions have halted food shipments to the capital in retaliation for the restrictions on who may buy goods in Moscow, the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said.

The newspaper said the executive committee of the Kaluga regional government and local trade unions were cutting deliveries of meat and dairy products to the capital beginning Friday. The Vladimir and Kalinin regions have taken similar steps.

Moscow officials are negotiating with authorities from neighboring regions and apparently plan to revise the purchase restrictions.

''The new shopping rules turned out to be very inefficient,'' Moscow City Councilman Valentin Skvortsov told Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The newspaper said uncontrolled prices in the city's farmers markets have increased because of the restrictions, and it said business has been good for cooperatives that function outside state controls.

''Many cooperatives and individuals have notices saying, 'I sell without looking at passports,''' the newspaper said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - The executive board of the International Monetary Fund has submitted a resolution to the board of governors proposing an increase of 50 percent in fund resources to about $177 billion, the IMF said Friday.

The executive directors also submitted to the governors Thursday an amendment to the IMF's statutes to suspend voting and related rights of member countriesin arrears on their payments to the organization.

The finance ministers and central bank chiefs of 152 countries who comprise the board of governors were asked to vote on the proposals without holding ameeting by June 28, the IMF said.

The hike in IMF resources will go hand in hand with a change in the size of the industrial powers' contribution to the fund. The fund's resources - its capital - back short- and medium-term loans to help countries with shortfalls in their balance of payments.

Japan, until now the fifth-largest IMF shareholder, will share the No. 2 spot with West Germany, currently the third-largest shareholder. The United States will remain the largest shareholder in the IMF, where voting power is determined by a country's capital contribution, called its "quota." Britain will share the No. 4 position, down from second, with France.

The IMF noted that adoption of the resolution on quotas requires approval from memers holdingof 85 percent of the fund's total voting power, while the approval of a statutes amendment requires a majority of the votes cast.

According to a May agreement between the industrial and the developing nations belonging to the IMF, the increase in the fund's $118 billion in resources will not be impletmented before the effective date of the statutes' amendment.

Twenty-five percent of the increase in each member's quota will be paid in special drawing rights, the IMF's accounting and reserve unit whose value is based on a basket of the world's leading currencies or in currencies of other member nations.

The IMF said members have until Dec. 31, 1991, to consent to the proposed quota increase, a deadline that may be extended by the executive board. Countries with overdue obligations to the IMF may not consent to the quota increase until they become current, the organization said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Police from the nation's capital and its Virginia suburbs have joined with the FBI to investigate the slayings of at least seven prostitutes in the past 13 months, authorities said Friday.

Police in Alexandria, Va., disclosed Friday that an unidentified woman whose body was found Wednesday night died from asphyxiation, the same cause of death as two prostitutes found slain last weekend in neighboring Arlington.

If that victim, a white female under the age of 20 with brownish-blond hair, is determined to have been a prostitute, she would be the eighth victim.

While police said they are not sure if they are dealing with a serial killer, they have found many similarities among the slayings.

All of the seven identified prostitutes worked along the same 14th Street strip in downtown Washington, all were white and in their 20s, and all had blond or light-colored hair, police said.

The FBI is assisting local police through its Violent Crimes Apprehension Program, which helps profile criminals who commit violent acts, Barbara Wallace, a spokeswoman for the FBI Washington field office, said Friday.

FBI agents will investigate the slayings and try to create a profile of a possible suspect or suspects, said Wallace.

''The more crimes that are committed in the same way, it could conceivably be a multiple or serial type,'' she said.

The FBI trains experts in tracking serial killers in Quantico, Va., but a spokeswoman there said Friday none of those experts had been called into the case.

''Pretty much they're the last resort when there's no leads,'' she said.

Police also note there are significant differences in the way the women died, and said the killings may not all be related.

Two of the prostitutes were shot in the head, two were shot in the chest, at least two were suffocated and one died from a blow to the head.

On Thursday, police from the District of Columbia, Arlington, Fairfax County, and Falls Church and the Virginia state police met with the FBI and U.S. Park Police to discuss the cases.

MOSCOW (JUNE 1) UPI - Mothers whose sons died in the Soviet peacetime army assembled at a candlelit demonstration Friday in Moscow's Gorky Park wearing black kerchiefs to demand an end to forced conscription into the military.

''We want to have our children and not tombstones in graveyards,'' read a huge sign on the platform on which the mothers cupped candles and held black-bordered pictures of their sons with the official explanations of their deaths attached.

One by one the mothers carried their pictures up to the microphone and accused the army of total insensitivity, charging that 15 soldiers die daily because of hazing and brutality. One sign said 15,000 had died over the last four years.

The demand for truth by the ''black-kerchiefed mothers,'' as they call themselves, contrasted with the total enforced silence of the pre-glasnost era, when Soviet mothers received the remains of their sons from the Afganistan war in coffins that were dubbed ''black tulips.''

To the crowd's cries of ''Down with Defense Minister (Dmitri) Yazov,'' Valentina Zhukova took the candle she was holding and burned a copy of the daily army newspaper ''Red Star'' for not telling truth about the death of her son, Edik.

''Don't believe these people,'' she said. ''We have had enough. For what did Yazov receive his marshal's rank? He is a criminal. One gets sick even to look at them, not to say anything about trusting them.

''Don't be afraid, let us unite,'' she said. ''The best generation of our people is being destroyed.''

The speakers appealed to Boris Yeltsin, the newly elected president of the Russian Republic, to help them find the truth about their sons. The crowd yelled agreement when the speakers charged the army brass were ''parasites'' only worried about their dachas, or country houses.

Organized by the Union for the Protection of the Rights of Army Servicemen the rally capped months of complaints about hazing and brutality in the military run by an old-boys network.

''This is the son that I raised,'' wailed Zinaida Ledneva, 50, holding a color picture of her son Vladimir, 18, in a khaki army uniform. ''And this is what they returned to me,'' she keened, showing a picture of her lifeless son in a coffin in a morgue.

To a hushed crowd of some 500 people representing both leftist and rightist movements, she explained that she had to journey from her home in the Crimea to the morgue because she did not believe the ''official version that he hanged himself.''

His internal organs, she said, showed that he was beaten badly.

''He was executed,'' Ledneva cried out. ''His commander hung him. He was our only son. We lived for him.''

Although it was billed as a rally to protest against the unfair treatment of servicemen and their families in the army, the rally appeared to have been taken over by the black-kerchiefed mothers. People's deputies, Afghan veterans and even active army personnel also participated.

OTTAWA (JUNE 1) UPI - Resolving Canada's constitutional crisis, which has triggered fresh calls for Quebec's separation, will require a mixture of trust and flexibility, senior government officials said Friday.

But the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, made it clear that only English-speaking provinces would have to show flexibility since Quebec will not tolerate any changes to a proposed constitutional amendment that empowers the province to promote and protect its French language and culture.

The amendment to Canada's 1982 constitution, called the Meech Lake accord, was negotiated between the federal government and 10 provinces three years ago. It recognizes Quebec as a distinct society, reflecting the fact that 80 percent of its 6.4 million residents are French-speaking.

Quebec's separatist government refused to sign the constitution in 1982 because it failed to provide such recognition and powers.

The Meech Lake accord requires the approval of all 10 provinces before June 23, but New Brunswick, Manitoba and Newfoundland have refused to endorse it. Quebec has threatened to separate unless the accord is approved.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney will meet the provincial leaders for dinner Sunday in a last-ditch effort to resolve the impasse. If there is sufficient progress in that meeting, the leaders will head immediately into a First Ministers Conference to address the remaining sticky points of the amendment.

But government officials said Friday there is a wide gap on the most contentious issues and only a mixture of trust and flexibility could resolve the impasse.

Dissenting provinces, which are the least populated and least represented in Parliament, fear the distinct society clause will erode the rights of English and other minorities in the province.

They also want some guarantee of Senate reform, along the lines of a U.S.-styled institution - equal, effective and elected - before they endorse the Meech Lake accord.

One option being discussed is a statement of principles on the premiers' vision of a reformed Senate. But officials said such a statement would not carry any guarantee, making it virtually worthless to provinces that oppose the accord.

Another option being considered is changing the requirement in the Meech Lake accord for all provinces to endorse future Senate reform. Such an option would be rejected by Quebec, which would likely oppose a Senate in which it has the same representation as smaller provinces.

The Meech Lake impasse has wrought one of the nastiest chapters in Canada's 123-year history. Premiers who oppose the accord, especially Newfoundland leader Clyde Wells, have been vilified by politicians.

Yet Wells, a constitutional lawyer, is viewed as a hero in English-speaking Canada, where a majority of people also oppose the accord and the granting of special powers to Quebec.

Late Thursday, the assistant deputy speaker in Canada's Parliament was forced to resign after he called Wells a ''crazy mental case'' on a Quebec radio program.

Recent events in Quebec indicate the rest of Canada may have reason to beware conferring special powers on the French province.

In Montreal, the Catholic School Commission is holding public hearings this week into its proposal to ban the use of languages other than French on school property. One of five schools in the Catholic education system has a majority of allophone students, whose mother tongue is neither French nor English.

Last year, the Quebec government ignored a Supreme Court ruling that struck down its language law, which requires all commercial signs to be written only in French.

The Quebec government instead enacted a new law that outdoor signs be in French only, although indoor signs could be in any language.

MOSCOW (JUNE 1) UPI - Byelorussia became the second large Soviet republic to reject the central government's plan for price hikes Friday, providing further evidence Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reform program may be doomed.

The Parliament in Minsk, capital of the republic of 10 million people, rejected ''any decisions to increase state retail prices without offering corresponding compensation and social protection to the population or without a nationwide discussion of these issues,'' the official Tass news agency said.

The Ukraine, the second-largest republic in the Soviet Union with 51.2 million people, rejected the planned price increases almost immediately after they were officially introduced by Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov in Parliament last week as a key part of the move toward a market economy.

Boris Yeltsin, the new leader of the huge Russian republic, has criticized the plan for price increases and indicated Russia may also refuse to implement them.

TUNIS, TUNISIA (JUNE 1) UPI - The United States officially asked the Palestine Liberation Organization to denounce a guerrilla raid on Israeli shores and to expel factional leader Mohammed Abu Abbas, sources close to PLO leaders said Friday.

The demand was made in a written note that U.S. Ambassador to Tunisia Robert Pelletreau delivered to PLO representative Hakam Balaoui in Tunis Thursday evening, the sources said.

A State Department official in Washington said instructions which had been personally approved by Secretary of State James Baker went out Thursday to Pelletreau ''asking him to express deep U.S. concern'' about the act and to clarify whether the PLO disavowed it.

Observers in Tunis said the PLO response, which could determine the future of U.S.-Palestinian contacts under way since 1988, was not likely for several days.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat denied Thursday any relationship between his Fatah faction of the PLO and Abbas' Palestinian Liberation Front, which claimed responsibility for the failed May 30 guerrilla raid.

Israeli forces killed four Palestinian guerrillas and captured 12 of a group that attempted to attack Israeli beaches in six speedboats Wednesday Israeli officials said.

The State Department said the Bush administration was ''horrified'' by the attack and Israeli leaders immediately called for Washington to suspend contacts with the PLO, saying the attack proved the Palestinian group has not renounced terrorism.

The U.S. request officially asked the PLO to explicitly denounce the raid against Israel, the sources told UPI.

PLO leaders are expected to convene a meeting of the Palestine Central Council, the intermediary body between the PLO central committee and the Palestine National Council (the PLO Parliament in exile), to discuss the U.S. request, they said. The Palestine Central Committee consists of about 100 members.

Pelletreau and other U.S. officials have had four rounds of talks with the PLO in Tunisia since Washington opened relations with the organization Dec. 16, 1988.

But the PLO representatives never have given a precise response to U.S. requests that they renounce Palestinian guerrilla raids on Israel.

Arafat himself has always thrown the question back into the Israeli court, asking ''is Israel ready to put an end to its aggression'' against Palestinian civilians.

Guerrillas from Abbas' Palestine National Front were responsible for the 1985 hijacking of the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro and the slaying of a crippled U.S. passenger, Leon Klinghoffer of New York.

An Italian court sentenced Abbas to life imprisonment in his absence for masterminding the attack on the Achille Lauro. Since then Abbas has never come to Tunis for meetings of the PLO Executive Council and it is not known if he still is a member of the ruling body of the PLO.

Abbas still has a seat in the Palestine National Council, the PLO parliament in exile, and he attended a meeting of the body held at Algiers in November 1988.

In Cairo, Egypt, the semi-official Cairo daily Al Ahram reported Friday that Libya denied Israeli accusations that Tripoli was involved in planning the attack.

''There is no truth whatsoever in the claim that any Libyan ship left Benghazi port or any other Libyan port in order to take part in this attack,'' Foreign Minister Ged Azuz Al Talahi was quoted as saying.

Talahi spoke to Al Ahram during Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi's brief stop-over in Cairo on his way home from the Arab summit in Baghdad, Iraq.

Unconfirmed reports in Cairo said Gadhafi took a longer route home to avoid possible interception of his plane by Israeli jets in retaliation for Wednesday's attack.

The government-supervised daily Akhbar al Yom said Gadhfai and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak discussed the future of the Middle East peace process after the attack on the Israeli beach.

U.S. diplomats in the region have indicated that direct talks between the U.S. and the Palestine Liberation Organization in Tunis may be frozen unless Yasser Arafat distances himself from the assault.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 1) UPI - Finance Minister Vaclav Klaus warned Friday that any major change in Czechoslovakia's fragile coalition government after the upcoming elections could jeopardize the nation's economic reform program.

Klaus, the government's leading advocate for a market-based economy, said he is concerned the population may be swayed by the threat of mass layoffs and price increases that must accompany any true reform.

''A really new government ... would start new discussions, and that would be a tremendous waste,'' Klaus said in an interview with United Press International. ''This could just create a delay and we don't have time for delays.''

Other top economic advisers expressed concern that unless President Vaclav Havel firmly backs the tough reforms, they are doomed to fail anyway.

Like the rest of Eastern Europe, Czechoslovakia's centrally planned economy is plagued by inefficiency and overemployment and has been faltering for the last several years.

After the November revolution that toppled the Communist Party from power, a coalition government with a slim majority of non-communists took over. But its leading economics ministers have been at odds over whether to embrace full capitalism or to opt for a Swedish-style mixed economy.

Czechoslovakia's first free elections in 42 years will be held June 8-9.

Klaus, the architect of Czechoslovakia's economic reform program, has a four-pronged strategy.

It involves privatization of state-owned enterprises, price reform and elimination of state subsidies to inefficient industries, strict economic discipline including a tight money supply and a balanced budget, and an ambitious program for rapid convertibility of the currency. Convertibility means to make it exchangeable for hard currency.

Most of the legal groundwork for the reforms has already been laid.

The first round of retail price hikes is to take effect July 9, and internal convertibility of the currency, the crown, is set for Jan. 1, 1991.

But little is being done to prepare the population for the massive layoffs that will come with a changeover to a market economy, and the Labor Ministry has yet to begin creating the necessary social safety net.

Civic Forum, the pro-democracy coalition that put Havel into office, expected to win the elections by a wide margin.

But the Forum, which is a center-left coalition, may have to bow to leftist pressures to ease gradually into a Swedish-inspired mixed economy, rather than a hard capitalist system.

Already the Socialist Party, which is small but growing, has been attacking the economic reforms as well as the validity of the elections themselves. A rule requiring a minimum 5 percent nationwide vote for a party may keep the Socialists out of Parliament.

Without stronger backing from Havel, the government may not be able to carry through with tough reforms and the public will not swallow them.

The problem, says one government economist, is that Havel - a playwright and essayist often imprisoned during the communist years for his human rights activities - has no grasp of economics.

''Havel's a socialist,'' said the adviser, who asked not to be named. ''He is a creative artist who doesn't want to be tied to existing patterns of social issues.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 1) UPI - Stocks closed sharply higher Friday in active trading as the Dow industrials extended their gains late in the day to top the 2900 level and post a new record high.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which eased 1.90 Thursday, rose 24.31 to 2900.97, breaking the record of 2878.56 set Wednesday.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.09 to 198.03 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.93 to 363.16, another record high. It has set a record in each session this week. The price of an average share rose 20 cents.

Advances led declines 974-574 among the 2,025 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 187,860,000 shares, up from 165,690,000 shares traded Thursday.

Expectations of lower interest rates fueled the gains in stocks Friday. The market opened sharply higher, with the Dow industrials up more than 20 points, after the government issued an unexpectedly weak report on May employment.

The jobless rate dipped to 5.3 percent but job growth of 164,000 was almost entirely due to the hiring of legions of temporary workers to canvass the country for the government's 1990 census.

Many economists predicted a jobless rate of 5.4 percent for the month but the economy was expected to have created 135,000 new jobs, excluding census workers.

The news sent the bond market on a tear, sparking speculation the Fed might loosen the reins on credit. In late trading, the 30-year bond was up 1 1/2 points, sending the yield down sharply.

While stocks followed bonds in the early going, more profit taking after the market's sharp gain Tuesday soon set in and prices fell from their highs. But the Dow industrials recovered their lost ground in late trading as a surge of buying near the close sent the blue chip index above 2900. It had retreated from that level a few times Friday.

"The whole thing was that bonds were extremely strong," said Brad Weekes, senior vice president in charge of sales and trading at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "Interest rates are coming down, the perception is that the economy is in decent shape and inflation is under control."

Weekes contended that traders really did not assign much importance to the economic weakness revealed in the job data. "What you need to look at is the huge mutual fund cash positions," he said, which represent more fuel for the rally.

Other analysts were slightly disappointed with the market's performance in the face of such a powerful rally in the bond market. Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y., said he felt there was some concern in the market about weakness in the economy and its possible effect on corporate earnings which held the market back somewhat.

"Stocks have focused over the last four weeks on rates going down in the bond market, not on the tradeoff of a slowing economy and the possibility that earnings may not recover," said Johnson. "But I think today we're starting to see some concern about earnings, especially with stocks at these levels. People are saying, 'We'd better have the earnings to justify stocks at these levels."'

On the trading floor, L.A. Gear was the most active issue, sinking 8 1/2 to 30 3/4 after saying it expected earnings for its quarter ending May 31 to be 50 to 60 cents a share, compared with 91 cents in the year-ago period. Varity followed, up 1/8 to 3 3/8. Philip Morris was third, up 1 1/8 to 43 1/4.

Westinghouse was also active, up 7/8 to 37 1/4. Moody's Investors Service confirmed the company's rating late Thursday after Westinghouse announced a 20 million share stock buyback.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 1/4 to 43 3/8, IBM lost 3/8 to 119 1/2, Merck added 1 5/8 to 84 1/4, General Motors rose one to 49 5/8, and McDonald's gained one to 35 5/8.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 223,862,800 shares, compared with 199,769,640 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.77 to close at 363.83. The price of an average share rose two cents. Advances led declines 283-271 among the 831 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 16,878,170 shares, compared with 17,815,030 traded Thursday. I.C.H. Corp. led the Amex issues, up 1/4 to 4 1/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 3.17 to close at 462.14.

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 1) UPI - A right-wing party known as Confederation for Independent Poland declared the formation Friday of a so-called ''shadow Cabinet'' to challenge Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki's government.

Leszek Moczulski, head of the Confederation, said his group would present an alternative economic program to the people and take a stand on the decisions by Mazowiecki's government.

Moczulski said his so-called ''shadow Cabinet'' is modeled on Western democracies such as Britain, where the ruling Conservative government has an equivalent Labor Party government in waiting.

The popularity of the nationalistic Confederation for Independent Poland has been on the rise, but in local elections last weekend, the party placed far behind Solidarity candidates.

Moczulski introduced his 13 so-called ''ministers'' and said his party would have a majority in Parliament following the 1991 elections.

MOUNT VERNON, VA (JUNE 1) UPI - An apparent mail bomb exploded in a four-story medical building Friday, critically injuring a psychiatrist inside his office, U.S. Postal Service inspectors and Fairfax County fire officials said.

The afternoon explosion near the nation's capital started a small fire on the third floor of the building and caused burns to over 60 percent of the body of Paul Peckar, 50, a psychiatrist, said fire department spokesman Sgt. Leo Burt.

Peckar was taken by helicopter to the Washington Hospital Center in critical condition with burns and trauma, and was expected to undergo about four hours of surgery, hospital spokeswoman Sandra Greg said.

''He obviously opened a package or letter, whatever they're calling it, and it exploded,'' Greg said.

Burt said the initial caller to firefighters said ''a bomb exploded and a man was on fire.''

About 70 people were evacuated from the building and firefighters were then told a second bomb might be inside, said Burt.

The Fairfax County bomb squad investigated, but it was not immediately known if any other explosives were found, Burt said.

Two other people suffered very minor injuries.

Postal Inspector John Elder said several investigators were on the scene of the explosion, but had no suspects or motives.

In Falls Church, Va., a spokesman at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms regional office said the agency sent investigators to the scene of the blast and that they were expected to be there well into the evening.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 1) UPI - An Air Force Delta 2 rocket carrying a $273 million German astronomy satellite thundered toward space Friday on a flight to study X-ray emissions from the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe.

The 128-foot-tall Delta 2, equipped with nine strap-on solid-fuel boosters for extra power, flashed to life at 5:48 p.m. EDT - 13 minutes late because of an aircraft in the launch zone - and quickly climbed away from launch pad 17 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

''We have ignition and liftoff, liftoff of Delta 195 and the ROSAT spacecraft,''NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said.

Mounted inside a 10-foot-wide protective nose cone atop the Delta 2 was the 5,333-pound solar-powered ''ROSAT'' satellite, equipped with a high-tech telescope to study X-rays from high-energy astronomical targets ranging from super-hot stars and galaxies to exploding suns and suspected black holes.

The flight plan called for the satellite to be ejected into a 360-mile-high orbit carrying it 53 degrees to either side of the equator, within sight of the main control station at Oberpfaffenhofen, West Germany.

Once in operation, ROSAT's high-tech telescope will map the sky in an unprecedented search for X-ray sources, focusing on more than 1,400 targets of interest.

ROSAT is a joint venture between West Germany, Britain and the United States, which supplied an $18 million instrument and the $63 million Delta 2 rocket. The West German contribution was $170 million while Britain chipped in $35 million for one of three instruments on board.

The total cost of the project through launch was $336 million, with the United States committed to spending $5 million a year on data analysis.

While visible light from deep space can be studied from Earth's surface, high-energy ultraviolet radiation, X-rays and gamma rays are blocked by the planet's atmosphere.

But stars, galaxies and other objects shine in a variety of wavelengths depending on what chemical and nuclear processes are going on. The higher the energy, the shorter the wavelength of the resulting light. X-rays fall between ultraviolet radiation and gamma rays on the energy spectrum.

By studying X-ray ''light'' from deep space, astronomers can gain crucial insights into the processes that operate in the hearts of violent stars and galaxies in a bid to understand more about the structure and evolution of the universe.

ROSAT originally was scheduled for launch aboard a space shuttle, but in the wake of the 1986 Challenger disaster, West German space officials asked NASA to change plans and launch it aboard an unmanned rocket.

The ROSAT mission represents the most ambitious X-ray astronomy effort ever mounted, and scientists say the results should revolutionize knowledge about the high-energy region of the electromagnetic spectrum.

''ROSAT's power is as an imaging telescope,'' NASA program scientist Alan Bunner said. ''It has the capability to produce beautiful images with unprecedented resolution. It will be ... the fodder scientists will use for years to come to identify targets for detailed study.''

A major goal of the ROSAT program is to identify X-ray targets that will be studied in even greater detail later this decade by NASA's Advanced X-ray Astrophysics Facility, one of four ''great observatories'' scheduled for launch over the next 10 years.

The first was the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, launched April 25 from the shuttle Discovery.

The results from ROSAT will complement the visible light studies of Hubble and the investigations that will be carried out when the delayed shuttle Columbia finally blasts off carrying a $150 million set of four telescopes including an X-ray spectrograph.

But unlike the X-ray instrument aboard Columbia, designed to measure the energy distribution of radiation from deep space, ROSAT will provide visual images of X-ray targets.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev's new openness hasn't made it to official dining yet, with secrets held closely for Friday's planned party at the Soviet Embassy - down to the Americans invited and what's on the menu.

Pressed for details on the rather rare social gathering in the usually shuttered embassy in downtown Washington, Soviet officials would provide only the list of guests on the Russian side - led not surprisingly by Gorbachev, his wife, Raisa, and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Altogether, 39 other Russians were expected for the dinner, scheduled to begin at 7:30 with official greetings. One could only assume a similar number of Americans were invited.

Otherwise, details were scarce on the function, a reciprocal dinner hosted by the Gorbachevs for the Bushes hospitality of the evening before.

No one could really say what other such gatherings at the embassy have entailed, either.

And as for discussing whats for dinner, one Soviet official said, ''We never have and we probably never will.''

The following small facts could be gleaned, however, and revealed some striking similarities to White House protocol for such affairs:

-The party was ''black-tie'' and guests were required to wear tuxedoes even though Gorbachev shuns the formal garb. The Soviet president, attending the state dinner at the White House Thursday night, shirked the black-tie edict there to wear a business suit, which protocol experts say is acceptable for leaders of the socialist state.

-President Bush and his wife, Barbara, will be greeted by the Gorbachevs outside on the embassy driveway, before being escorted upstairs to the second floor's Red Room. The four then will receive the rest of the guests.

Guests at the White House are escorted down the Grand Staircase on arrival and the American executive mansion also boasts a number of rooms named for colors.

-Dinner will be served in the Golden Hall, where seven round tables were set for 10 each in addition to the main table, where 11 people were seated.

-After dinner, the Soviets planned to follow the tradition of toasting their guests, though officials said Gorbachev's remarks were slated to be short and texts in English were provided for the Americans.

-After coffee is served, a short concert will be held by Zurab Sotkilava, a bass vocalist from Soviet Georgia, accompanied by Michael Pletnev, a pianist. A muscial program in the East Room featured opera singer Frederica von Stade.

And incidentally, the main course served up at the White House was filet of beef, preceded by Maine lobster with corn sticks, and a lime concoction topped with iced raspberries for dessert.

President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev are in the middle of a second day of super-power talks that are believed to be focusing on guns and groceries.

The two leaders are expected to sign deals on arms control as well as U-S-Soviet trade.

Although Gorbachev is desperately seeking a trade pact to salvage the Soviet Union's failing economy, he earlier told congressional leaders that he would NOT ''beg'' for favors.

He says the Soviet Union doesn't want handouts, only ''normal'' consideration in fair trade practices.

A New York report says Bush will grant Gorbachev improved trade relations with the provison that the Soviet Union lift its ban on immigration and lighten up on Lithuania.

U-S lawmakers, who have to approve any trade treaty, say their blessing will be hinged on the Soviet response to Baltic independence.

Gorbachev pointed out, however, that Washington renewed China's most-favored-nation trading status... despite the military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators last year.

Gorbachev also told congressional leaders that he believes they should push harder for peace in the Middle East.

He says he believes P-L-O Chairman Yasser Arafat is trustworthy and that the Soviet Union is prepared to guarantee security for Israel.

ST. REGIS INDIAN RESERVATION, NY (JUNE 1) UPI - A judge Friday affirmed the right of two pro-gambling Mohawk chiefs and a tribal clerk to determine who is eligible to vote in Saturday's election placing an incumbent anti-gambling chief's seat on the line.

State Supreme Court Judge Andrew Ryan's ruling effectively blocks Mohawks living on the Canadian side of the troubled reservation - most of whom are opposed to gambling - from voting.

The election squares off anti-gambling Chief Harold Tarbell against pro-gambling candidate Norman Tarbell for a seat on the New York Tribal Council. In previous elections, Mohawks from both sides of the reservation had been allowed to cast ballots.

The ruling could affect up to 1,000 votes in the hotly contested race that could determine the future of gambling on the reservation straddling the U.S.-Canada border.

Judge Ryan upheld the procedure used to compile and publish a list of eligible voters, which had a cut-off date of May 26.

Some residents of the reservation who had eligibility in previous elections challenged the list but in the ruling were refused the right to vote.

The gambling issue had resulted in nightly arsons, beatings and gunfire that resulted in the killing of two Mohawks May 1 and the descent of law enforcement from both New York and Canada to create a fragile peace.

The election amounts to a referendum on the future of gambling at the reservation with the winner determining whether the three elected chiefs present a united front in favor of casinos in negotiations with Henrik Dullea, a top aide to Gov. Mario Cuomo.

The private negotiations between the state and the divided tribal council have thus far shown little progress.

Cuomo has steadfastly refused to negotiate the issue with the reservation's two other tribal governments - the 12 elected chiefs on the Canadian side of the reservation and the nine traditional non-elected chiefs.

Both those governments are unanimously opposed to casinos, arguing they disrupt the tribal way of life and go against the Great Law of the Iroquois Nation.

Harold Tarbell had said even if he were to lose the election, the New York Tribal Council would still be warring over gambling with the other two tribal governments.

The supporters of gambling believe it is as an answer to the reservation's endemic poverty, responsible for putting upwards of 90 percent of the population on some form of public assistance.

NEW YORK (JUNE 1) UPI - The dollar was mixed against major currencies in New York trading Friday, driven down by weak economic news but drawing support later from political uncertainty for the deutsche mark, analysts said.

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6980 marks, up from 1.6965 late Thursday. The dollar was quoted at 151.85 yen, off from 152.05 late the previous day.

Other dollar rates: 1.4370 Swiss francs, up from 1.4285; 5.7297 French francs, up from 5.7225; and 1,247 Italian lire, off from 1,248.

The British pound rose to $1.6823 against $1.6785.

Analysts said the dollar turned lower on the morning's U.S. Labor Department report showing weaker-than-anticipated employment growth in May.

The report showed America's jobless rate dipped to 5.3 percent in May, following 5.4 percent in April and 5.2 percent in March.

An estimated 164,000 jobs were added to non-farm payrolls in May, including 147,000 temporary posts with the Census Bureau.

Private payrolls, however, were little changed, the report said, as the manufacturing sector continued to eliminate jobs and the construction industry hired fewer people than usual last month.

Many market analysts had expected the non-farm payrolls would grow by as much as 200,000 to 225,000 jobs.

''The dollar came off at the news and turned around at the end of the day '' said a trader at Bear, Stearns & Co., citing the continued political uncertainty for the West German mark.

Due to rumors of a rift between the Bonn government and the Bundesbank and anxiety over German monetary union, ''people are starting to lose interest in the German mark,'' he said.

''The dollar looks well supported and wants to go higher,'' he said. ''Market psychology slowly is turning to bullish sentiment on the dollar.''

Susan Stearns, a senior corporate dealer at Harris Trust & Savings Bank, described trading as ''choppy and somewhat technical.''

''A lot of political uncertainty was causing the dollar to remain somewhat bid,'' she said.

The dollar closed mostly higher against the major European currencies after fighting off the effects of the disappointing U.S. unemployment figures. Gold was mixed.

''The dollar has softened this afternoon on back of a weaker-than-expected unemployment figure,'' said Tim Fox, a treasury economist with Midland Bank in London. ''The dollar fell as the thoughts of lower interest rates were raised.''

In London, the pound advanced against the softer U.S. unit to close at $1.6830 against $1.6770 at Thursday's close.

The dollar closed unchanged in Frankfurt at 1.6945 deutsche marks, but inched slightly higher in Zurich at 1.4260 Swiss francs against 1.4255.

The dollar rose in Paris and Milan, closing at 5.7175 francs against 5.7040, and at 1,246.75 lire from 1,243.50, but was down in Brussels at 34.86 Belgian francs against 34.82.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar continued to climb against the yen on political concerns about the Soviet Union following news reports that President Mikhail Gorbachev canceled his trip to Kamchatka in the Soviet Far East, where he was set to visit on his return from the Washington summit.

The dollar closed at 152.17 yen, up 0.42 yen from Thursday's close of 151.75 yen.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $359.25 an ounce, off from $364.25 the previous day. The New York Commodity Exchange settled June spot contract gold at $359.20 an ounce, off from $364.30.

In Zurich, gold closed higher at $364.00 an ounce from $363.50 an ounce Thursday, but moved one dollar lower in London at $362.75 an ounce against $363.75 an ounce.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.07 an ounce, off from $5.095. Comex June spot silver ended at $5.046 an ounce, off from $5.074.

Silver was unchanged in Zurich at $5.10 an ounce and also was unchanged in London at $5.07 an ounce.

(JUNE 1) UPI - In Massachusetts, first lady Barbara Bush and her Soviet counterpart, Raisa Gorbachev, wowed the commencement crowd at Wellesley College.

Student activists had petitioned against the choice of Bush as graduation speaker because she is known only by her husband's accomplishments, NOT her own.

But Bush defended her role as wife and mother to a cheering audience.

She said the success of society depends NOT on what happens in the White House, but in a person's own house.

She told the graduates to work for something that was larger than themselves, but to always put friends and family and laughter first.

One of the reasons she married George Bush, she said, is that he made her laugh.

About 150 protesters stood firm, however, by submitting a petition asking Bush to use her position to work harder for women's issues such as day care and reproductive rights.

In Mrs. Gorbachev's remarks- delivered through a translator, the Soviet first lady told the graduates that attending the ceremonies reminded her of her own graduation and the high hopes she had. Mrs. Gorbachev has a P-H-D and is a university professor.

She told the graduates that women have always had what she termed a ''special mission''... ''peacemaking, mercy and kindness.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 1) UPI - W. Ann Reynolds, former head of California's state university system, was named Friday chancellor of the City University of New York, the nation's third largest university system.

In an election that drew protests, Reynolds was picked by CUNY's board of trustees meeting in an executive session on the recommendation of a 10-member search committee composed of trustees, faculty members and students.

She will succeed Joseph S. Murphy, who announced last November his intention to resign and will step down in September.

Reynolds, 53, is the first woman to head CUNY, which has an enrollment of 194,000 students on 21 campuses around the city.

Reynolds is white. The student body is predominately female and black or Hispanic. A segment of students said they were not consulted about the decision to name Reynolds and voiced anger.

''Members of CUNY are outraged by the decision of the University Board of Trustees to select a new chancellor before meeting with students as per a Manhattan Supreme Court order,'' the protesting students said in a press release. ''We condemn this action as racist and exclusionary.''

Reynolds' election came a month after she was forced to leave her California position because of a dispute over pay raises she and the university system's trustees had approved for her and other top school officials.

Reynolds headed California State University, the nation's second largest university system, for eight years. She has a doctorate in zoology and is one of only a handful of women to achieve her status in higher education as head of the second and third largest university systems in the country.

The nation's largest university system is the State University of New York.

(JUNE 1) UPI - The South African government is preparing to throw out a 37-year-old law segregating public facilities.

A bill to get rid of the segregationist policies was introduced in Parliament last fall by President Frederik de Klerk. It's now in committee and is expected to be approved soon.

Only the right-wing Conservative Pary is certain to opopose it, branding the measure the first step toward forced integrations in the racially divided country.

The measure, if approved, will rescind segregation of buses, trains, toilets, libraries, swimming pools, beaches and other public amenities.

While the old segregation law is still on the books, it has lost its bite in recent years as many public places such as hotels, parks and theaters have desegregated.

The new move, however, is expected to lend substance to de Klerk's reform initiatives.

In other South African news, gunmen with automatic rifles and hand grenades today attacked the homes of community activists in a black township near Johannesburg.

Police say a 10-month-old baby and two other people died in the raid.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis and newly elected Russian leader Boris Yeltsin met today in Moscow to discuss economic ties between the Baltic republic and the Soviet heartland.

The meeting was called as fuel supplies are running dangerously low in the seventh week of Moscow's economic blockade of independent-driven Lithuania.

The embargo has forced some 45-thousand people out of work and has cost the Baltic republic about 103-Million dollars.

Landsbergis stopped over for a Moscow meeting with Yeltsin on the way back from Czechoslovakia, where he appealed for economic and political support.

The official Soviet news agency Tass quoted a Lithuanian spokesman in Moscow as saying the Landsbergis-Yeltsin exchange was ''warm and good.''

The meeting indicates that Yeltsin intends to follow through on his campaign promise to explore direct treaties between the mammoth Russian republic and Lithuania.

(JUNE 1) UPI - A government study has shown for the first time that a comprehensive anti-drug program can significantly reduce cocaine use among teen-agers.

The five-year study involved 55-hundred students in Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas. It found those who had NOT gone through the program were about twice as likely to have used cocaine within the past month as those who had participated.

National Institute on Drug Abuse Director Charles Schuster announced the findings today at a Washington a news conference.

The two percent reduction in cocaine use produced by the program would mean nearly 500-thousand fewer American teen-agers using cocaine.

Researchers credited the success to involving schools, parents, the media and community leaders. They apparently produced significant reductions in teen-agers' use of cigarettes, alcohol and marijuana... so-called ''gateway'' drugs.

Improved Soviet-U-S relations resulting in the summit this weekend also have led to an unprecedented visit of Soviet art to U-S shores.

The exhibit opening in Seattle tomorrow is called ''Moscow... Treasures and Traditions.'' It brings to the West for the first time artifacts and paintings culled from 10 major Moscow museums.

The exhibition illustrates more than five centuries of the inner life of Moscow. It begins with its medieval heritage... through its contacts with the West... influence by the New World... social reforms of the 1800's... Socialist revolution and the East-West thaw.

The exhibit is in the Washington State Convention and Trade Center and closes on September 30th.

SEATTLE (JUNE 1) UPI - A new credit card to be issued this month - the ''Pride Card'' - will be the first in the nation designed expressly to help fund activities and causes dear to the gay community, gay activists and bank officials said.

Application forms for the turquoise Master Charge or Visa cards issued by Seafirst Bank, a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based BankAmerica Corp., are tentatively scheduled to be mailed out on June 18 to coincide with Gay Pride Week in Seattle.

Mailings will go to other cities holding gay pride celebrations during the last two weeks of June.

The cards will carry the name and the ''P'' logo of the Seattle-based Pride Foundation, a non-profit organization instituted in 1985 to fund innovative programs for homosexual men and women.

''This is a real breakthrough,'' Karen Taylor, spokeswoman for the foundation, said Friday. ''This is the first time a bank, or any kind of other financial entity, has made this available to a gay-identified organization.

''It's been tried before, but this is the first time it has actually happened.''

Milton Fitch, a Seafirst vice president in charge of product development, said the Pride Card is one of about 15 ''affinity'' cards issued by the bank. Other affinity cards are used by such groups as Children's Hospital in Seattle, Alaska Airlines and the high-IQ Mensa Society.

''The cards allow the bank to share revenue with the affinity group, in this case the Pride Foundation,'' Fitch said. ''How much they get back is based on a formula based on the number of accounts developed through the card.''

Jim Toevs, 48, a former Seafirst vice president and current president of the Pride Foundation, is credited with persuading Seafirst to issue the Pride Card. A number of gay groups have made similar efforts in the past, he said, but financial institutions have been leery of associating with gay causes.

''Seafirst is to be congratulated,'' said Toevs, who was openly gay while a vice president at the bank for several years. ''The bank has been a socially conscious organization. And I probably had an advantage in setting this up because I knew all the players and I was on the inside.''

Fitch said Seafirst gave little thought to the possible fallout of having its cards associated with gay causes.

''We approach these things from a business development point of view,'' he said. ''These (card) programs are tailored to appeal to members of certain groups. It's just a good business decision.''

Taylor said the organization will receive approximately 0.5 percent of the value of all purchases made with the cards. The foundation has a first-year goal of issuing 10,000 cards and has forecast that 100,000 cards will be out in a few years.

Mailers advertising the card will go out to gays and lesbians and supporters of gay causes on a mailing list developed by a New York marketing firm. Bank officials say their decision to issue the cards was helped by surveys indicating that gay males in particular have higher than average educations and larger than average disposable incomes.

The foundation would get about $5 for every $1,000 charged on the cards, officals said.

Toevs said the foundation will expand its contributions to organizations throughout the country if the Pride Card takes off among the gay community and supporters of gay causes.

''We're moving from a regional foundation to a national one. We've already funded at least one program in Washington, D.C., and we are entertaining proposals from other parts of the country,'' he said.

''We think there is a tremendous market out there,'' Toevs added, noting that studies show one out of 10 Americans are gay or lesbian. ''That gives us a potential market of 25 million people in this country.''

MADRID, SPAIN (JUNE 1) UPI - Leftist Guatemalan guerrilla leaders Friday agreed to suspend sabotage operations in their 30-year-old war against the Guatemalan government and promised not to disrupt national elections set for November.

The agreement came Friday after five days of talks in Spain between the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Union and a group of nine Guatemalan political parties.

In exchange, the political parties agreed to let the rebels participate in a planned revision of the nation's constitution next year and called for right-wing paramilitary civil defense squads to be disbanded.

Although the agreement fell short of a full cease-fire, participants said it represented a step forward in efforts to end Guatemala's intermittent civil war, which human rights groups estimate has left about 100,000 people dead and some 40,000 missing.

The guerrillas said they recognized it was too late to become actively involved in the November elections, but demanded that they be allowed to take part in revising the constitution as part of their desire to be brought into the political process.

The rebel group, known by its Spanish acronym UNRG and made up of three factions, was represented by Rodrigo Asturias, 50, the son of Miguel Asturias, the 1957 Nobel laureate for literature.

Also known as Commander Gaspar, Asturias said he has been opposing right-wing governments in his country since he was 22.

The group of political parties, known as the National Reconciliation Council, was represented by Jorge Serrano.

The meeting was held under the ''good offices'' of the Spanish government and was mediated by Guatemalan Bishop Rodolfo Quezada. Francesc Vendrell was the United Nations observer.

Guatemalan rightist Mario Sandoval, 67, secretary-general of the National Liberation Movement, attended the closing days of the discussions and surprised observers by shaking hands with arch-rival Asturias.

''The guerrillas never thought that Mario Sandoval would ever sit down and negotiate with them,'' Sandoval said. ''But circumstances have changed and Soviet imperialism is at an end.''

''I am the oldest active politician in Guatemala, with 46 years in the army,'' he said, adding that he has always opposed leftists.

''Our objective was always to prevent the communization of Guatemala,'' Sandoval said.

Asturias said he still resents the United States for its role in organizing a 1954 military coup that ousted democratically elected President Jacobo Arbenz, but said the aim of the guerrillas now will be the ensure that Guatemalan society is restructured to benefit all levels of society.

Further meetings with other elements of Guatemalan society - the military, the government, the church - are planned to discuss other aspects of the peace process.

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 1) UPI - May Department Stores Co. will invest about $3.7 billion in 100 new department stores and more than 1,200 new Payless ShoeSource stores during the next five years, President Thomas A. Hays said Friday.

The expansion planned for 1990-1994, including remodeling and enlarging existing stores, would be the largest in company history, Hays said at the company's annual meeting.

This year, May will open 21 new department stores, the largest number of openings during one year in May history.

''We are concentrating our energies and efforts on operating quality department stores companies, a business that we know best and where our returns are among the best in the industry,'' Chairman and Chief Executive Officer David C. Farrell told shareholders.

May also is accelerating the expansion of Volume Shoe Corp., which is highly profitable, Farrell said.

Farrell said May is concentrating on increasing store-for-store sales ''by managing and merchandising each of our stores as individual units, improving customer service and developing the best talent.''

The company's electronic ''wanding,'' price look-up and credit card bar coding, processes that are reducing transaction time at May registers by 35 to 40 percent, Farrell said.

Hays also said the company is pursuing opportunities to make the space in its stores more productive.

''In 1989, our credit programs, expansion and remodeling of our best-performing stores and substantial investment in new stores contributed to improving sales per square foot,'' he said, noting sales improved to $157 per square foot from $107 in 1987.

The executives said they expect May to achieve record sales and earnings during 1990.

Farrell said the company was optimistic about the rest of the year, particularly the Christmas season, which has an additional shopping day between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (JUNE 1) UPI - President Alfredo Cristiani, marking the end of his first year in office, appealed for peace in strife-torn El Salvador Friday amid criticism from opponents and rebel sabotage that caused widespread blackouts.

''The untiring search for peace through political agreements will be our primary goal,'' Cristiani said in his State of the Nation address, wrapping up his first year in office.

Representatives of Cristiani's government are working to negotiate an end to 10 years of civil war with rebels of the leftist Farabundo Marti Liberation Front, or FMLN. But as the president delivered his hourlong speech before the Legislative Assembly, there were signs that divisions in Salvadoran society still run deep.

Rebel bombs left large portions of the country without electricty and military sources reported combat in the countryside to the north and east of the capital.

Opposition politicians have joined labor and human rights organizations in accusing Cristiani's government of not living up to its campaign promises to improve living conditions.

Cristiani's year-old conservative government has attracted national and international criticism for El Salvador's human rights record. The Nov. 16 murders of six Jesuit priests, their houskeeper and her teenage daughter by members of the army brought an international outcry and prompted the U.S. Congress to consider cutting military aid to El Salvador, set at $85 million this year.

Cristiani defended the army, which has continually come under attack for human rights violations, saying it was committed to the peace process and that individual abuses would be handled by the courts. He promised to continue a campaign to make the army more professional.

''We will continue working until we eradicate abusive, arbitrary and immoral attitudes within the ranks of the armed forces,'' Cristiani said.

The Jesuit case is seen as a test of El Salvador's ability to subject its politically powerful military to civilian rule, but U.S. officials and human rights organizations have criticized the government's handling of the case.

Maria Julia Hernandez, director of the Catholic Church's human rights office, told United Press International she believes there has been no improvement in the administration of justice during Cristiani's first year in office.

''The human rights situation is grave in El Salvador,'' Hernandez said. ''In no way has the situation improved during this year.''

She said workers, poor farmers and political activists continue to suffer death, disappearance, capture and torture at the hands of the military and security forces.

Cristiani reiterated his government's promise to protect the ''poorest of the poor,'' the one-third of all Salvadorans who do not have sufficient food or basic services.

Opposition Deputy Hugo Carrillo blasted the president's address, saying it was ''a rhetorical discourse, empty of content and out of touch with reality.''

''A year later, the poorest of the poor are even poorer,'' Carrillo said.

The FMLN has also protested Cristiani's economic policy, saying its privatization of state-owned interprises will contribute to the class struggle at the base of El Salvador's civil war.

A series of explosions were heard in San Salvador Thursday night and Friday morning as rebels blew up light posts to mark the beginning of Cristiani's second year in office.

A spokesman for the national electric company said the rebels had knocked out electricity in large areas of northern, central and eastern El Salvador.

Government troops and guerrilla forces also clashed early Friday in Guazapa, 15 miles north of San Salvador, and in San Felipe, 34 miles east of the capital, an Armed Forces Press Committee spokesman said.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 1) UPI - Hughes Aircraft Co. said Friday that the U.S. Navy has awarded it a $210 million contract to build two ultra-high-frequency communications satellites.

Hughes said the contract is a modification to a 1988 Navy contract with its Space and Communications Group unit that provided for one satellite with options for nine others. The earlier contract calls for work to be completed by September 1996.

The satellites are designed to be compatible with ground- and sea-based communications terminals that are already in service. They will replace existing spacecraft that now suport the communications network.

Hughes, a unit of GM Hughes Electronics, said the satellites can be launched on the NASA space shuttle or on the Atlas Centaur expendable launch vehicle.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev agreed Friday on a new U.S-Soviet grain pact, the fourth agreement to regulate sales since unexpected Soviet purchases emptied U.S. warehouses in the early 1970s.

Negotiators reached agreement on terms for the five-year pact two months ago but formal approval, officials hinted, was delayed so the pact could be signed at this week's summit meeting.

At a White House signing ceremony, Bush announced Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would sign the grain agreement. The two diplomats signed the document minutes later and Bush and Gorbachev stood behind them in the East Room.

The signing nearly was derailed because of U.S. unwillingness to sign a broad-spectrum agreement to normalize trade relations between the superpowers. Soviet officials indicated they might withhold action on the grain agreement if the trade agreement was shelved.

Sales under the new pact, which obligates the Kremlin to buy 50 million metric tons of U.S. grain, could be worth several billion dollars. The pricetag could be much higher if large amounts of soybeans are purchased in addition to the corn and wheat specified in the agreement.

The current agreement expires at the end of this year. It was written in 1983 and extended in 1988 when negotiators were unable to agree on a new pact. This year's agreement satisfied U.S. goals of covering more commodities and commiting the Soviets to buying larger amounts of grain and the Soviet goal of more freedom in what it buys.

Each side benefits from the grain pacts. The Kremlin gets a guaranteed source of grain. Even when President Carter imposed an embargo in 1980, the Kremlin was allowed to buy the minimum tonnage specified in the pact.

U.S. producers have the advantage of knowing the minimum purchase level and U.S. officials have the authority, in needed, to curtail Soviet purchases when they reach a high level. At present, the Kremlin must ask U.S. approval for purchases that exceed 12 million tons. The new pact would raise the trigger level to 14 million tons.

Under the new agreement, the Kremlin would be duty-bound to buy 10 million tons of U.S. grain a year, 1 million tons more than at present. The purchases would have to include at least 4 million tons each of corn and wheat.

For the first time, barley and sorghum would be counted toward the tonnage totals, instead of just wheat, corn and soybeans. The Kremlin also would be given more flexibility in meeting the annual tonnage target.

The Kremlin bought a record 21.7 million tons of U.S. corn and wheat during fiscal 1990. It has purchased 20.2 million tons so far this year. The United States is the pre-eminent grain supplier to the Soviet Union but sells relatively small amounts of other agricultural products.

However, the Soviet Union is expected to import 260 million pounds of chicken leg quarters this year, which would make it the largest market for U.S. broiler exports.

Despite recent bumper crops and Kremlin efforts to persuade farmers to sell more grain to the state, U.S. analysts expect the Soviet Union to be a grain importer for the forseeable future.

The Soviet Union became a major grain importer in the 1970s as a result of a decision to expand livestock production and improve the diet of its citizens.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev agreed Friday on a treaty to settle a superpower boundary dispute with roots in the U.S. purchase of Alaska from czarist Russia more than a century ago.

The agreement, which is subject to Senate ratification, redraws the 1,600-mile border separating Alaska from the Soviet Far East in the Bering Sea, the longest maritime boundary in the world.

The treaty was signed by Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at a White House ceremony as Bush and Gorbachev looked on.

As part of the accord, the United States will gain jurisdiction over some 13,200 square nautical miles of open sea - along with its fisheries and undersea mineral rights - previously claimed by the Soviets.

The agreement resolves a conflict that arose from different mapping techniques used by American and Russian cartographers who drew the original boundary line in 1867.

Czarist Russia ceded Alaska's 586,000 square miles of wilderness to the United States for $7.2 million in a deal widely derided in America as ''Seward's Folley,'' after the principal architect of the purchase, Secretary of State William Seward.

An overlapping of territorial waters was discovered in the 1970s, when the United States and Soviet Union each claimed fisheries jurisdiction over seas extending 200 miles from their shores.

Negotiations of a new maritime boundary began in 1981 and were concluded earlier this year.

The agreement cedes to the United States jurisdiction over three areas previously claimed by the Soviets as under their control, while the Soviet Union gains jurisdiction over a smaller, previously unregulated area.

In announcing the accord two weeks ago, Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said its chief benefit was that it redraws the boundary without enlarging the area of the Bering Sea known as the ''doughnut hole,'' where fisheries are without either U.S. or Soviet regulation.

The three zones gained by the United States lie southwest of the Aleutian Islands in the central Bering Sea and north of the Bering Strait in the Arctic Ocean. One area includes the Navarin Basin, where the Interior Department auctioned off tracts of the sea floor for offshore oil drilling in 1984.

The federal government kept those bids in escrow for a few years because of the boundary dispute, and the United States later sold the oil companies back their claims, said Jessica Gavora, a spokeswoman for Murkowski.

The agreement affects no land claims of either superpower, which are separated by as little as 3 miles of water in the Bering Strait.

As a treaty, the agreement is subject to Senate ratification. In addition, Congress must enact legislation allowing the United States to extend fisheries jurisdiction over the three Soviet areas gained under the pact.

GDANSK, POLAND (JUNE 1) UPI - Solidarity founder Lech Walesa said Friday the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize should go to Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia - which ''follow the road to independence in solitude.''

In a message to the Norwegian Committee of the Nobel Peace Prize, the 1983 Nobel Laureate said the award would be an ''expression of due recognition from the nations of the world'' for the people of the three Baltic republics.

On March 11, the Lithuanian Parliament declared the republic's independence from the Soviet Union, and Latvia and Estonia followed suit.

The decisions brought a strong negative reaction from Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his government, including an economic boycott of energy sources and a show of military force in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius.

''Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia are countries which follow the road to independence in solitude,'' Walesa said, bravely showing their ''attachment to the idea of freedom and self-determination.''

''This takes place despite numerous attempts at sparking off conflicts by means of military, political and economic pressure,'' he said.

He said that giving the prize to the Baltic republics could break the ''conspiracy of silence'' that has enveloped their efforts.

The Nobel Peace Prize is awarded annually by the Nobel Foundation to people and organizations for their outstanding achievements in the domain of respect and protection of human dignity and freedom. The award is usually announced in the autumn.

''The prize ... would create the hope that the governments of Western countries would be willing to work out an ethical style of political activity vis-a-vis smaller countries,'' Walesa said in his message.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 1) UPI - An Air Force Delta 2 rocket successfully boosted a $273 million German astronomy satellite into orbit Friday on a flight to study X-ray emissions from the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe.

The 128-foot-tall Delta 2, equipped with nine strap-on solid-fuel boosters for extra power, flashed to life at 5:48 p.m. EDT - 13 minutes late because of a private aircraft in the launch zone - and quickly climbed away from launch pad 17 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

About 43 minutes after liftoff, officials said, the ''ROSAT'' satellite was gently kicked away from its booster as the spacecraft sailed over the Indian Ocean and its solar panels unfolded as planned to begin drawing life-giving power from the sun.

The 5,333-pound satellite is equipped with a high-tech telescope to study X-rays from high-energy astronomical targets ranging from super-hot stars and galaxies to exploding suns and suspected black holes.

The flight plan called for the robot observatory to operate in a 360-mile-high orbit carrying it 53 degrees to either side of the equator, within sight of the main control station at Oberpfaffenhofen, West Germany.

''The ROSAT X-ray satellite ... was successfully separated from the Delta second stage,'' said a NASA spokeswoman. ''After separation the solar panels deployed.

Jack Barker, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, identified the aircraft blamed for the launch delay as a private Beech Kingair, saying, ''The whole incident is under investigation.''

Once in operation, ROSAT's high-tech telescope will map the sky in an unprecedented search for X-ray sources, focusing on more than 1,400 targets of interest.

ROSAT is a joint venture between West Germany, Britain and the United States, which supplied an $18 million instrument and the $63 million Delta 2 rocket. The West German contribution was $170 million while Britain chipped in $35 million for one of three instruments on board.

The total cost of the project through launch was $336 million, with the United States committed to spending $5 million a year on data analysis.

While visible light from deep space can be studied from Earth's surface, high-energy ultraviolet radiation, X-rays and gamma rays are blocked by the planet's atmosphere.

But stars, galaxies and other objects shine in a variety of wavelengths depending on what chemical and nuclear processes are going on. The higher the energy, the shorter the wavelength of the resulting light. X-rays fall between ultraviolet radiation and gamma rays on the energy spectrum.

By studying X-ray ''light'' from deep space, astronomers can gain crucial insights into the processes that operate in the hearts of violent stars and galaxies in a bid to understand more about the structure and evolution of the universe.

ROSAT originally was scheduled for launch aboard a space shuttle, but in the wake of the 1986 Challenger disaster, West German space officials asked NASA to change plans and launch it aboard an unmanned rocket.

The ROSAT mission represents the most ambitious X-ray astronomy effort ever mounted, and scientists say the results should revolutionize knowledge about the high-energy region of the electromagnetic spectrum.

''ROSAT's power is as an imaging telescope,'' NASA program scientist Alan Bunner said. ''It has the capability to produce beautiful images with unprecedented resolution. It will be ... the fodder scientists will use for years to come to identify targets for detailed study.''

A major goal of the ROSAT program is to identify X-ray targets that will be studied in even greater detail later this decade by NASA's Advanced X-ray Astrophysics Facility, one of four ''great observatories'' scheduled for launch over the next 10 years.

The first was the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, launched April 25 from the shuttle Discovery.

The results from ROSAT will complement the visible light studies of Hubble and the investigations that will be carried out when the delayed shuttle Columbia finally blasts off carrying a $150 million set of four telescopes including an X-ray spectrograph.

But unlike the X-ray instrument aboard Columbia, designed to measure the energy distribution of radiation from deep space, ROSAT will provide visual images of X-ray targets.

TOWSON, MD (JUNE 1) UPI - A congresswoman and a former police officer scuffled Friday when she refused to accept a court summons in a murder case, police said.

Rep. Helen Bentley, R-Md., and the process server each accused the other of assault and threatened to press charges over the incident at her district office, police said.

Baltimore County police said the process server, identified as John Burns, 40, apparently attempted to deliver a court summons to the congresswoman about 3:15 p.m., but she refused to take it, saying she would first have to check with a congressional lawyer.

Burns apparently placed the summons, issued in a 5-year-old murder case, on a desk and turned to leave, police spokesman Jay Miller said. A scuffle ensued, police said.

There was no immediate indication why Bentley's testimony might be relevant to the murder case.

Both Bentley and Burns - who told authorities he is a former Baltimore city police officer who works for a firm called Citation Investigations in Owings Mills, Md. - said the other was responsible for the assault.

Miller said Burns told police the congresswoman, who stands about 5-foot-2 ''put her hands on his throat and pushed him against the wall.''

''She said he pushed her away,'' Miller said.

There was no immediate indication whether either Bentley or Burns followed through with their threat to press charges.

Simple battery is a misdemeanor offense in Maryland. Both Bentley and Burns were told that, if they wish to place charges, they must go before a Baltimore County District Court commissioner, police said.

Because an officer did not witness the altercation, charges could not be immediately brought, Miller said.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (JUNE 1) UPI - Golden Nugget Inc., will attempt to pay down its massive debt over the next few years in an effort to improve its balance sheets, Chairman Steve Wynn said this week.

However, Wynn also told shareholders meeting at The Mirage Thursday that the company will continue to explore its options for growth. He said expansion plans include construction of a 1,200-room hotel tower at the Laughlin casino and possibly building a new resort next to The Mirage on the Strip.

Executives also will explore entry into any new gaming jurisdictions that open up in the next decade, Wynn said.

Wynn said Golden Nugget Inc. is not going into a shell in the coming decade.

''We're going to spend $200 million in Laughlin this year and we have plans for the land here,'' Wynn said. ''We'll go through changes.''

He said the 1980s was a time of expansion for the company. But now it's time for the Golden Nugget to reduce nearly $1 billion borrowed to finance the ventures of the last decade.

The company spent about $400 million to covert the Golden Nugget in downtown Las Vegas from a Fremont Street casino into a 1,900-room resort.

Last year, the company opened the 3,000-room Mirage at a cost of $630 million.

''The debt is on the facilities and not the company,'' Wynn said. ''Paying down our debt will make us stronger and improve our balance sheets. That's the direction we're going to take.''

In the last few years, Golden Nugget has repurchased about 22 million shares of its stock at a cost of $302 million, or $14.08 a share. He said the company wouldn't be buying back stock now as long as the price continues to rise.

Golden Nugget closed at 36 1/2 Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange, a nearly 30 percent increase since last summer and Wynn told shareholders the stock is still undervalued.

Executives said the company's immediate plans call for concentrating on expanding and developing the property in Laughlin, a booming gaming community on the Colorado River about 100 miles south of Las Vegas.

Purchased in 1988, the roomless, 22,000 square-foot casino will feature a new 1,500-space parking garage in a few weeks. And, plans are on the drawing board for a new 1,200-room tower at the Golden Nugget-Laughlin, Wynn said.

''Our little jewel will be the top banana in Laughlin,'' Wynn said. ''People are saying Laughlin is getting overbuilt. It probably is, but we do our best in crowded situations.''

The company plans to borrow $125 million from a consortium of banks for the renovation project. Wynn said Golden Nugget will put another $65 million into the venture.

Hotel executives said the name of the Golden Nugget-Laughlin will be changed to Beau Rivage once the new hotel tower is completed, possibly by 1992.

BARKHAMSTED, CT (JUNE 4) UPI - The historic Hitchcock Chair Co., famous for its hand-crafted rockers and stenciled furniture, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors as the company works out a plan to repay its debts, officials said Friday.

Hitchcock abruptly shut down all operations on May 22, putting about 150 employees out of work, after it was declared in default on a $6 million loan from Bank of Boston.

''The company has filed for bankruptcy and we're hopeful that we'll be able to restructure under Chapter 11 and get back into operation soon,'' Alan MacKenzie, president of Hitchcock, said Friday.

The company filed for protection Thursday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Hartford.

''The reason we're optimistic is that there is an investor group that is interested in the company,'' said MacKenzie.

A spokesman for London & Virginia Corp. Inc., the prospective buyer based in Winsted, Conn., said his company was preparing a bid for Hitchcock that may bepresented to creditors in a few days.

Ken Bartle, president of London & Virginia, said the offer could include some new financing to help Hitchcock resume manufacturing.

London & Virginia owns Buckingham Galleries, which bought Hitchcock's retail stores last summer.

''They have a vested interest in keeping a source for this fine product,'' said MacKenzie.

MacKenzie blamed Connecticut's soft real estate market in part for the company's financial problems.

When he and Langdon C. Johnson, chairman and chief executive officer of Hitchcock, bought the company, they planned to sell a $4.5 million plant in New Hartford, Conn., and then consolidate manufacturing at the company's Riverton facilities nearby, according MacKenzie.

''The plan was to sell that (the New Hartford plant) and give that cash to the bank to reduce our debt,'' said MacKenzie.

But they have been unable to sell the property and have had heavy expenses in carrying the property, he said.

''That's created a crisis for us,'' said MacKenzie.

Hitchcock Chair Co. gained fame in the early 1800s. From 1826 to 1866, the picturesque village of Riverton in northwestern Connecticut was known as Hitchcockville.

After World War II, production was revived and Hitchcock rockers and other furniture became popular as examples of New England craftsmanship.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - The corporate divorce of retail clothing giant Esprit de Corp. founders Susie and Doug Tompkins became final Friday when the couple agreed Mrs. Tompkins would buy out her estranged husband for an undisclosed sum.

A spokesman for the company said Mrs. Tompkins and three partners would take over the company's U.S. operations. Tompkins will own Esprit's operations in southern Europe and maintain his holdings in Esprit international units.

The terms of the sale were set less than 24 hours before proposals were received for the sale of the company through Goldman, Sachs and Co. It ended a sometimes bitter, two-year conflict between the couple, which founded the retail giant in 1968.

Sales have been estimated at $800 million annually.

''This agreement will allow Esprit to continue to serve as a model for innovative design and for a humanistic approach to corporate culture,'' Mrs. Tompkins said. She said in an interview she would continue to design the firm's clothes.

The investors group included Isaac Stein, an Esprit director and investor; Michael Ying, a director since 1989 and chairman of the Esprit Far East Group; and Bruce Katz, founder of the Rockport Shoe Co.

Stein will be chairman while longtime acting president Corrado Federico will continue as CEO, Mrs. Tompkins said.

Tompkins said in a statement issued by the company he would devote all his time to social causes.

The Tompkins separated in 1988, at about the time they began to differ over the direction of the company. Both continued with Esprit but their differences split the company.

Esprit de Corp. designs, wholesales and retails women's and children's sportswear. It sells products through more than 2,000 stores in 44 countries.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - Attorney General Richard Thornburgh Friday approved a joint operating arrangement for two Las Vegas, Nev., newspapers

The JOA would combine the business and production operations of the Las Vegas Sun and the Las Vegas Review-Journal. The papers - bitter rivals for years - would maintain separate editorial and reporting staffs.

In applying for approval of the JOA, the papers claimed the financially-ailing Sun is a ''failing newspaper.'' They also argued that approval of the JOA was in keeping with the Newspaper Preservation Act by allowing continued publication of two newspapers in Las Vegas.

''This JOA would preserve an independent editorial voice in Las Vegas,'' Thornburgh said. ''Approval serves the purposes of the Newspaper Preservation Act.''

Thornburgh's approval grants a limited antitrust exemption for the papers to combine their business operations. Under the department's regulations, the combination can take place 10 days after issuance of the approval.

The Newspaper Preservation Act allows the Justice Department to grant a limited exemption to newspapers from antitrust laws when one of them is in probable danger of financial failure.

No change in ownership of the newspapers is involved and the deal mandates that both papers maintain independent and separate newsrooms. Advertising, printing and circulation departments of the papers would be merged.

The Sun will become an afternoon paper publishing on weekdays and the Review-Journal will publish only in the morning. A single edition with the names of both papers would be published on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Review-Journal is owned by Donrey Media Group and the Sun is owned by the Sun Co., which is owned by the Greenspun family. Sun founder Hank Greenspun died the month before the proposed merger was announced.

The Sun lost $10.7 million from 1982 through 1988. Under the agreement, the Sun would receive 10 percent of the two papers' combined income. The Review-Journal would keep 90 percent of the revenue and receive an estimated $20 million in Community Cable TV stock owned by the Greenspun family.

TORRANCE, CA (JUNE 3) UPI - VSI Corp., the world's largest supplier of titanium nuts and bolts for commercial and military aircraft, said Friday the Defense Department has lifted a 14-month suspension on purchasing the products from its Los Angeles plant.

The suspension at the plant stemmed from charges by three former VSI employees that the company had omitted and falsified tests at the plant during the past 14 years. Investigators raided the plant, located in the Chatsworth area of Los Angeles, in February 1989 and seized 50 boxes of evidence.

The allegations led to the federal government's largest whistle-blower case to date. Two VSI officers pleaded guilty three weeks ago in Seattle to one count of conspiracy to defraud the government and another pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and three counts of mail fraud.

Sentencing is set for Aug. 20 for the trio.

The company, a unit of Fairchild Insutries Inc., agreed to pay $3.5 million in fines and court costs and said it would pay $14.5 million to settle a civil suit filed in federal court in Los Angeles.

A prosecutor said that ''hundreds of millions'' of untested bolts had been used on military and commerical aircraft during the 14-year period.

The company said in Friday's announcement that the government has continued to purchase products from other VSI plants.

''At no time during the investigation of the charges did the Justice Department find evidence that aircraft safety was jeopardized by testing discrepancies at the Chatsworth plant,'' the company said.

''We've already made management and operational changes at VSI that safeguard the integrity of the inspection process,'' said Ben W. Prescott, the newly appointed president of Fairchild Fastener Group. The Torrance, Calif., groupincludes VSI's fastener plants.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev sought to propel superpower relations beyond the Cold War Friday with a treaty to cut chemical weapons, a breakthrough in the effort to reduce long-range nuclear arms and a landmark trade accord linked to reform in the Soviet Union.

Following intense last-minute bargaining by their foreign ministers, Bush and Gorbachev met in the East Room of the White House to announce those accords, as well as a variety of other agreements involving, among other things, nuclear cooperation and greater maritime freedom.

Gorbachev said the agreements ''represent an event of momentous importance not only for our countries but also for the world.''

''What we will be signing, I think, is the best demonstration that we are ready to participate at the level of our responsibility in building a new civilization,'' he said.

Bush boasted that the chemical weapons treaty would ''eliminate the great majority of chemical weapons that our countries have stockpiled'' and he said he and Gorbachev have set down ''major agreed provisions of a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty'' whose details will be worked out in the months ahead.

Negotiators have struggled for the past year to resolve several difficult issues that were blocking agreement on a START Treaty, which would be the first move by the superpowers to reduce the most dangerous long-range nuclear weapons in their arsenals.

Secretary of State James Baker told reporters after the signing ceremony that the leaders had settled ''almost all of the major substantive issues'' and believe they will be able ''to sign a treaty later this year.''

''We may not agree on everything and indeed we don't agree on everything but we believe in one great truth,'' said Bush. ''The world has waited long enough. The Cold War must end.''

In addition to the arms agreement, Bush and Gorbachev agreed on a long-term grain sales pact between the two nations and a trade agreement that Gorbachev had badly wanted to bolster the faltering Soviet economy.

It was not known until the leaders appeared that the trade and grain pacts would be announced and, only hours before the signing, it had appeared unlikely that the two sides would be able to reach agreement on the pact.

Gorbachev's handling of the independence movement in Lithuania and other Soviet Baltic states may still prove an obstacle to implementing the trade agreement. It needs to be approved by Congress, where many members of both parties will be reluctant to reward the Soviet leader softens his stand on Lithuania.

After the signing, Baker said the trade pact was never ''formally'' tied to the Lithuanian crisis, but was directly linked to better Soviet emigration laws and would not be sent to Congress until those laws were passed.

In addition to the more formal pacts, the two leaders agreed to intensify efforts to reach a conventional arms treaty, which they said was essential in light of the dramatic changes in Europe.

The agreements allowed Bush and Gorbachev to declare that with more than a full day of negotiations still ahead, the summit was a complete and even historic success.

It also allowed the two men to head Saturday to a full day of talks at Bush's Camp David, Md., retreat, where they are now expected to delve into more broad issues and perhaps differences over the reunification of Germany.

Baker, in fact, stressed that despite the progress made Friday, German reunification and the Lithuanian question were still major differences separating the two superpowers.

He added that there were three sticking points preventing the United States and Soviet Union from signing a formal nuclear arms reduction treaty. Those involved the shipment of nuclear arms to other countries to circumvent limits, the flight testing of heavy missiles and the status of the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The accomplishments of Friday left both Bush and Gorbachev free to end their summit without pressure for additional concrete deals.

Their relaxation was evident at the signing ceremony and later at a dinner hosted by Gorbachev at the Soviet Embassy where the two leaders, both smiling, praised their accords and indicated they were due in large measure to the progress they made at their first full summit last December in Malta.

Bush called the agreements ''stand as a memorial not to the past, but to the future - a memorial to wars that need never be fought.''

The tone was a stark contrast to one that had dominated the summit earlier

Friday.

At a breakfast meeting with congressional leaders at the embassy, Gorbachev seized the initiative, stating bluntly that he would not ''beg for anything'' in a trade agreement with the United States, nor tolerate a great deal of outside interference.

''Certainly, we're not asking for a free ride. We'll be asking for normal credits,'' said Gorbachev. ''For us it would be humiliating if we were to beg for something from you and, of course, hopeless.''

Many of the U.S. lawmakers who met with Gorbachev have been very concerned by the Soviet's economic sanctions imposed on Lithuania and there is a good chance the U.S.-Soviet pact could encounter difficulties on Capitol Hill as long as the Baltic situation remains unresolved.

After the signing, U.S. officials went to great lengths to insist there was never any formal linkage between Lithuania and the trade pact, even though the administration, pressed by Congress, had made clear it threatened the climate for better economic relations.

However, administration aides said Bush told Gorbachev that most-favored trade status that could boost Soviet exports to the United States would not go forward without passage of liberalized Soviet emigration laws.

''He (Gorbachev) promised to keep working on the emigration legislation,'' said deputy White House press secretary Roman Popadiuk, ''and we expect that the trade agreement will go forward once this emigration law is passed.''

Earlier Friday, Gorbachev strongly defended his position on Lithuania, saying he could have been more harsh in his sanctions but has not been because he did not want to jeopardize his economic reform program.

''This is a test for perestroika,'' he said, referring to his program of economic and political restructuring.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine sparred with the Soviet president, predicting at one point that a poll of Lithuanians would show that most support independence.

''Fine, let them do it and we will agree, but only through a constitutional process,'' Gorbachev responded.

On the other main point of contention, the Soviet leader told the lawmakers that he stressed to Bush the Soviet Union had no problem with the United States keeping a military presence in Europe and did not ''fear'' Germany.

However, he argued that the issue of whether a unified Germany remain a part of NATO was ''a question of imbalance'' and he warned against the West trying to ''squeeze out'' the Soviet Union for an advantage.

As the two presidents met for the second round of summit sessions, first ladies Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev travelled to Boston and Wellesley, Mass., where they addressed the graduating class at the prestigious Wellesley College.

Mrs. Bush, whose invitation had been criticized by some students as ''inappropriate,'' in good humored but pointed remarks, defended her career as a wife and mother, reminding the crowd of 5,000 that the school was known as a place where ''diversity is not just tolerated but embraced.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev worked their away around a conflict over Lithuania Friday and signed a landmark trade agreement the Soviet leader had eagerly sought to bolster his nation's sagging economy.

''President Gorbachev, I am very gratified at what we have accomplished over the past couple of days,'' Bush told his Soviet guest during a White House ceremony.

The leaders' approval of the accord had been clouded by the Kremlin's economic sanctions against Lithuania, which is seeking greater independence from Moscow, and the failure to pass a law easing Soviet emigration restrictions.

Underlining that point, Bush said he is ''looking forward to the passage of'' the new Soviet emigration act.

Indeed, Secretary of State James Baker announced shortly after the signing ceremony that the trade package would not be submitted to Congress until the new emigration law, now pending, is enacted.

The administration had used the commercial agreement was a bargaining chip in its effort to get Gorbachev to ease off Lithuania. In the end Friday, the trade deal went through without any apparent Soviet movement, but Baker reminded reporters that Bush recently said it would be ''extraordinarily difficult'' to win congressional approval of the deal without a change in the status quo in the Baltics.

With that congressional caveat in place, the administration apparently decided to give Gorbachev the political victory on trade to bolster his position at home.

Baker refused on to say what Bush told Gorbachev about the situation in the Baltics, but offered no indication the U.S. side exacted any commitments from the Soviet leader.

When asked if the talks had given him any reason to believe that the outlook for political dialogue in the Baltics had improved, Baker tersely replied, ''We have been hopeful and we remain hopeful.''

Just hours before the signing ceremony, Gorbachev said he was ''quite worried'' about the course of his talks with Bush on trade and economics, but in the end he left the White House with a document trade experts said would be a valuable political symbol to take home, where there has been near-panic food buying.

The trade pact would help the Soviet Union receive the lowest available tariffs in the United States. This, in turn, could entice U.S. and other foreign companies to establish manufacturing joint ventures with Soviet concerns.

The agreement also would lead to the removal of long-standing commercial restrictions, making the Soviets eligible for U.S. credit and guarantee programs provided by the Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corp.

In the bargaining, the United States won concessions on taxes and investments to aid U.S. businesses trading with the Soviets, software copyright protection and a promise by the Soviets to begin repaying $674 million in debt from the lend-lease program of World War II.

In a related development, Bush and Gorbachev also agreed to a five-year grain agreement under which the Soviets will increase their guaranteed purchases of American farm goods - a major component of the U.S.-Soviet trade relationship.

There is considerable room for growth in U.S.-Soviet commerce. Last year, trade between the countries totaled about $5.6 billion, up from $3.5 billion the year before, but still a mere fraction of U.S. trade with other nations.

The agreement, however, does not guarantee lower tariffs. The 1974 Trade Act requires a number of conditions be met before a country is granted most-favored-nation trading status, which allows countries to receive the lowest possible tariffs. Among them is the Jackson-Vanik amendment requirement that nations allow the free emigration of citizens and a waiver of its provisions would be required.

The trade deal also is contingent on lifting some other legal restrictions on U.S.-Soviet trade - which gives Congress another chance to pass on the deal.

During a morning meeting with congressional leaders, Gorbachev heard concern over Soviet economic sanctions imposed on Lithuania.

In that regard, Gorbachev said, a ''favorable gesture'' from Congress would ''be very helpful mostly, I would say, politically,'' because most-favored-nation trade status would have little effect in the near term ''because really the trade relationship now between us is very primitive.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev stepped in to break a deadlock Friday between U.S.-Soviet negotiators on a treaty that would reduce the superpowers' arsenal of long-range nuclear weapons.

Negotiators - in a hectic afternoon of talks - worked out thorny issues on how to handle land-based mobile missles, and both sides agreed that a treaty limiting strategic weaponry should be signed before the end of the year.

The expected agreement would reduce strategic arms by about 35 percent.

In a second busy day of the summit, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said early Friday that ''differences remain in key elements on a strategic arms reduction treaty.'' Soviet spokesman Arkady Maslennikov interjected that Ftizwater was ''maybe too pessimistic in stressing the differences.''

As the two spokemen were talking to reporters, Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met to iron out the major START differences, something they had talked about since the Dec. 2-3 superpower summit in Malta.

Bush and Gorbachev announced at a White House signing ceremony that major differences were settled. They included:

-The total number of deployed intercontinental ballistic missiles, their launchers, deployed submarine-launched ballistic missiles and heavy bombers will be reduced to no more than 1,600 per side. The total number of warheads attributed to these weapons will be reduced to no more than 6,000.

Of these, no more than 4,900 will be warheads on ICBM and SLBMs, no more than 1,540 will be on warheads on heavy ICBMs, and no more than 1,100 will be warheads on mobile ICBMs - a class of weapons the United States does not have.

Baker told reporters that three issues still needed work, including possible limits on missile testing and how to deal with the Soviet Backfire bomber, a long-range weapon the Kremlin argues is not a strategic weapon.

Depending upon the type of bomber and loading configuration, U.S. bombers will count as carrying anywhere between one and 10 warheads, even though maximum loads are up to 24 warheads.

Other problems include possible limits on testing of heavy missiles and language on non-circumvention of the treaty.

The negotiators earlier had settled questions of rail-mobile missiles, such as the Soviet 10-warhead SS-24 and the 10-warhead rail MX the United States is developing. But road-mobile issues - ones affecting the already fielded Soviet one-warhead SS-25 and the similar Midgetman being developed by the United States - had not been settled.

The late bargaining resolved verification issues on road-mobile missiles and set the 1,100-warhead sublimit. And it barred Moscow from trying to make its huge SS-18 mobile.

A U.S. arms control expert said Moscow was ready to sign a side-letter declaring that the Backfire bomber cannot be used over intercontinental range - greater than 3,300 miles - which the U.S. fears. ''But we continue to differ on some other aspects that might be in that statement,'' the U.S. spokesman said.

The cuts announced Friday involve Soviet, rather than American weapons, and would appear to be concessions on the part of Gorbachev.

The START treaty, when signed and ratified by both sides, would mean a cut of about 30 percent to 35 percent in nuclear warheads on both sides, with the Soviets taking a larger cut since they have a larger inventory.

The two heads of state also agreed in the final language of a joint declaration ''that early conclusion of an agreement on conventional arms forces in Europe is essential to the future stability and security of the continent.''

The two leaders said they ''committed themselves to intensifying the pace of their negotiations in Vienna and to reaching rapid agreement on all outstanding issues.''

Also signed was an agreement to begin destruction of chemical weapons until both sides reach a level of 5,000 tons, or about 20 percent of existing U.S. stockpiles, by the year 2002. Moscow will have to destroy more chemical weapons than the United States. Both sides also agreed to stop chemical weapons production when the treaty takes effect.

The two countries will cooperate to call a conference in the year 2000 to try to find a way for a universal ban on all chemical warfare weapons, long a goal of Bush and Gorbachev as well.

In additon, two protocols were signed setting out inspection and on-site verification for monitoring underground nuclear explosions. The two protocols open the way for a possible further reduction in the size of underground nuclear tests and cutting back future tests.

Treaties dating from the 1970s on peaceful nuclear tests and restricting the size of test blasts have languished before the Senate awaiting the protocols.

(JUNE 1) UPI - The superpower summit meeting between presidents Bush and Gorbachev in Washington, D-C, hit snags today in the areas of both arms control and a trade agreement. Both leaders have called in negotiators in an attempt to smooth over the final obstacles to a major new arms-reduction pact- which could yet come by the end of the day. A signing ceremony was postponed at least one hour.

The hurdle in the way of a new trade agreement is both simpler and more complicated. Five former U-S agriculture secretaries and 26 U-S farm groups and corporations joined today to ask President Bush to grant the Soviet Union most-favored-nation trade status. But Bush is holding up the agreement over concerns about the Soviet economic blockade of Lithuania.

NATO leaders have their eyes on the summit and any new military agreements coming out of this weekend's meetings in Washington. But in Brussels, Belgium, today the alliance leaders re-affirmed their commitment to seeking an early agreement on conventional arms with the Warsaw Pact. NATO will probably make a formal request for an early arms agreement at next week's meeting of its foreign ministers in Scotland.

A car-bomb in Miami today threw a woman from her van, but she was NOT injured. The blast destroyed the van and scattered debris as far as a block away. But the F-B-I says the woman escaped injury because she had the van door open, and the force of the blast was vented outside. The woman worked for strike-ridden Eastern Airlines, but the F-B-I said there is NO immediate evidence her job has any connection with the blast.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 1) UPI - After presenting about a dozen witnesses over a month's time, prosecutors Friday rested their case in the retrial of Raymond Buckey, the sole remaining defendant in the notorious McMartin Pre-School molestation case.

''The people rest, your honor,'' Deputy District Attorney Joseph Martinez told Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg.

Weisberg in turn told jurors that they must not come to any conclusions about the case until they have heard from the defense. ''Your job is to keep an open mind and not form fixed opinions about the case until the case is completed,'' he said.

The defense phase of the retrial is scheduled to begin Monday. At that point, defense attorneys were expected to ask the judge to dismiss the charges for lack of evidence.

In making their case, prosecutors presented about a dozen witnesses, including three girls who accused Buckey of molesting them, but who in general were unable to recall details of the alleged molestations.

Prosecutors also called the girls' parents and a pediatrician who testified that she found genital scarring in the girls suggesting sexual abuse. The defense has argued that medical evidence of molestations is inexact.

Buckey, 32, a teacher at the now-defunct Virginia McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach, is being retried on eight molestation charges for allegedly sexually abusing three girls at the nursery from 1979 until 1983.

He has steadfastly denied the charges. Defense attorney Danny Davis has long argued that social workers manipulated and programmed the alleged victims into falsey believing they had been molested.

Buckey told reporters Friday that he believes he will be acquitted.

''It's almost a question of whether we should even put on a case, because I saw so much reasonable doubt in (the prosecution's) case,'' he said.

Buckey and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, 63, were acquitted in January of 52 other molestation counts at the first trial in the case. Jurors deadlocked on the eight counts on which Buckey is being retried.

The first trial, which involved the alleged molestations of 11 children, lasted nearly three years and cost more than $13 million, making it the longest, costliest criminal trial in U.S. history.

The retrial, now in its second month, is expected to last about six months at the most.

In contrast with the dozen prosecution witnesses presented at the retrial, prosecutors at Buckey's first trial presented 61 witnesses over a 14-month period. When first filed in 1984, the case was also the largest sex abuse case in U.S. history. However, all of the charges against five co-defendants were dismissed prior to the first trial on grounds of insufficient evidence.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - Attorney General Richard Thornburgh approved a plan Friday to merge the business operations of the Las Vegas Sun and rival Las Vegas Review-Journal.

Under the joint operating arrangment, the newspapers will maintain separate editorial and reporting staffs. There is no change in ownership involved, only a merging of advertising, printing and circulation departments.

The Sun, which has been a morning paper, will become an afternoon paper publishing on weekdays. The Review-Journal will publish only in the morning; it has been publishing an afternoon edition.

A single edition with the names of both papers would be published on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Sun and the Review-Journal, bitter rivals for years, announced last August plans to merge the business and production functions of their newspapers in a move aimed at saving the financially ailing Sun.

''This JOA would preserve an independent editorial voice in Las Vegas,'' Thornburgh said in agreeing to the arrangement. ''(And), approval serves the purposes of the Newspaper Preservation Act,'' which allows the Justice Department to grant newspapers a limited exemption from antitrust laws when one of them is in danger of financial ruin.

Review-Journal General Manager Dave Osborn said the papers would move quickly toward finalizing the merger, probably by July 1.

The Review-Journal is owned by Donrey Media Group and the Las Vegas Sun is owned by the Sun Company, which is owned by the Greenspun family. Sun founder Hank Greenspun died in July 1989, the month before the proposed merger was announced.

The Sun lost $10.7 million from 1982 through 1988. Under the agreement, the Sun would receive 10 percent of the two papers' combined income. The Review-Journal would keep 90 percent of the revenue and receive an estimated $20 million in Community Cable TV stock owned by the Greenspun family.

The Review-Journal is Nevada's largest newspaper, and is the flagship of the Donrey Media Group, which owns 59 daily newspapers in the United States. The Sun is the third largest newspaper in the state.

CARSON CITY, NE (JUNE 1) UPI - A federal appeals court temporarily halted the execution Friday of condemned killer Thomas Baal, who said he wanted to die and asked a judge to send him a prostitute as his last request.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco voted 2-1 late Thursday to grant a stay petition filed by Baal's parents, who claimed their son was not mentally competent to waive further appeals.

Baal, who has repeatedly said he wants to be executed, had been scheduled to receive a lethal injection at Nevada State Prison shortly after midnight. The appeals court issued its stay 90 minutes before the scheduled execution.

State Prison Director Ron Angelone said Baal ''was upset by the 11th-hour petition. He had prepared himself for the execution.''

He had already eaten his last meal of fried chicken and mashed potatoes and had what he thought was a final meeting with his parents, Edwin and Doris Baal, when the court voted to stop the execution.

The stay order will remain in effect until noon Saturday, allowing time for the court to consider the case. Justices Harry Pregerson and James Browning voted for the delay; Justice Alex Kozinski dissented.

A new, tentative time was set for the lethal injection. Glen Whorton, a prison spokesman, said that if the stay expires or the court rejects the appeals, the execution would be carried out at 10:05 p.m. Saturday (1:05 a.m. EDT Sunday).

In a telephone hookup from his prison cell earlier Thursday, Baal told U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben, ''Let's get the ball rolling.'' The condemned man also asked the judge, as a last request, to ''bring me a hooker.''

McKibben refused to stay the execution, saying Baal was competent to waive his rights to further appeal, but his parents took their request for a stay to the federal appeals court in San Francisco.

Pregerson made it clear he believed McKibben should have held a full-fledged competency hearing for Baal. The justice noted that Baal suffered brain damage as a youngster and has had suicidal tendencies since then.

The condemned man would have been the fifth executed in Nevada since reinstatement of the death penalty in 1976 and the 129th nationwide.

Baal's refusal to appeal left him scheduled for execution just 27 months after he fatally stabbed and robbed a woman bus driver who gave him a $20 handout.

Assistant U.S. Public Defender Patrick Flanagan was ready to file a petition for a stay but Baal, in a meeting with his lawyer this week, declined any further legal challenge.

Baal said he was on a marijuana and crack cocaine binge at the time of the killing.

Baal spent Wednesday night listening to the radio and telephoning friends.

He was convicted of fatally stabbing Frances Maves, a Las Vegas shuttle bus driver, on Feb. 26, 1988. Maves was checking her engine when Baal approached and asked for help. She gave him $20 but he pulled a knife and forced her into her car, which was parked behind the bus. She first tried to calm him and then tried to grab the knife.

Baal, according to court documents, told her, ''You sholdn't have done that. Now you pay. I sentence you to death.'' He stabbed her twice, pushed her body otside the vehicle, turned her over and stabbed her six more times. He took her car and purse with $120.

The car was later abandoned and Baal was arrested hitchhiking outside of Reno. He has been mental institutions several times after trying suicide, as evidenced by several scars on his arms.

At the time of the killing he was on parole from Hawaii where he had served time for burglary and auto theft. He had returned to his home in Colorado, but then left without permission and ended up in Las Vegas.

Baal told interviewers last weekend he was afraid but ''It's time to go.''

He said Maves was the first person he had ever killed but he got the nickname of ''Scrappydoo'' from gang fights he was in as a youth.

Baal said he would probably be buried in Mesa, where his parents and his sister live. He said his family tried to persuade him to go forward with his appeals but he told them, ''I've got to do what I've got to do.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev worked their away around a conflict over Lithuania Friday and signed a landmark trade agreement the Soviet leader had eagerly sought to bolster his nation's sagging economy.

''President Gorbachev, I am very gratified at what we have accomplished over the past couple of days,'' Bush told his Soviet guest during a White House ceremony.

The leaders' approval of the accord had been clouded by the Kremlin's economic sanctions against Lithuania, which is seeking greater independence from Moscow, and the failure to pass a law easing Soviet emigration restrictions.

Underlining that point, Bush said he is ''looking forward to the passage of'' the new Soviet emigration act.

Indeed, Secretary of State James Baker announced shortly after the signing ceremony that the trade package would not be submitted to Congress until the new emigration law, now pending, is enacted.

The administration had used the commercial agreement was a bargaining chip in its effort to get Gorbachev to ease off Lithuania. In the end Friday, the trade deal went through without any apparent Soviet movement, but Baker reminded reporters that Bush recently said it would be ''extraordinarily difficult'' to win congressional approval of the deal without a change in the status quo in the Baltics.

When asked if the talks had given him any reason to believe that the outlook for political dialogue in the Baltics had improved, Baker tersely replied, ''We have been hopeful and we remain hopeful.''

Just hours before the signing ceremony, Gorbachev said he was ''quite worried'' about the course of his talks with Bush on trade and economics, but in the end he left the White House with a document trade experts said would be a valuable political symbol to take home, where there has been near-panic food buying.

At a dinner at the Soviet Embassy, Gorbachev expressed his gratitude for the trade accord in a toast to Bush, calling the timing of the pact ''crucial for the future of perestroika.''

Alluding to the economic and political turmoil he faces at home, Gorbachev said, ''I am convinced that the Soviet people will appreciate the fact ... the president ofthe United States is signing this agreement to normalize Soviet-American commercial relations at this moment of special importance for our country.''

The trade pact would help the Soviet Union receive the lowest available tariffs in the United States. This, in turn, could entice U.S. and other foreign companies to establish manufacturing joint ventures with Soviet concerns.

The agreement also would lead to the removal of long-standing commercial restrictions, making the Soviets eligible for U.S. credit and guarantee programs provided by the Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corp.

In the bargaining, the United States won concessions on taxes and investments to aid U.S. businesses trading with the Soviets, software copyright protection and a promise by the Soviets to begin repaying $674 million in debt from the lend-lease program of World War II.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 2) UPI - A New York man filed suit Friday against actor Warren Beatty, Walt Disney Studios and its top executive, claiming they stole his idea to develop a movie from the Dick Tracy comic strip.

The Superior Court suit, filed by Harold Steinberg, of East Hampton, N.Y., claims that he came up with the idea of developing a musical based on the syndicated comic strip in 1978.

Steinberg, who could not be reached for comment, claims in the suit he persuaded Tom Meehan, the author of the successful ''Annie'' play, to work on the Dick Tracy concept with him.

Steinberg said the idea was presented to Walt Disney Studios Chairman Jeffery Katzenberg, who was then with Paramount Pictures, in October 1980.

After ''extensive discussions'' with Beatty's representatives aimed at persuading the actor to participate in the project, Steinberg was told Beatty was uninterested, the suit said.

Shortly afterward, Beatty acquired the rights to develop Dick Tracy from the Chicago Tribune News Service, which held the rights to the property, the suit said. Beatty then took the project to Katzenberg at Disney, who approved it for development, according to the suit.

The movie is scheduled for release June 15.

Steinberg said in his suit that he learned in the summer of 1988 that the movie was being produced by Beatty and distributed by Disney.

But when the concept was presented to Beatty and Katzenberg, the suit said ''it was with the express understanding that if either developed the project,'' Steinberg would be paid for his idea and included in the project as producer.

''By stealing Steinberg's idea, then using their economic might to make a deal with the syndicate, the defendants made it legally and practically impossible'' for Steinberg to go ahead with the project, the suit said.

The suit seeks unstated damages for unfair competition, breach of an implied contract and breach of fiduciary duty.

The defendants could not be reached for comment.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 1) UPI - The issue so much at the fore of Thursday's summit talks, the military status of a unified Germany, fell to wayside Friday, quickly scotching any overnight speculation of an imminent breakthrough.

After talk of ''new ideas'' and additional ''in-depth discussions'' during the summit, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater conceded no special talks had been held and hinted no real progress expected by the end of the summit.

Mixed signals Thursday from the summit leaders and their aides, which gave an exaggerated sense of urgency and significance to their discussions, led Friday to more somber assessment of the distance between the U.S. and Soviet positions.

Secretary of State James Baker said ''nuances of earlier ideas'' had been misinterpreted Thursday - ironically, in official statements - as ''new ideas.'' In fact, he said, no ''new approach'' to the issue emerged in the discussions.

Fitzwater, who earlier suggested that Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze might have some refined positions ready for Presidents Bush and Gorbachev to discuss at a final news conference Sunday, said the process probably will take weeks instead of days.

In contrast to the 48-hour time frame he mentioned the day before for Baker and Shevardnadze to work on the problem, Fitzwater said there in fact had been no discussion ''of a process or specific meetings or timetables'' for results.

''We were encouraged by the fact that there was some convergence that occurred,'' he said in explaining his own more upbeat attitude less than 24 hours earlier, ''and those were reasons for optimism and some enthusiasm by all the participants in view of the history of this question.''

Soviet spokesman Arkady Maslennikov noted the German question had been inherited from the ''very bloody experience'' of World War II and said, ''to expect that in four days one could solve all the questions, well, it's a bit unrealistic.''

Far from having resolved their differences, he said, Bush and Gorbachev may simply have agreed ''on the desirability'' of shaping a security arrangement ''acceptable to everybody'' for the period following German unification.

''That,'' he maintained, ''is a very important political and philosophical breakthrough.''

Fitzwater discounted reports that the role of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe - an umbrella organization comprising NATO, and Warsaw Pact and non-aligned European countries - might serve as the bargaining chip for a deal on German memberhip in NATO.

While supportive in general of Soviet calls for the CSCE to assume a more active role, Fitzwater made clear the United States does not want to see that take place at the sacrifice of NATO. The Soviets have recommended that an all-European structure like CSCE to supersede existing military alliances.

Fitzwater said Bush would be telephoning West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl during the summit to brief him on the positions laid out in his talks with Gorbachev. U.S. officials said the Soviets offered no sign of softened opposition on the main point of NATO membership for Germany.

White House officials said Bush also will have a chance next week to personally assuage any concerns Kohl may have about the summit talks when the two, who last met in Washington just two weeks ago, have dinner Friday night at the White House.

(JUNE 1) UPI - The superpower summit has produced new U-S-Soviet agreements on arms and trade. Presidents Bush and Gorbachev reached the new accords during meetings at the White House today. One of the new pacts calls for the two superpowers to destroy most of their chemical-weapon arsenals. Another gives the Soviets a landmark trade agreement and sets up long-term grain sales.

Earlier in the day, Gorbachev defended his policies in an almost 90-minute meeting with congressional leaders at the Soviet Embassy. He asked patience while the Soviet Union goes on with its economic reforms, and he lectured the members of Congress on the situation in the Baltics. Gorbachev said he's trying to solve the independence crisis- in his words- ''within the framework of the constitutional process.''

Sources close to the Palestine Liberation Organization today said the United States has asked the P-L-O to denounce a failed guerrilla raid on

The sources said the note also asked the P-L-O to expel raid leader Mohammed Abu Abbas . Observers in Tunis said the P-L-O response could determine the future of U-S-Palestinian relations.

Walesa, who received the Peace Prize seven years ago for his work with the Solidarity Union, says Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia embody the spirit the Nobel committee seeks to honor. Walesa says the actions of the three Baltic states show their- quote- ''attachment to the idea of freedom and self-determination.''

Soviet mothers whose sons died in peacetime military service gathered today in Moscow's Gorky Park to demand an end to forced military conscription. The protesters charged that 15 Red Army soldiers die daily from hazing and brutality, with 15-thousand dead during the past four years. They're asking political maverick Boris Yeltsin- recently elected president of the Russian Republic- to support their cause.

(JUNE 1) UPI - As Presidents Bush and Gorbachev concentrated on trade and arms negotiations in their direct talks today, it was left to Gorbachev to defend his controversial domestic policies in a 90-minute meeting with U-S congressional leaders.

Gorbachev played host to the meeting at the Soviet Embassy. He asked patience and consideration for the Soviet Union as it undergoes economic reform. And he lectured the members of Congress on what is and isN'T proper in the Baltic republics.

The Soviet leader maintained that he is seeking a solution- quote- ''within the framework of the constitutional process'' to appease the independence movement.

Most congressional leaders said afterward they were sold on Soviet economic reforms but NOT on the Soviet policy on the Baltics.

The two female superpower leaders went off on their own today, addressing the graduating class of Wellesley College in Massachusetts.

Barbara Bush- criticized by some Wellesley students for making a career out of her marriage- disarmed the critics with a message encouraging diversity and self-determination.

Bush praised Wellesley as a place where ''diversity is not just tolerated but embraced.''

She said changing society and raising a family were equally challenging roles, and she challenged the five-thousand people in the audience to accept that and reject stereotypes.

Raisa Gorbachev too said the current Soviet program of perestroika is working to make her country ''open to the world'' and its changes.

(JUNE 1) UPI - A Labor Department spokeswoman says the 1990 Census is the main reason for a drop in the nation's UNemployment rate for May.

The government says the Census Bureau hired 147-thousand people last month accounting for most of the 164-thousand jobs added to NON-farm payrolls.

That in turn led to a dip of one-tenth of one percent in the nation's jobless rate, to five-point-three percent.

Bureau of Labor Statistics commissioner Janet Norwood says private sector hiring has been stagnant for the past three months. Construction and manufacturing have shown job losses despite the warming weather.

The Labor Department also noted that more than 300-thousand factory jobs have been lost since a post-recession peak in March of last year.

Analysts at Mitsubishi Bank in New York say manufacturing employment will increase only after an increase in orders and a lengthening of the work week.

While Mikhail Gorbachev was away in Washington, two Soviet political mavericks were comparing notes in Moscow.

Rebellious Lithuania's President Vytautas Landsbergis met with his newly elected counterpart from the Russian Republic, Boris Yeltsin.

The two reportedly discussed economic ties between the Russian and Lithuanian republics. Energy supplies are running low in Lithuania because of the seven-week-old economic blockade imposed by Moscow following Lithuania's declaration of independence.

A Lithuanian official reached afterward went out of his way to say ''it was NOT an official meeting'' between the two leaders, but only ''a chat.''

The official Soviet news agency Tass nevertheless described the meeting between Landsbergis and Yeltsin as ''warm and good.''

A line of powerful thunderstorms swept east across Texas toward the Dallas-Fort Worth area early today. Some areas of Texas and Louisiana were drenched with up to nine inches of rain in a 30-hour period.

Quarter-size hail and thunderstorm gusts to 80 miles-an-hour hit parts of the Lone State state.

Rain-weary east Texas got another six inches of rain, causing more flooding.

To top it off, the National Weather Service reports at least seven tornadoes struck last night in far northern Texas.

In northeastern Washington State, as much as two feet of snow fell last night and today.

Imelda Marcos is reported in stable condition with hopes she might be able to leave a New York hospital this weekend.

The former Philippines first lady collapsed face down yesterday during her trial on racketeering charges. She was carried from the courtroom on a stretcher, suffering from stomach pains and bleeding from the mouth.

But a New York Hospital spokeswoman today said Marcos is much improved and has stabilized with NO more stomach pain.

Doctors say tests showed Marcos has ''erosive gastritis,'' in which excess acid erodes part of the stomach lining.

The condition requires intravenous medication to suppress the acid. The illness is NOT tied to the high blood pressure which Marcos was treated for after she collapsed during the trial in April.

(JUNE 1) UPI - President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev unveiled the first surprise of the Washington summit today when they signed new trade and grain pacts. The economic measures were thought to have been tabled because of Moscow's hardline stance against Lithuanian independence.

The two leaders also signed an accord calling for reductions in chemical weapons, and took steps toward a later treaty on long-range nuclear weapons. Bush and Gorbachev broke a deadlock between U-S and Soviet negotiators on the nuclear arms issue.

Gorbachev was honored today by five U-S organizations for leading the Soviet Union into a new era. Among the awards given the Soviet leader was the prestigious Martin Luther King Junior NON-Violent Peace Prize of 1990.

The U-S and Soviet first ladies delivered commencement speeches at Wellesley College near Boston. Barbara Bush told the graduates that securing human relationships is one of the most important things they can achieve.

The 1990 census appears to have played a key role in pushing the nation's unemployment rate down to five-point-three percent in May. The Census Bureau accounted for 147-thousand temporary jobs last month.

(JUNE 1) UPI - Presidents Bush and Gorbachev pronounced their superpower

summit a success today, UNveiling a series of trade and arms agreements. Bush said while signing the pacts at the White House that they prove U-S and Soviet commitment to ending the Cold War. Gorbachev said the pacts are part of ''building a new civilization.'' The two leaders are scheduled to head to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Maryland, tomorrow.

Bush and Gorbachev also signed a landmark trade agreement today, but the accord still must be ratified by Congress. And Secretary of State Baker says the administration will NOT offer the package for congressional consideration until a pending Soviet emigration law is enacted in Moscow. Earlier, it appeared that the Kremlin's hardline stance toward Lithuania might impede a trade accord.

Top Canadian officials today said resolving Canada's constitutional crisis will require flexibility by the country's English-speaking provinces. The crisis has triggered fresh threats by Quebec that it will secede. The officials also said Quebec will NOT tolerate any changes in a proposed constitutional amendment to let the province promote and protect its French language and culture.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 2) BUSINESS WIRE - TeleVideo Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:TELV) has signed two joint venture agreements to market the company's computer systems in the USSR.

Both ventures are departures from the norm in that they provide ready customers -- the departments of the Municipality of Moscow and the Ministry of Construction.

The first agreement is between TeleVideo Systems; ABM Computer Systems, West Germany; and the Municipality of Moscow. Under the agreement, computers will be provided to the city of Moscow to increase the computer capabilities in the city's infrastructure.

TeleVideo will provide computers to the venture for resale within the city structure. As part of the agreement, Moscow is providing land near the Kremlin which will be developed by the venture into an office/hotel complex for use by Western visitors. The complex will include a hotel, an apartment building, an office building, and a shopping center, and will provide a source of hard currency earnings.

A company spokesman indicated that while significant profits from the venture are probably two years away, TeleVideo does not expect their participation to present any significant financial hardship for the company.

''This agreement has taken me six years to put in place, and it represents a significant opportunity for TeleVideo,'' said Dr. K. Philip Hwang, TeleVideo chairman and chief executive officer, who first began working with the Soviets in 1984. ''We were patient and persistent and finally got what we wanted: it's a solid agreement in which everyone gains.

The city of Moscow will have an excellent and reliable source of high-performance systems at reasonable costs, and TeleVideo has the opportunity not only for profitable, long-term business, but for cost reductions through increased volumes.''

Although precise commitments are not being made available, a TeleVideo spokesman indicated that initially, they expect to run quantities of one to two thousand systems per month. During the next one to two years, that number is expected to increase to five to ten thousand per month.

The second agreement is between TeleVideo, ABM Computer Systems, and the Ministry of Construction, which is renovating buildings in Moscow. TeleVideo will provide computers and computer parts for use within the Ministry and for resale through a computer store chain that is being set up in Moscow as part of the venture.

Initially, TeleVideo will be shipping computers for both ventures that do not require special export licensing.

''At first, we will concentrate on low-end systems and parts,'' said Hwang. ''However, we are confident that we will obtain additional export licensing, which will allow us to expand into parts shipment and setting up assembly lines in Moscow.''

TeleVideo will be demonstrating many of its computer systems at the upcoming PC World Forum/Moscow, scheduled for July 10-15. Estimates have indicated that the demand for PCs in the Soviet Union will reach more than 28 million by the year 2000. Only 15 percent of the demand is satisfied today, making the Soviet Union one of the highest growth market areas in the world.

TeleVideo Systems Inc. is a leading supplier of industry-standard, high-performance LAN file servers and workstation products, low-cost video display terminals, computer enhancement products, and applications-specific integrated circuits (ASICs).

TeleVideo is a publicly held corporation and is traded in the over-the-counter market. Corporate offices are located at 550 East Brokaw Road, P.O. Box 49048, San Jose, CA 95161-9048. 408/954-8333.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Saying the ''Cold War must end,'' President Bush joined Mikhail MEEK'-high-yehl GOHRB'-ah-chawf in signing a series of historic agreements at the White House Friday, including grain and trade pacts. The heads of the two superpowers also agreed to sharp cuts in each country's chemical weapons arsenal.

Friday's summit activities also included intervention by the two men in ongoing talks to reduce strategic nuclear weapons. They laid the foundation by agreeing to cut long-range missiles by nearly one-third over seven years. Secretary of State Baker said Friday a formal strategic arms pact should be signed later this year.

The congenial atmosphere exhibited so far during the summit extended through a dinner at the Soviet Embassy Friday night. President Gorbachev used the forum to return the favor granted him Thursday night by Bush at a White House dinner. The Soviet leader toasted Bush by saying the day's achievements are a result of the growing trust between the two men.

OMAHA, NE (JUNE 2) UPI - Faced with extra innings in the opening game of the College World Series, both Stanford and Georgia Southern performed up to their reputations.

Georgia Southern, making its first appearance in college baseball's championship tournament, committed two of their six errors in the 10th inning, allowing Stanford to score twice and emerge with a 5-4 victory.

In Friday night's second game, Dave Fleming fired a four-hitter to lead Georgia to a 3-0 victory over Mississippi State.

Troy Paulsen singled home Troy Tallman to cap a two-run rally for Stanford which won the national championship in 1987 and 1988 but missed postseason play last year.

''We were confident that we could come back because we've done it all year '' said Stanford's Troy Paulsen, who drove home the winning run. ''This type of game does boost your confidence, especially when you get a break or two. That's a part of the game.''

With Stanford trailing 4-3, Roger Burnett opened the 10th with a single off Joey Hamilton, 18-4. Tallman bunted and Joey Hamilton threw wide to second base, advancing Burnett to third.

Burnett scored on Jeff Hammonds' sacrifice fly to tie the game, and Tallman advanced to second when right fielder Todd Greene threw wildly to the plate, the sixth Georgia Southern error. Paulsen then ripped a drive to left field for the game-winner.

''When you're in a tight ballgame, the difference in winning and losing is who executes,'' Georgia Southern Coach Jack Stallings said. ''They executed at the end and we didn't.''

Stanford's rally gave the win to Brian Sackinsky, 9-1, who had allowed an unearned run in the top of the 10th.

With two outs, Doug Eder reached second on a throwing error by third baseman Tim Griffin. After Greene was intentionally walked, Rob Fitzpatrick stroked a single to score Eder.

Georgia Southern tied the game at 3-3 in the seventh when Steve Siebert doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and came home on a single by Chris Abner.

In the second game, Fleming struck out 10 and walked one in posting the first shutout in the College World Series since 1987. All four Mississippi State hits were singles, despite a wind that was blowing out to left at 25 mph.

''I tried to mix it up, keep the ball low and stay ahead in the count,'' Fleming said. ''It was important to keep the ball on the ground. With that wind, you don't want it in the air.''

The junior left-hander, 12-5, also was aided by three Georgia double plays.

''It's always a lot easier to pitch when you know a double-play can be turned,'' Fleming said. ''Our infielders were great tonight.''

Mississippi State Coach Ron Polk would like to see Fleming pick on someone else.

''Fleming is an ace,'' Polk said. ''He probably could neutralize a lot of teams in this tournament. He just has our number right now. I hope we don't see him again this year.''

Georgia took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on Jeff Cooper's solo home run off Mississippi State starter Bobby Reed, 15-3. The Bulldogs added another run in the fifth when Joey Alfonso doubled, went to third on a forceout and scored on a Reed wild pitch.

Georgia scored its final run in the eighth. J.R. Showalter singled and later scored from first when right fielder Tracy Echols collided with second baseman Scott Mitchell on short fly ball.

Georgia, 49-18, advanced into the winner's bracket for a Sunday game against top-seeded Stanford, 57-10. Mississippi State, 49-20, plays an elimination game Sunday against Georgia Southern, 50-18.

CLEARLAKE, CA (JUNE 2) UPI - They're still looking for most of the $10,000 in cash that blew all over a school yard and was scooped up by frantic students after a 13-year-old girl brought it to school in her backpack.

The money had been taken from a neighbor's shed where it had been buried and the girl may have thought it was drug money but, in fact, it was part of $40,000 in proceeds from a house sale, police said Friday.

The girl slipped into the neighbor's shed next to her grandfather's house Thursday, dug up a packet of money and took it to school in her backpack, officials said.

She started handing out a few large bills to her friends and word leaked out, officials said. A big crowd gathered on the playground of Oak Hill Middle School at the morning recess.

''There were a whole bunch of people crowded around her on the field and one kid yells 'cop!' and she opened up her jacket and started throwing money,'' Jake Orr, 12, a sixth grader, said. The one who yelled ''cop!'' was only joking, he said.

By the end of the day, school officials had recovered about $3,000 of the $10,000 and were still looking for the rest as the weekend got underway.

''Kids were walking up to me and giving me $20s and $50s,'' Vice Principal Thomas Essex said. ''One girl walked up and gave me over $600.''

A 12-year-old who turned in $200 told his father that money was all over the school.

''They were stuffing it in toilets,'' the parent said. ''He said one girl stuffed it down her bra and got out with it.''

Police declined to identify the man who buried the money after determining it was not ill-gotten gain. Officers said the man feared someone might begin digging up his property.

The man had buried the cash and property deeds from the house sale in a metal box in a few inches of dirt in the shed, rather than take them to a bank, because he wanted quick access to them, officers said.

The girl had a vague notion the money was illegal and wasn't sure what to do about it but had thought of telling school officials, Principal Susan Daly said.

School officials said groups of parents showed up on the school grounds Thursday night to search for stray money but were chased away. Other people slipped through, however, and overturned trash cans and ripped away a decorative board on the school building in search of stray cash.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Mike Greenwell, recently ineffective at the plate and the target of trade rumors in the front office, attempted to reverse both trends Friday night by delivering the game-winning hit.

Greenwell, who entered the game batting 4-for-48 with men in scoring position, singled home Tony Pena from third with two outs in the ninth inning to lift the Boston Red Sox to a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Indians.

''It's been a long time,'' Greenwell said. ''I know I'm capable of doing it, but I've been in this situation before this year but haven't come through. I said all along I'm not giving up.''

Greenwell, who has been dropped to the No. 7 spot in the lineup and has been mentioned in separate trades involving both the Mets and the Yankees, drove home two runs on the evening.

''I stepped into the box and said OK, I'm going to win this game right here,'' he said. ''I haven't had that feeling for a while.''

Boston trailed 3-2 entering the ninth, but instead of folding they rallied for two runs to steal the victory.

''With two outs and nobody on, with that guy pitching, your odds are mighty thin,'' Boston manager Joe Morgan said of Indians' reliever Doug Jones.

Dwight Evans singled and was replaced by pinch runner Randy Kutcher, who scored on Pena's triple to right center to tie the game. Greenwell then singled Pena home with the winning run.

''It was down to two outs,'' Pena said. ''It's great to get a win like that.''

It was just the second time in 19 appearances that Jones, 0-2, blew a save opportunity. Jones has 17 saves to his credit.

''Everything was fine until two outs in the ninth inning,'' said Cleveland manager John McNamara, who was facing his former team for the first time since he was fired as Boston manager in July 1988. ''We've got our best guy on the mound and a one-run lead.''

Boston reliever Jerry Reed, 2-1, was the winner despite giving up the go-ahead run in the eighth, and Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth to earn his sixth save.

Brook Jacoby had given Cleveland a 3-2 lead when he singled home pinch-runner Stan Jefferson in the eighth inning.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. James singled, stole second and scored on a two-out single by Sandy Alomar. The Indians made it 2-0 in the third when Dion James doubled off the first-base bag with two out and scored on Candy Maldonado's single.

The Red Sox pulled within 2-1 in the fifth. Tom Brunansky singled, moved to second on a slow infield grounder and scored on Greenwell's base hit. Boston tied the game in the seventh when Brunansky singled, went to second on another slow roller and scored on Pena's bouncer up the middle.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York nipped Baltimore 4-3, Milwaukee mashed Toronto 7-1, Boston bounced Cleveland 4-3, Chicago clipped Minnesota 2-1, Oakland erased Kansas City 4-3, California topped Texas 4-3 and Detroit dumped Seattle 9-7.

In the NL, it was: New York 4, Philadelphia 0; Montreal 4, Pittsburgh 1; St. Louis 6, Chicago 4; Atlanta 16, San Diego 11; Cincinnati 5, Los Angeles 2 and San Francisco 6, Houston 5 in 11 innings.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

At New York, Steve Balboni broke a tie with a home run in the sixth inning to help New York snap a five-game losing streak. Balboni hit his fifth homer off Jeff Ballard, 1-6. Dave LaPoint, 4-4, scattered seven hits over 7 2-3 innings and Dave Righetti pitched the ninth to earn his 10th save.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 1

At Toronto, Teddy Higuera scattered four hits over six innings and Paul Molitor drove in three runs to power Milwaukee. Higuera, 5-1, struck out six and walked one. Todd Stottlemyre, 4-6, who yielded three runs on nine hits, took the loss.

White Sox 2, Twins 1

At Chicago, pinch-hitter Carlos Martinez singled home Steve Lyons from second base with two-outs in the ninth inning allowing reliever Barry Jones to earn the victory and improve to 7-0. Terry Leach, 2-1, suffered the loss as the Twins took their first one-one loss of the season. The White Sox improved their major-league leading home record to 19-7.

Athletics 4, Royals 3

At Kansas City, Mo., Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire crushed home runs on consecutive pitches for the second time this season, sending Oakland to its ninth victory in its last 11 games. (JUNE 2) UPI - The New York Mets earned their first victory of the ''Buddyball'' era Friday night for new Manager Bud Harrelson, with Frank Viola and John Franco combining for a 4-0 shutout of the Philadelphia Phillies and Gregg Jefferies powering the offense with three hits, including a home run.

Harrelson switched Jefferies to the No. 3 spot in the batting order, where the sophomore second baseman batted in the minors, and Jefferies responded by going 3-for-4 with two RBIs and his eighth homer of the season.

''I love it,'' Jefferies said. ''I've always hit third, but I don't want to harp on it. It's a different lineup. I just want to help the guys win wherever I play.''

Jefferies has four home runs and 10 RBI in his last 10 games.

''He's swinging the bat the best on the club,'' Harrelson said. ''It just fits right now. He's a good three-hole hitter.''

Viola, 8-2, ended a personal two-game losing streak by scattering six hits over eight innings. Pitching with eight days rest because of a rainout and two scheduled off-days, he walked three and struck out five before giving way to Franco.

''I didn't feel like I had my best stuff,'' Viola said. ''I'm not used to getting eight days off. It's been a long time, maybe eight years, since I've had that kind of layoff. I feel very lucky to come out with a victory.''

Jefferies gave the Mets a 1-0 lead in the first inning when he doubled, knocking in Keith Miller, who had singled off Dennis Cook, 5-1.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead in the second on a solo home run by Mike Marshall his fifth homer of the year. Jefferies homered in the third for a 3-0 Mets lead.

New York added a run in the sixth when Darryl Strawberry singled, stole second and scored on pinch hitter Tim Teufel's single.

''It was a Mets' kind of victory - fine pitching and a couple of homers,'' Phillies Manager Nick Leyva said. ''We just need a couple of key hits. He had our chances early but Viola, like most good pitchers, adjusted.''

When it was over, Harrelson, who admitted he'd been so nervous he hadn't eaten in days, celebrated with a hot dog.

''Now my stomach feels like accepting something,'' said the rookie manager who was presented with the game ball by Viola, Franco and catcher Orlando Mercado.

Ex-Met Lenny Dykstra continued to flirt with the .400 mark, going 2-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to 14 games and raise his major league-leading batting average to .396.

Elsewhere in the National League on Friday night, Montreal upended Pittsburgh 4-1, St. Louis edged Chicago 6-4, Atlanta outslugged San Diego 16-11, Cincinnati beat Los Angeles 5-2 and San Francisco nipped Houston 6-5 in 11 innings.

In the American League, it was: Milwaukee 7, Toronto 1; New York 4, Baltimore 3; Chicago 2, Minnesota 1; Boston 4, Cleveland 3; Oakland 4, Kansas City 3; California 4, Texas 3; and Detroit 9, Seattle 7.

Expos 4, Pirates 1

At Pittsburgh, Dave Martinez homered and Kevin Gross capped a three-run fourth inning with a run-scoring sacrifice bunt to send Montreal to its fourth straight win and snap a five-game Pirates winning streak. Gross, 7-3, scattered six hits over seven innings, and Dale Mohorcic notched his first save. Doug Drabek, 7-2, who gave up four runs and eight hits, took the loss.

Cardinals 6, Cubs 4

At St. Louis, Jose Oquendo and Terry Pendleton each drove in two runs as Jose DeLeon won his 50th NL game. DeLeon, 5-3, scattered four hits over 6 2-3 innings and Lee Smith tallied his fifth save. Greg Maddux, 4-5, failed to win for the fifth consecutive start.

Braves 16, Padres 11

At San Diego, Oddibe McDowell and Dale Murphy each drove in three runs, while Atlanta pounded out 13 hits and took advantage of six errors by Padres infielders, including three by third baseman Bip Roberts. Tony Castillo, 2-0, the second of five Atlanta pitchers, picked up the win. San Diego starter Mike Dunne, 0-2, lasted just one-third of an inning.

Reds 5, Dodgers 2

At Los Angeles, Barry Larkin doubled in two fifth-inning runs and Eric Davis added a two-run homer to send the Reds to their 18th victory in 24 games. Danny Jackson, 1-1, allowed seven hits over 6 2-3 innings and Rob

Dibble earned his sixth save. John Wetteland, 1-4, allowed only three hits in 4 1-3 innings but walked three and hit two batters.

Giants 6, Astros 5, 11 innings

At San Francisco, pinch-hitter Greg Litton grounded into an infield out in the 11th inning to score Robbie Thompson with the winning run. Jim Clancy, 1-4, took the loss. Steve Bedrosian, 1-3, pitched the final two innings for the win. Houston lost despite three consecutive homers from Glenn Davis, who drove in all five runs.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - Bilateral agreements and statements signed at the superpower summit:

1. Chemical weapons: Agreement to begin in 1992 destruction of chemical weapons until both sides reach a level of 5,000 tons, or about 20 percent of existing U.S. stockpiles, by the year 2002. Moscow will have to destroy more chemical weapons than the United States. Both sides also agreed to stop chemical weapons production when the treaty takes effect. The two countries will cooperate to call a conference in the year 2000 to try to find a way for a universal ban on all chemical warfare weapons, long a goal of Bush and Gorbachev as well.

2. Nuclear testing: Agreement calls for verification protocols to clear the way for ratification of the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty and the 1976 Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty, which limit the explosive force of nuclear-weapons tests and other ''peaceful'' explosions to the equivalent of 150,000 tons of TNT.

3. START: A joint statement on proposals to cut by 30 percent to 35 percent strategic nuclear weapons, including first-time limits on air- and sea-launched cruise missiles and a 50 percent reduction in the heaviest Soviet land-based missiles.

4. START II: A joint statement on objectives for the next phase of strategic arms reduction talks, expected to include reducing number of multiple warhead missiles.

5. Conventional Forces in Europe: A joint statement to reaffirm commitment to conclude pact by end of 1990. Leaders committed themselves to intensifying pace of the negotiations in Vienna and to reaching rapid agreement on all outstanding issues. Negotiators have been at odds over deinitions and other technical matters.

6. Trade: Agreement on formal rules and legal safeguards to promote expanded two-way trade, including protection of copyrights, technology, patents and trademarks and guarantees of commercial representation and access to office space and local employees. Signed, but linked to Soviet passing new immigration law.

7. Atomic energy: Agreement expands on 1973 Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy pact. Provides cooperation in several fields of atomic energy research, including fundamental properties of matter, magnetic fusion and civilian nuclear safety. Two sides will explore proposals for renewing cooperation on safety of liquid metal reactors and management of hazardous and radioactive waste.

8. Grain: Five-year agreement obligates Soviets to buy 10 million tons of U.S. grain a year, 1 million tons more than at present. The purchases would have to include at least 4 million tons each of corn and wheat. Current agreement expires at the end of 1990. New agreement satisfies U.S. goals of covering more commodities and commiting the Soviets to buying larger amounts of grain and the Soviet goal of more freedom in what it buys.

9. Civil aviation: Agreement calls for immediate increase of passenger and cargo flights per side from 7.6 Boeing 727 equivalents per week to 15.1; to 42 in April 1991; to 58 in April 1992. Both sides gain new routes and new cities via Atlantic and Pacific routes as well as guarantees for 100 Atlantic charter flights.

10. Maritime boundary: Agreement to resolve dispute over the 1,600-mile-long boundary between Alaska and the Soviet Union in the Bering Sea. The United States would gain jurisdiction over fishing and mineral development in three areas within 200 miles of Soviet territory. The United States would cede to the Soviets one such area under its control.

11. Maritime transportation: Agreement for greater access on shorter notice to U.S. and Soviet ports by commercial vessels. Provides access to 42 ports in each country.

12. University student exchanges: Agreement to increase existing exchanges now at 750 for the United States and 250 for the Soviet Union by 250 students in the 1991-92 academic year. Increase numbers to 1,500 each way by 1995-96 academic year, subject to availability of money.

13. Parks: A joint statement endorsing intention of plan by two nations to establish international Alaska-Siberian park in Bering Strait region. Two countries will undertake prepatory steps in 1990-1991.

14. Ocean studies: Agreement to renew 1973 pact; establishes joint committee in World Ocean Studies that will provide for far-reaching scientific exchanges and use of other country's ports.

To be signed Saturday by mid-level officials at a State Department ceremony:

15. Cultural exchanges: Agreement to open cultural and information centers in Moscow and Washington: Centers will carry variety of functions such as libraries, seminars films and performances. Will also provide student counseling and language instruction. Public guaranteed unrestricted access. Occupancy dates not determined.

16. Customs: Agreement pledging mutual cooperation in fighting drug trafficking, overseeing export controls and commercial fraud.

17. Publications: Memorandum of understanding to increase circulation of ''America'' and ''Soviet Life'' magazines to 250,000 in each country in 1991. After that, distribution will be governed by demand.

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA (JUNE 2) UPI - Leaders of 15 developing countries grappled Saturday with their staggering external debt while beefing up their own economic links to lessen reliance on developed countries.

''We are close to an agreement on the subject of international trade which is the only way to make progress on the debt,'' said President Carlos Menem of Argentina.

Wallowing amid increased interest rates, quotas, tariff barriers, low commodity prices, higher costs of manufactured goods and a barrage of conditions for loans and aids imposed by developing countries, the heads of state attending the inaugural summit of the Group of 15 (G-15) agreed they cannot totally rely on the developed world to act as the locomotive of their future.

Chiding the delegates for their failure to coordinate and cooperate in the past, South Commission Chairman Julius Nyerere said, ''We haven't had any organization for action, only for making speeches to one another.''

Nyerere, the former Tanzanian president, challenged the G-15 to become as vital as the Group of Seven (G-7) industrialized nations, which includes the United States, Britain, Canada, Australia, France, Japan and Italy.

''There is the potential to be equal. It is something to aspire to,'' Nyerere said.

Delegates to the fledgling G-15 organization held their second day of meetings before adjourning to the Awana Golf and Country Club in the hillside resort of Genting Highlands for an overnight retreat.

The group, comprising Algeria, Argentina, Brazil, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Mexico, Nigeria, Peru, Senegal, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zimbabwe and Malaysia, was formed at the Non-Aligned Summit in Belgrade last September to explore trade and economic opportunities for the entire Third World.

The delegates scrutinized a report from the 28-member South Commission, strongly recommending a ''Secretariat of the South'' to implement decisions of the G-15 and act as a critically needed liason with industrialized countries of the North.

''We trade with the North, gain our experience and train in the North,'' Nyerere said. ''The globalization of the world economy is being spearheaded by the North.

''It's time we established horizontal relations, trained in the South and encouraged our own multi-nationals,'' Nyerere said.

Such trade has been largely ineffective in the past since most South nations produce the same tropical agricultural products and do not produce the machinery and other industrial items needed for development.

With the external debt of the G-15 totaling $600 billion of the $1.3 trillion total of developing countries last year, Indonesia's President Suharto said the issue remained a clear obstacle in the drive for development.

''South-South cooperation does not merely reinforce the economic growth of countries of the South, but it also carries weight in our negotiations with the advanced countries,'' he said.

Malaysia's Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed urged the G-7 developed nations to help come up with ideas to solve the acute debt problems of the Third World, and accept losses on loans to developing nations if all else fails.

''We borrowed at a time of worldwide economic prosperity when the lenders themselves fully believed in our capacity to repay,'' said Mahathir, chairman of the summit. ''The worldwide recession that followed and the effective devaluation of our currencies were not of our making.''

Delegates noted the world's largest debtor is not from the struggling Third World, but was the United States with an external debt of $349.5 billion at the end of 1988.

Venezuelan Minister of Foreign Affairs Reinaldo Figueredo said his government was prepared to provide the necessary mechanism for setting up a secretariat ''which should not only be a place for the exchange of ideas but also where concrete plans of action could be initiated to alleviate the problems of the South.''

(JUNE 2) UPI - President Bush on Friday followed through on his earlier statement that he wants to see Mikhail Gorbachev's reform system succeed. Despite rumblings that a trade agreement would NOT be signed if Moscow maintained its hard line toward Lithuania, Bush signed the trade accord with Gorbachev. The treaty is still subject to congressional approval, but its mere existence is a feather in Gorbachev's hat.

The issue that dominated the first day of the summit Thursday- a single German state's possible NATO membership- fell to the wayside Friday. The White House said NO talks on the issue had been scheduled and hinted that NO developments are expected during the summit on what may be the most divisive issue between the superpowers. On Friday, West Germany's foreign minister said in East Berlin that he favors NATO affiliation for Germany.

The battle lines are drawn for Saturday's election on the Mohawk reservation straddling the U-S-Canadian border. The election puts an incumbent anti-gambling chief's seat on the New York Tribal Council on the line. Anti-gambling Chief Harold Tarbell squares off against pro-gambling candidate Norman Tarbell. A New York judge on Friday affirmed an eligibility process that effectively bars Canadian Mohawks from voting. Most of them are opposed to gambling. The gambling issue brought violence to the reservation a month ago, when two Mohawks were killed.

Alaska wildlife workers Friday returned seven winged victims of last year's Exxon Valdez oil spill to their freedom on a beach NOT tainted by the massive spill. Released on a Prince William Sound beach were seven bald eagles. Three other oiled eagles... one blind and two UNable to fly... can NEVER be released, while 10 others that were treated did NOT survive their unnatural wounds.

BEIJING (JUNE 2) UPI - The Chinese government, assessing the first anniversary of the crackdown on a student-led democracy movement, proclaimed its policies a success Saturday and claimed the past year in China reflected the ''peoples will.''

The review of the year since the June 3-4, 1989, crackdown, whose anniversary falls Sunday and Monday, was carried in summary form by the official Xinhua news agency and will be published Monday in the state-run weekly magazine Beijing Review.

The article - the government's first lengthy statement on the anniversary - did not detail the suppression of the six weeks of demonstrations, in which the Chinese army killed hundreds when they fired on protesters in Beijing, or the nationwide repression since.

It appeared instead to reflect the Chinese leadership's concern over averting any anniversary-linked spark that might renew unrest, declaring a victory for political and economic policies widely unpopular in much of Chinese society.

Describing the student-led movement as ''upheaval and finally rebellion,'' the Beijing Review said that after the unrest was quelled, the Chinese capital ''soon returned to normal and the political situation tended to stabilize.''

''The rapidly achieved stable situation was the result of the people's will to see stability in China,'' the article said.

After the crackdown, hard-line Communist Party leaders swung the government sharply toward imposing tighter control over society. Mandatory political indoctrination, added restrictions on students and an economic clampdown have been instituted in the past year.

The article credited intensified ideological education for what it called a ''consensus on many important issues'' and said the government had done ''several big things'' to address the grievances of last year's protesters such as fighting official corruption.

''These several big things done by the party and government have been widely noted and acclaimed by the people,'' the article said. ''This enhanced the party and government prestige among the people.''

Chinese interviewed in recent weeks, however, have almost universally scoffed at the ideological campaigns as shop-worn and ineffective, and dismissed as cosmetic the anti-corruption drive.

The article was less glowing about the government's continued economic austerity and retrenchment program, but declared ''initial success'' and said the policy had begun to yield results, such as cutting what had been record inflation.

The Beijing Review acknowledged the retrenchment had slowed industrial growth by tightening credit and choking the market but said the problems in the program would be ''resolved in the future.''

In fact, the imposed economic downturn has forced many factory shutdowns, raised unemployment and forced the government in recent months to ease the austerity and inject funds into the economy.

The article blamed the cause of last year's unrest on internal political struggles, saying that while the student movement rose and subsided, the turmoil ''steadily intensified'' and that the ''problem arose mainly within the Chinese Communist Party.''

''China's political situation could not be stabilized unless the problem with the party was solved,'' the article said, adding the problem was resolved at a meeting last June 3-4 of the party's policy-making Central Committee.

That meeting officially branded the democracy movement as a ''counterrevolutionary rebellion'' and announced the ouster of the then-Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, who was accused of ''splitting the party and supporting the turmoil.''

Despite Zhaos ouster, he remains a member of the party and its leaders have been unable to agree on what action to take against him.

(JUNE 2) UPI - A Soviet mountain climber made proverbial mincemeat of America's tallest mountain last week. Rangers at Alaska's Denali National Park reported Friday that an unidentified Soviet climber zipped up to the summit of the 20-thousandfoot Mount McKinley in 10-and-one-half hours. Typically, the climb takes two weeks. The 10-and-a-half-hour ascent is a new record at McKinley.

Parents of at least half a dozen sixth graders in Cocoa, Florida, have lodged a complaint with school officials after their children were punished for defacing pictures in their yearbooks. The parents contacted a lawyer from the American Civil Liberties Union who sent a letter to officials at Fairglen Elementary School. The students were disciplined after they marked up the yearbooks they had purchased for four dollars.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Crews from Marathon Oil Co. Saturday worked to stop the leak of poisonous hydrogen sulfide from several wellheads knocked open by a tornado that killed two people, while workers in Nebraska began repairing damage inflicted by twisters and high winds.

Two people were killed in separate traffic accidents caused by the tornado late Friday afternoon as it crossed a road about 50 miles south of Midland

Texas, authorities said. There were a total of five traffic accidents with three other people seriously injured.

''The tornado hit some cars and possibly a ranch house and oil field related structures were damaged,'' Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said.

Two troopers were injured in the same storm that produced the tornado when hail blew out the windshield of their car and they were cut by flying glass, Cox said.

The twister caused extensive damage to as many as seven homes and an undetermined number of vehicles.

The tornado knocked over several wellheads and set off a leak of hydrogen sulfide, a poisonous gas with an odor of rotten eggs. The gas is used to make sulfuric acid. But no evacuations were required because no one lives in the immediate area around the wellheads.

No one was evacuated because of the gas leak since it was located in an isolated area, authorities said.

In Nebraska, tornadoes and straight-line winds ripped through the west-central part of the state Friday night, damaging buildings, equipment power lines and trees, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

The National Weather Service said a Deuel County deputy sheriff reported roof damage to a motel along Interstate 80 at Big Springs appeared to be from straight-line winds rather than a tornado.

''It wasn't that extensive. No people were moved out,'' said Big Springs Fire Chief Barry Johnson. Nobody was injured at the Panhandle Inn, a two-story building, he said.

To the southeast, Grant Fire Chief Donald Softley said a tornado downed power lines when it touched down near the town of Grant, and hail accompanying the storms damage wheat fields.

The community of Venango, with 200-250 residents, lost power and Nebraska Public Power District dispatched crews to repair the damage, Softley said.

Skies were fair throughout most of the rest of the country. Temperatures were in the 50s in the northern Plains, Rockies and Pacific Northwest; 60s in California and the East; 70s in the nation's Midsection and South; and 80s in Texas and Florida.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 2) UPI - Black leader Nelson Mandela, feeling ''on top of the world'' after minor surgery, said Saturday his 45-day trip to Africa, Europe and North America starting next week is intended to thank the international community for help in fighting apartheid.

Seated in the parking lot of a private clinic where doctors removed a cyst on his bladder during a medical checkup, Mandela, 71, said he especially hoped his visit to seven U.S. cities would inspire black Americans ''at the frontline of the struggle.''

Mandela's urologist, Gus Gecelter, said tests found the cyst was only ''inflammatory'' and should pose no further problems to the African National Congress leader, who was freed by President Frederik de Klerk from 27 years imprisonment in February.

''He's a very fit young man for his age,'' Gecelter said.

Mandela embarks on his sixth and most extensive foreign trip since his release with a two-day visit to Botswana on Monday before heading to Europe. From Canada, he arrives to a ticker tape parade in New York on June 20.

''I feel on top of the world and I'm looking forward to the trip with eagerness.''

Following on the heels of de Klerk, who returned last month from a nine-nation European tour, Mandela said he wanted the opportunity to personally thank the world for helping secure his release and pressuring the government into holding talks with the ANC.

''I will also ask the international community to maintain sanctions because whatever Mr. de Klerk has said, it is up to now merely rhetoric. Nothing further has been done and sanctions were imposed to dismantle apartheid.

''All the pillars of apartheid are still in place,'' he said.

De Klerk, who canceled a June 18 trip to Washington because of the threat of anti-apartheid protests, sought from European leaders an easing of international sanctions as a reward for his reform efforts that included Mandela's release and lifting a 30-year ban on the ANC.

''As far as I am concerned, he has brought absolutely nothing back to South Africa,'' Mandela said. ''He presented a one-sided picture ... of what is going on in South Africa. It is this that I am going to correct.''

As Mandela leaves the country, de Klerk faces the difficult choice of whether to extend a four-year-old nationwide state of emergency, modify it or allow it to expire June 9.

The emergency was first imposed on June 12, 1986 to quell a wave of anti-government rioting in South Africa's black townships.

Lifting the emergency is one of the key demands the ANC has insisted the government meet before the movement will agree to formal power-sharing negotiations intended to create a new constitution for a post-apartheid South Africa.

''I only hope the government will see the necessity of lifting the state of emergency,'' Mandela said.

''From the point of view of bringing about peace in the country, it has been totally ineffective. There is more violence today than when it was first introduced,'' he said.

In the United States, where Mandela also will meet President Bush, address a joint session of Congress, visit Boston, Detroit, Miami, Atlanta and Los Angeles, the black leader said he would pay tribute to the ''important role'' played by Americans in the struggle.

He said he also would thank U.S. legislators for incorporating into its sanctions legislation penalties for trading with South Africa in violation of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986.

''The blacks in the United States have been in the frontline of the struggle against apartheid. In fact, the government itself would not have taken the steps which they have adopted if there was no pressure from the masses of Americans themselves, both black and white.

''(They) have been instrumental in influencing the policy of the authorities. And I hope that my visit to the states will inspire not only blacks but whites as well who have taken part in the campaign against apartheid,'' he said.

ST. PAUL, MN (JUNE 2) UPI - A Northwest Airlines pilot was suspended from flying following his arrest for drunken driving while on his way to work on Memorial Day, it was reported Saturday.

State Patrol Capt. Dean Swanson said that after Hans Falkenberg was arrested, he ''asked to make a phone call so he could call his employer and cancel a flight.''

''He was on his way, yes, to fly a regular passenger flight,'' Northwest Airlines spokesman Doug Miller told the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Northwest officials would not say whether he was the pilot or co-pilot.

Falkenberg could not be reached for comment and a family member declined to comment. A Northwest spokesman said the pilot voluntarily entered a chemical abuse treatment center for evaluation.

Falkenberg, 39, Prescott, Wis., was stopped by a state trooper for speeding in Cottage Grove at 4:45 p.m. Monday. He was clocked at 73 mph in a 55 mph zone.

In his arrest report, the trooper said he smelled alcohol on Falkenberg and asked asked him to perform a series of coordination tests.

''That led to his arrest for DWI,'' Swanson said.

Falkenberg refused to submit to a blood-alcohol or urine test. He was booked into the Washington County Jail and released Monday evening after being given a misdemeanor citation for driving under the influence of alcohol. He is scheduled to appear in cour June 21.

It is the second alcohol-related incident involving a Northwest cockpit crew this year. On March 8, three crewmen were arrested and charged with flying a jetliner from Fargo, N.D., to Minneapolis while under the influence of alcohol. Their criminal cases are pending in federal court.

BEIJING (JUNE 2) UPI - A man who set himself on fire outside the U.S. consulate in Shanghai was identified by Chinese officials Saturday as a mentally ill jobless worker who had been waiting in line for an American visa, U.S. officials said.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Sheridan Bell said in Beijing the Shanghai consulate was advised of the burned man's status by a Shanghai foreign affairs bureau official who identified himself as Mr. Zhu.

The man, Lu Minhao, 32, was admitted in serious condition to Ruijin Hospital for treatment of extensive burns suffered Friday morning, Bell quoted the Chinese official as saying.

The man was in the visa line outside the U.S. consulate gate when he doused himself with gasoline and set himself ablaze before nearly 100 stunned onlookers, officials said.

The timing of the act prompted speculation that it was intended as a political protest to mark the one-year anniversary of China's brutal crackdown last June 3-4 on democracy advocates peacefully demonstrating in Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Police found no note suggesting the man's motive, Bell quoted the official as saying.

A U.S. consul's request to visit the man in the hospital was denied on grounds that patients suffering serious burns may not have visitors, Bell said.

Chinese officials quickly attributed the act to mental illness even though they said the man's identity was not yet clear.

Chinese officials have consistently blamed mental illness for acts of public protest that have come to light in recent months.

The foreign affairs bureau official reported Saturday that authorities had found evidence attesting to Lu's history of mental illness, Bell said.

Medical records cited by the official purportedly showed Lu was admitted to Shanghai Municipal Hospital in 1980 for treatment of schizophrenia. The official said papers in Lu's wallet indicated his most recent treatment was in May 1990.

The medical reports could not be corroborated independently.

One unconfirmed report said Lu was denied permission to travel to the United States to attend graduate school. The U.S. Embassy spokesman said a check at the Shanghai consulate showed no record that he had applied for a visa in the past two years.

The Chinese official said Lu recently lost his job at Building Materials Co. in Shanghai's Xuhai district, Bell said.

DORTTMUND, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 2) UPI - Two gunmen, believed to be Irish Republican Army members, shot and killed a British army major Saturday, five hours after an army recruit was shot dead in a similiar attack in Britain, police said.

A police spokesman said the attackers escaped in their car after killing Maj. Michael John Dillon-Lee, 35, in front of his house in the West German city of Dortmund shortly after midnight.

The two assailants fled in a silver Mazda, the spokesman said, chased by a police patrol that caught up to them as they were driving out of the city. Two police cars tried to block the Mazda but the attackers opened fire, wounding a policeman in the foot, the spokesman said.

He said police lost sight of the attackers. Police found the vehicle abandoned later.

The attackers are thought to be members of the IRA, which is also believed responsible for the Friday shooting of a 19-year-old recruit in the British town of Lichfield, about 130 miles northwest of London.

Two masked gunmen opened fire with handguns at close range, shooting Pvt. Robert Davies and two other recruits as they waited on a crowded train platform at Lichfield City Station just before 6 p.m. Friday, investigators said.

The gunmen fired seven shots from about six feet away at the three recruits, then fled across railroad tracks toward a yard opposite the train station. Police said Davies died of gunshot wounds. The two other recruits, aged 19 and 20, were treated at Goodhope hospital for gunshot wounds to the neck, shoulder and arm.

All three were off-duty from the Prince of Wales Division at the nearby Whittington Barracks and were wearing civilian clothes, police said.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported the three were 12 weeks into their basic training course for the army.

Police said they were continuing to interview witnesses, many of whom were able to furnish descriptions of the assailants. One of the gunman was described as between 18 and 20 years old, 5-foot-5 inches tall, and wearing a black bomber jacket, dark trousers and a black baseball cap.

Meanwhile, forensic experts examined the scene of the shootings at the train station, while, outside, people laid bouquets of flowers Saturday in memory of the dead soldier.

So far, no group has claimed responsibility for the gun attacks in Britain and West Germany.

Investigators said they believe the Dortmund shooting was carried out by the same IRA gang which killed two Australians in Holland last weekend after mistaking them for British soldiers.

TOKYO (JUNE 2) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Saturday he will sign a peace accord with the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government during peace talks in Tokyo.

''The Cambodian National Resistance and myself accept to sign the afore-cited peace accord, and the after signing, to implement it faithfully,'' Sihanouk said in a statement after arriving in Tokyo for two days of peace talks hosted by Japan.

But Sihanouk said that Vietnamese troops still in Cambodia despite Hanoi's official withdrawal last September will remain as the most serious stumbling block for the end of the 11-year-old conflict in Cambodia.

He said despite that he and Vietnamese-backed Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen would sign the accord early in the week.

Sihanouk plans to hold talks with Hun Sen on Monday and Tuesday as representatives of the three Cambodian rebel factions discuss an end to hostilities.

Japan, at the urging of Thailand's Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan, agreed to host the latest round of talks to end the Southeast Asian conflict. The most recent negotiations were held in February in the Thai capital of Bangkok.

Sihanouk has proposed an immediate ceasefire and a greater peace-keeping role by the United Nations in the settlement.

The Vietnamese-installed Phnom Penh government has retained control of nearly 90 percent of Cambodia under its control despite the announcement of the withdrawal of its military forces and despite a major offensive by the guerrilla factions.

The two non-communist rebel factions are supported by the United States and other Western nations.

The United States is withholding support for the Khmer Rouge because of its post-1975 genocide while ruling Cambodia that left up 1.5 million people dead.

Sihanouk supports inclusion of the Khmer Rouge in the peace process.

CAMP DAVID, MD (JUNE 2) UPI - President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, having reached accords on war and peace, moved their summit to the mountains Saturday to explore ''global flashpoints'' and other troublesome issues dividing the superpowers.

Beginning their final full day of talks, the two leaders and their wives traveled by helicopter Saturday morning from the White House to Bush's presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains where they hoped the relaxed setting would help them discuss numerous questions, including regional issues.

''We have a lot of subjects,'' said Gorbachev shortly after they landed amid the sparkling streams and towering pine trees of the retreat. ''The most important thing we are going to discuss are the global flashpoints and that means the regional issues.''

''We have wonderful trails to walk. It'll be a totally relaxed environment today,'' noted Bush just before he drove Gorbachev away in a golf cart.

Despite nagging differences over the Baltic republics' drive for independence, Bush and Gorbachev signed a trade agreement Friday that still must be approved by a reluctant Congress. They also approved a treaty to drastically cut chemical weapons and agreed on a framework to reduce long-range nuclear weapons, although major differences remain in that arena.

White House aides said the regional issues Bush wanted to discuss Saturday included Afghanistan and Cuba. They added that the subject of German reunification could also arise.

While the two leaders were free to roam the grounds, aides said most of the talks would take place in the ''family-like'' presidential lodge, where a large window overlooks the mountains.

After their talks, the two were to be joined by a cadre of top advisers for cocktails and dinner.

Going into the third day of talks, both men made it clear they were looking forward to the day.

''I think the Camp David meeting where we have a lot of one-on-one time could be fruitful,'' said Bush Friday.

''There's a lot of fresh air there,'' Gorbachev said. ''And I think we'll work and think more extensively, and I think that we'll complete our discussions successfully.''

The four-day summit is to end Sunday with a joint news conference by the two presidents at the White House.

NEW YORK (JUNE 2) UPI - Stage and screen actor Sir Rex Harrison, whose Professor Henry Higgins in ''My Fair Lady'' was the most unforgettable role in a distinguished career, died Saturday of pancreatic cancer three weeks after dropping out of a hit Broadway show. He was 82.

Harrison quit ''The Circle'' May 11, one week before its scheduled closing in the belief that he was suffering from a gall bladder inflammation. He was not hospitalized, but remained at his Manhattan apartment reading plays ''to see what he would do next,'' according to his attorney, Harold Schiff.

With him when he died early Saturday was his sixth wife, the former Mercia Tinker, and two sons by prior marriages, Noel and Carey Harrison.

Schiff said a memorial service will be held June 18 at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York, the so-called Little Church Around the Corner that has many actors in its congregation. Funeral services will be private.

Harrison, whose primary residence was in Monaco, opened in a revival of W. Somerset Maugham's comedy ''The Circle'' last Nov. 20, co-starring with stage and screen veterans Glynis Johns and Stewart Granger. They were enthusiastically received by critics and audiences and the play was nominated for a best revival Tony Award.

''The last three weeks of the run, he was in pain, but we were told he had gallstones,'' said Elliott Martin, producer of ''The Circle'' and three previous Broadway plays starring Harrison. ''One day he stood in the middle of the stage and told me, 'The next play we do, we must use a different kind of set.'

''He was a consummate artist, a stickler for perfection on stage and, if anything was out of line or not in good taste, he would blow up. He really loved the stage and all it stands for in our lives.''

Harrison's passion for the theater started in 1915 when, at age 7, he saw a Christmas pantomime in his native England and rushed home to imitate it. He began acting with the Liverpool Repertory Company and moved to London to work in West End theaters in 1927, changing his name from Reginald Carey Harrison to Rex Harrison.

''I wasn't a success overnight,'' he once said. ''I just slowly worked my way up, and some times were quite rough. I had no education, maybe because I simply wasn't able to take one in.''

He found his metier in the 1930s in such sophisticated comedies as Noel Coward's ''Design for Living'' and Terence Rattigan's ''French Without Tears'' and soon became known as ''the greatest actor in light comedy in the world.''

He first appeared on Broadway in ''Sweet Aloes'' in 1936 and subsequently starred in ''Bell, Book and Candle'' and as an unforgettable Henry VIII in ''Anne of a Thousand Days,'' which won him his first Tony Award.

Hollywood was quick to seize on the 6-foot-2, slender and handsome talent, and Harrison starred as Caesar in ''Cleopatra,'' for which he won a Tony nomination, ''Major Barbara,'' ''Blythe Spirit,'' and ''Dr. Dolittle.''

But his most memorable role was Higgins in ''My Fair Lady,'' a musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's ''Pygmalion,'' a role Harrison created on Broadway in 1957 for another Tony Award, and recreated on the screen in 1964, winning an Academy Award.

He returned to Broadway in 1981 for a rerun of ''My Fair Lady'' and in 1985 for a revival of Frederick Lonsdale's ''Aren't We All,'' opposite Claudette Colbert.

He was knighted by Queen Elizabeth in 1989, a honor many - including Harrison - thought long overdue. He attributed the delay to his residence outside Great Britain to avoid income taxes.

''The queen doesn't like that,'' he said in a 1985 interview with United Press International.

Harrison voiced a vague regret that the role of Higgins overshadowed his distinguished career and even his complicated and much publicized private life. He tried to redress the balance in an autobiography, ''Rex,'' written in 1974 at the suggestion of former British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

The portrait that emerged was the one the public had divined long before - a man whose professional charm harked back to prewar matinee idols and whose meticulous dress and manners could only have derived from his own chosen lifestyle, that of a debonair, occasionally gruff English gentleman.

Harrison's contemporaries admired his acting techniques. Sir Laurence Olivier was one of those influenced by it. Noel Coward, in a double-edged tribute, said: ''Rex never listens to other actors.''

''Good actors will always make you listen,'' Harrison said when told of Coward's comment. ''But if they're terribly bad, it's better not to listen.''

Capriati, at 14 one of the youngest players ever to advance this far, overcame early Center Court jitters to post a 6-4, 6-4 victory over 12th seed Judith Wiesner.

''I couldn't believe it when they told me I'd be on Center Court,'' said Capriati, who is unseeded as she appears in only her fifth pro tournament. ''I thought 'this is where all the great champions have played, like (Bjorn) Borg and (Jimmy) Connors and so many others.'''

In the round of 16 Capriati will play unseeded Mercedes Paz, the conqueror of defending champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario. Paz won her third round match from Celine Cohen 6-1, 7-5.

''I think she's a phenomenom, like Gaby (Sabatini) and Steffi (Graf) were '' Paz said. ''Every once in a while someone comes along like that.''

Graf, recovering from an allergy attack, dropped her service three times while beating Italy's Sandra Cecchini 6-2, 6-3, and Seles, the second seed extended her winning streak to 28 matches with a 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) victory over Leila Meskhi of the Soviet Union.

Meskhi predicted Seles would win the championship, but Seles, a 16-year-old Yugoslavian who now lives in Florida, responded, ''If I would win, I'd have to play a lot better than I am now.''

Seles next meets 16th seed Laura Gildemeister of Peru, the last woman to beat her in early March. Gildemeister, yet to drop a set, won her third round match from qualifier Magdalena Maleeva, 6-1, 6-3.

Seventh seed Thomas Muster and No. 15 Guillermo Perez-Roldan both reached the round of 16 of the men's draw, each in four sets. In a match suspended by darkness Friday, Muster ousted 1983 French champion Yannick Noah, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Also moving into the fourth round among the women were sixth seed Manuela Maleeva, No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez and No. 10 Natalia Zvereva. Maleeva experienced a scare before subduing Patricia Tarabini 2-6, 7-5, 6-0, while Fernandez and Zvereva both won in straight sets.

Following five days of near perfect weather, the skies were overcast Saturday with an occasional drop of rain and a swirling wind that scattered dust from the red-clay courts.

Although Capriati is officially ranked No. 24, her victory Saturday lifted her to a hypothetical ranking of No. 17, according to the Women's International Tennis Association.

''From her ability, she is in the top 10,'' said Wiesner, a 24-year-old Austrian who is ranked 13th. ''She doesn't seem like 14. She's physically grown up. You see other girls at that age and they are a lot weaker.''

Capriati won only three points in the first two games, but a couple of fortunate bounces enabled her to break back in the sixth game and even the match at 3-3. Wiesner double faulted to 15-30, and Capriati then had two winning net cords, the second one coming on break point on a backhand service return.

''I thought I got really lucky on those,'' Capriati admitted. ''I loosened up after that, and I loosened up a lot in the second set.''

After the two women exchanged service breaks, Capriati took the opening set with a break in the 10th game on a forehand service return down the line.

Capriati jumped to a 5-2 lead in the second set before Wiesner fought back to narrow the deficit to 5-4. Capriati broke again in the 10th game to end the match.

''She keeps going for everything,'' Wiesner said. ''That's really different from the other players. Maybe it's a question of age, too. I remember when I was 14, you play different. It is a strength she has. She shows no nerves.''

Graf worked a little harder than expected against Cecchini, ranked 26th in the world, and was tied at 3-3 in the second set before sweeping the final three games.

''I didn't take enough time with my serve, I wasn't concentrating enough '' Graf said. ''The conditions were difficult with the wind. I'm happy to get through.''

Seles, who dropped a set for the first time in 27 matches in her previous outing, flirted with danger on Court 1 against Meskhi, ranked No. 25.

There were five successive service breaks in the second set before Seles held for a 5-2 lead. She squandered a match point in the eighth game, then lost three games in a row, setting up another tie-break.

Seles led all the way in the tie-break, although she did allow a 4-1 edge to slip to 5-4.

''I was playing the last 4-5 weeks unbelievable and I usually have a week's letdown,'' Seles said. ''I want to bring my level of game back to where it was a couple of weeks ago.''

NEWARK, N.J. (JUNE 2) UPI - Mari Carmen Ferraez, the top female athlete in Glen Ridge High School's class of 1989, is in an unlikely situation for a teenager from a quiet suburb: under indictment for witness tampering and obstructing the administration of the law.

The charges against Ferraez stem from an attempt to help a group of friends, all male athletic stars, who are accused of sexually assaulting a 17-year-old girl during a group orgy in a basement recreation room.

Prosecutors charge that the girl, who knew most of those involved from childhood, was penetrated with wooden objects including a baseball bat and broomstick. They claim she is retarded and incapable of consenting to sex.

Ferraez, working with a defense investigator, taped conversations with the girl. The tapes were played for an Essex County grand jury investigating the alleged assault.

Defense lawyers hoped the tapes would convince jurors the alleged victim is bright enough to know what she was getting into when she went to the home of Kevin and Kyle Scherzer, the twin co-captains of the Glen Ridge football team, and smart enough to fabricate a story. But the tactic backfired.

''All she did was have a conversation with this girl about what happened in the basement,'' said Ferraez's lawyer, Gary Moylen. ''This is a very important issue. The grand jury's still out. If they can indict my client, they can indict the investigator, which means a criminal defense attorney has no right to investigate charges against his client.''

On May 22, more than a year after the alleged assault, a special grand jury handed down indictments. As expected, four 19-year-olds who had been arrested months before were charged: the Scherzer twins and their classmates and fellow athletes Richard Corcoran Jr., son of the Glen Ridge police lieutenant who headed the initial investigation, and Peter Quigley. All face up to 20 years in prison if convicted of aggravated sexual assault.

John Maher, 19, was charged with conspiracy for allegedly trying to entice the girl to a second encounter. Three juveniles have also been arrested and may face adult charges.

At a May 22 news conference, Essex County Prosecutor Herbert Tate Jr. defended the charges against Ferraez, now 19, a former basketball and volleyball star at Glen Ridge.

Ferraez, now a student nurse at Mountainside Hospital near her home, is the daughter of a high-ranking Salvation Army official and is the captain of a field hockey team.

Tate said the tapes were not the issue. The grand jury decided to indict Ferraez because she tried to get the alleged victim ''to testify falsely or to withhold information'' and because she held one conversation with the girl the day before a scheduled grand jury appearance.

Defense lawyers say Ferraez testified before the special grand jury investigating the alleged assault and was never told she was a target of the investigation. If she is convicted, she faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison, although as a first offender she is unlikely to receive a prison term.

But her indictment has New Jersey's defense lawyers up in arms.

''The only thing I've read is that the young woman talked to the victim,'' said Louis Raveson, an associate professor at Rutgers University Law School and director of the school's urban legal clinic. ''If that's tampering, the prosecution would be committing tampering in virtually every case. They shouldn't use a double standard.''

The alleged victim's ability to comprehend what was happening may be crucial not only to the sexual assault case, but to the charges against Ferraez.

While the law does not single out children or the retarded for special treatment as witnesses, Raveson said, Ferraez may have taken advantage of the girl's ''suggestibility.''

''It's quite possible that she was really pushing somebody who wasn't capable of withstanding pushing,'' he added.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - While the Capital Children's Museum has been graced by its share of famous guests, a visit by Soviet first lady Raisa Gorbachev put the tiny museum ever so briefly in the international spotlight.

Gorbachev produced a publicity boost for the 10-year-old museum, which is located near the U.S. Capitol and features artwork aimed at children, in a tour Thursday during the superpower summit.

''It was just one of the most exciting times we've ever had,'' said Ann Lewin, the museum's director.

''Mrs. Gorbachev is a phenomenon,'' Lewin added. ''She reads English extremely well (and) it's obvious that she's a very intelligent and self-assured person.''

Gorbachev presented the museum with a blue ceramic whale and told a Russian folktale of a whale that ''very gently'' swallows a boat full of people and then sends it out to sea again, Lewin said.

''We told her we would translate the folktale into English and make an exhibit of it,'' Lewin said.

The museum presented Gorbachev with several gifts, including a painting by an Armenian child and a poster that displays various methods of communication.

The Soviet first lady also spent time talking with Soviet photographer Anton Kumakov, whose pictures of children are currently on exhibit at the museum.

''I was very glad, very happy and deeply impressed with Mrs. Gorbachev's knowledge of art and her willingness to promote it in the Soviet Union,'' Kumakov said through an interpreter.

Gorbachev has been active in the Soviet Cultural Foundation, an organization involved in preserving works that represent different Russian cultures.

Lewin said the museum, whose other well-known visitors have included first lady Barbara Bush and singer Michael Jackson, was pleased with the attention.

''It's fantastic for us and I can't think of a better way for us to help bring about a true friendship between the two countries,'' Lewin said.

CARSON CITY, NV (JUNE 2) UPI - A federal appeals court Saturday extended its stay of execution for killer Thomas ''Scrappydoo'' Baal, canceling for a second consecutive day the lethal injection that Baal has said he wants to go ahead.

Baal, who is resisting efforts by his parents to save his life, had been scheduled to die in Nevada State Prison at 10:05 p.m. PDT Saturday unless the stay was extended.

The extension granted by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco was expected to be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court. Both the Nevada attorney general's office and federal public defenders have transmitted all records in the case to Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

The circuit court had granted a temporary stay of execution late Thursday, saying it needed time to study the case. The appeals court continued the stay Saturday morning and set a new hearing in the case for July 31.

Baal, 26, has asked his parents and public defenders not to interfere. But Edwin and Doris Baal of Mesa, Colo., contend their son is not mentally competent to waive his rights to an appeal in federal court.

They have asked the appeals court to order an evidentiary hearing in U.S. District Court in Reno to determine if their son knows what he is doing in giving up his potential appeals.

Baal would be the fifth man in Nevada to die since the 1976 reinstatement of the state's death penalty.

Baal was convicted in the Feb. 26, 1988, slaying of Frances Maves in Las Vegas. Baal allegedly approached Maves, a shuttle bus driver, and asked her for help. She gave him $20, but he allegedly pulled a knife and pushed her into her car.

She tried to reason with him, prosecutors said, and then attempted to grab the knife. Baal, who maintains he was on a drug spree at the time, allegedly told her she should not have done and and then said, ''I now sentence you to death.''

Maves was stabbed eight times and her car and purse with $120 was stolen.

Baal was later arrested in Reno.

Baal's parents said their son had many emotional problems while growing up and they spent $100,000 for psychiatric care until they ran out of money. They said they could not find any government agency to help and Baal checked out of a mental hospital and left.

Three psychiatrists in 1988 found Baal competent before he pleaded guilty to murder. Last week, prison psychiatrist Charles Van Valkenburg testified he believed Baal was competent to make a decision to forego further appeals.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... U-P-I brings you the world, next:

President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev move their summit to the presidential retreat of Camp David in the mountains of Maryland today, where they'll discuss U-S-Soviet economic relations. Yesterday the two leaders signed a batch of accords, including a major trade agreement.

Bush and Gorbachev also stepped in to end a deadlock between U-S-Soviet arms negotiators on a treaty to the arsenal of long-range nuclear weapons. Envoys worked out thorny issues on how to handle land-based mobile missles. Both sides agreed that a treaty limiting strategic weapons should be this year.

Last night Gorbachev played host at the Soviet Embassy with a dinner in Bush's honor. The Soviet leader declared that progress achieved to date is due in large part to the relationship the two leaders have built. Bush, in turn, spoke of ''the new spirit of freedom'' sweeping Europe.

Bush and Gorbachev have NOT agreed on the future alliance status of a united Germany. In East Berlin, West German Foreign Minister Genscher reiterated that a united Germany be part of NATO. Genscher insists that membership in the Western military alliance will contribute to European security.

Tornadoes, heavy rain and crop-damaging hail ripped through western and central Nebraska last night... damaging buildings, equipment, power lines and trees. Grant Fire Chief Donald Softley says a tornado downed power lines when it struck outside Grant. Hail damaged maturing wheat.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - As President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev huddled at Camp David in the third day of their summit, other officials signed three agreements Saturday to broaden relations between the nations.

Bruce Gelb, director of the U.S. Information Agency, and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Alexei Obhukov signed two agreements at the State Department to widen cultural contacts. In addition, Obhukov and U.S. Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett signed an agreement widening cooperation between customs agents in both countries, particularly in the field of combatting narcotics trafficking.

The first cultural agreement will permit both countries to establish cultural centers in Washington and Moscow, which will have libraries, show films and sponsor seminars.

The United States has about 100 such centers in other countries, but the one in Moscow, due to open in less than two years, will be the first in the Soviet Union.

Under the treaty signed Saturday, the public is guaranteed free access to the centers and the U.S. center in Moscow will have the right to cover its operating expenses in Soviet rubles, rather than in hard currency such as dollars.

For the second cultural agreement, U.S. and Soviet officials signed a memorandum of understanding that will permit increasing the circulation of two magazines, ''Soviet Life'' and ''America'' to 250,000 from the present ceiling of 80,000. ''Soviet Life'' is published by the Soviet government, while ''America'' is published by USIA.

The customs services' cooperation will include sharing information in other cases, including commerical fraud.

#90153u0509 06/02/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - The landmark U.S.-Soviet trade agreement, signed Friday by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, has a long way to go before it brings more bread to Soviet tables.

Although the trade accord has been signed, a waiver that is required to put it into effect will not be sent to Congress until the Soviet Union passes a law allowing for the free emigration of its citizens.

''I think the people who expect that there will be an immediate change in the trade relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union are slightly ahead of their time,'' said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla.

Trade experts said the agreement gives Gorbachev a valuable political symbol to take home and also is a key ingredient needed for the communist nation's efforts toward having a more market-oriented economy.

James Montgomery, executive director of the East-West Forum, a think tank based in Washington, D.C., said the agreement is more than symbolic but will not immediately put food on Soviet shelves.

''It's what absolutely has to happen if the Soviet Union is going to start down the road to a market economy,'' Montgomery said. ''They can't do that without the active approval of the United States.''

The trade pact would help the Soviet Union receive the lowest available tariffs in the United States, if Congress approves granting it ''most-favored-nation'' status.

This, in turn, could stimulate interest among U.S. companies to form joint ventures with Soviet manufacturers. Prohibitively high tariffs, among other problems, have cooled U.S. interest in Soviet manufacturing joint ventures in the past.

Robert Cullen, editor of the newsletter Soviet-American Trade, said most-favored-nation status would give the Soviets a ''morale boost.''

''It does hold out the promise of improving their economy substantially in the long run,'' he said.

The agreement also would lead to the removal of longstanding commercial restrictions, making the Soviets eligible for U.S. credit and guarantee programs provided by the Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corp.

In the bargaining, the United States won concessions on taxes and investments to aid U.S. businesses trading with the Soviets, software copyright protection and a promise by the Soviets to begin repaying $674 million in debt from the lend-lease program of World War II.

The agreement, however, does not guarantee lower tariffs. The 1974 Trade Act requires a number of conditions be met before a country is granted most-favored-nation trading status, which allows countries to receive the lowest possible tariffs.

Among the conditions is the Jackson-Vanik amendment requirement that nations allow the free emigration of citizens and a waiver of its provisions would be required. Congress has veto power over waiver.

About an hour after the trade agreement was signed, Secretary of State James Baker said Bush will not send the agreement to Congress until the Soviets enact emigration legislation, a move that would satisfy Jackson-Vanik requirements.

The trade deal also is contingent on lifting some other legal restrictions on U.S.-Soviet trade, which gives Congress another chance to pass on the deal.

Congress also is concerned about the economic sanctions the Soviet Union has used to thwart Lithuania's bid for freedom. The administration used the trade agreement as a bargaining chip in its effort to get Gorbachev to ease off Lithuania.

But, the trade deal went through Friday without any apparent Soviet movement on Lithuania. Baker reminded reporters that Bush recently said it would be ''extraordinarily difficult'' to win congressional approval of the deal without a change in the status of the Baltics.

During a meeting with congressional leaders, Gorbachev heard firsthand the concern about Lithuania. Congressional meddling into Soviet domestic policy also is bound to infuriate the Kremlin.

''There has been and there is resentment in the Soviet Union when somebody in this country or in some other countries (tries) to dictate to our parliament what kind of laws and at what time and in what form they should adopt,'' said Gorbachev's spokesman, Arkady Maslennikov.

In that regard, Gorbachev said a ''favorable gesture'' from Congress would ''be very helpful mostly, I would say, politically.'' He also acknowledged that most-favored-nation trade status would have little effect in the near term ''because really the trade relationship now between us is very primitive.''

There is much room for improvement in the U.S.-Soviet trade relationship. Last year, trade between the countries totaled about $5.6 billion, up from $3.5 billion the year before, but still a mere fraction of U.S. trade with other nations.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 2) UPI - A fire-plagued luxury liner may be cleared to sail again despite the possibility that one of its crew is an arsonist, an uneasy Coast Guard officer said Saturday.

''It's unnerving,'' Lt. Pete Hoffman said. ''We're concerned about the firebug and we want him to be found and removed. But the bottom line is, when we're satisfied the ship is safe to sail, we'll let it sail.''

Investigators said a fire in a lower-deck storeroom about 4:30 a.m. Friday was deliberatley set while the 24,000-ton Regent Star was docked at Penn's Landing. No one was injured, but the fire forced the cancellation of a weekend cruise.

The arson is being investigated by Philadelphia police and the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, but no suspects were in custody.

An apparently unrelated fire as the ship was steaming toward Philadelphia five days earlier knocked out the ship's power and caused it to run aground in the Delaware Bay off Fortescue, N.J. The ship was refloated two days later after nearly 900 passengers were evacuated.

The Coast Guard conducted safety inspections and a fire drill aboard the liner Saturday to make sure the crew of nearly 500 is prepared to handle another emergency.

''We're doing extensive tests of systems and emergency drills to see how the crew reacts,'' Hoffman said. He said that, while the officers in charge of the ship have responded well to the fires, inspectors are concerned with the 450 crew members who are hotel service employees.

Since crew members were the only authorized personnel on board when Friday's fire broke out, Hoffman said, it seems likely one or more of them is responsible for the fire. About 250 crew members were on board at the time of the fire.

Hoffman said the Coast Guard is doing ''everything we can to make sure the ship stays on schedule.'' He said the Regent Star could be cleared to sail on a five-day cruise to Canada Sunday afternoon.

The final decision on that voyage is up to Larry Murdoch, the Coast Guard's captain of the Philadelphia port.

Hoffman said if the 642-foot vessel is cleared to sail, it is unlikely the firebug would strike again when the ship leaves port.

''It's a tough situation, but when you're out at sea there's one big difference,'' he said. ''The guy who sets the fire has just as far to run as everybody else. And I don't think he's stupid.''

SHOW LOW, AZ (JUNE 2) UPI - A NASA device used to measure radioactivity in the upper atmosphere broke apart when a wind gust interfered with its parachute landing in eastern Arizona, officials said.

NASA engineer Al Huters estimated the device - called a GRIS, or gamma-ray imaging spectrometer - suffered $2 million damage in Friday's accident about 5 miles east of Show Low.

The GRIS, mounted on a steel gondola connected to a helium-filled balloon, was launched Thursday morning from Fort Sumner, N.M.

Jack Tueller, a NASA scientist who helped build the device and was tracking it from Fort Sumner, said scientists at the New Mexico base triggered a radio signal Thursday night to separate the device from the balloon and activate a parachute, starting its return to Earth.

Tueller said the probe was supposed to land very softly but that a wind gust apparently caught the instrument as it was about to touch down Friday. The probe broke apart, scattering batteries and electronic devices over a small area.

The damaged probe is one of two built at the Goddard Space Center in Maryland and Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque. The other is being used at the University of California in San Diego.

NASA officials said the GRIS made two experimental flights in Australia in 1988 with no problems.

They said the damaged probe would be taken to the Goddard Space Center for repairs.

(JUNE 2) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev may well have developed writer's cramp from all of the agreement-signing they did yesterday.

In addition to a major trade agreement... Bush and Gorbachev agreed on a new U-S-Soviet grain pact. It's the fourth agreement to regulate sales since unexpected Soviet purchases emptied U-S warehouses in the early 1970's.

Negotiators reached agreement on terms for the five-year pact two months ago... but officials hint that formal approval was delayed so the pact could be signed at this week's summit meeting.

Other bilateral agreements include a reduction in chemical weapons stockpiles... verification protocols on nuclear test ban treaties... and university student exchanges.

The U-S and Soviet leaders also stepped in to break a deadlock between their arms negotiators on a treaty to cut arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

Another agreement includes a treaty to re-draw the 16-mile border separating Alaska from the Soviet Far East in the Bering Sea. The bill is subject to Senate ratification.

(JUNE 2) UPI - When Soviet President Gorbachev arrived in the United States Wednesday... Secretary of State Baker said in welcoming remarks that the eyes of the world are upon him and President Bush during their four-day summit.

Well, almost all the world.

For all of the coverage the summit is receiving in the United States, Soviet citizens are greeting televised coverage with yawns. Muscovites say they are NOT impressed by the glamour of the superpower summit.

In Moscow's Gorky Park, 29-year-old Yelena Shalnov said... ''Today there are few people who believe in him or the Politburo. There is NO faith in them.''

But 45-year-old education professor Anatoli Petrov said improved U-S-Soviet relations and decreased international tensions will benefit his country.

Said Petrov... ''It is very good that after so many years of Cold War and confrontation, we have turned our faces toward each other.''

(JUNE 2) UPI - A rebel take-over could be imminent in the West African nation of Liberia. The forces of rebel leader Charles Taylor are nearing the capital... Monrovia... in an attempt to oust President Samuel Doe.

As of yesterday, Taylor's forces were only 23 miles from Monrovia. A senior rebel leader told U-P-I the forces would attack the capital in a few days.

Doe is appealing for international help and is offering to hold free elections next year and NOT run for the office himself.

Liberia's official news agency says Doe asked the Bush administration for help. Doe says Americans are ''traditional friends'' of Liberia, which was founded by freed U-S slaves. But so far, he has NOT received any help.

The U-S administration has urged all Americans to leave Liberia and sent 22-hundred Marines to the international waters off the coast to help with evacuations, if necessary.

Doe rose to power in 1980 during a coup. His government has been widely criticized for extreme human rights abuses.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Maryland police say a congresswoman and a former police officer who's now a process-server accuse each other of assault and threaten to press charges against each other.

The process-server was trying to serve Republican Congresswoman Helen Bentley with a court summons in a murder case when they apparently got into a scuffle over Bentley's refusal to accept the summons.

Baltimore County police say Bentley told the process server, John Burns, that she first would have to check with a congressional lawyer. Burns apparently placed the summons, issued in a five-year-old murder case, on a desk and turned to leave. At that point, the two scuffled.

Police spokesman Jay Miller says Burns told authorities the congresswoman, who stands about five-foot-two, ''put her hands on his throat and pushed him against the wall.'' Bentley says Burns pushed her away.

(JUNE 2) UPI - There's NO telling what some youngsters will do to gain popularity. Police in Clearlake, California, still are looking for most of the 10-thousand dollars that a girl took to school.

Police say the 13-year-old dug the money up from where it was buried in her grandfather's neighbor's shed.

They add she apparently thought it was drug money. Actually, it was part of 40-thousand dollars in proceeds from a house sale.

The girl took the cash to Oak Hill Middle School and started handing it out to her friends. One youngster called out ''cop'' and the girl started throwing the money. The one who yelled ''cop'' was only joking.

By the end of the day, school officials had recovered about three-thousand dollars and were still looking for the rest. Vice Principal Thomas Essex says- ''Kids were walking up to me and giving me 20's and 50's.''

A 12-year-old who turned in 200-dollars told his father money was all over the school.

Police say the man buried the money in his shed so he could have quick access to it. When Principal Susan Daly asked the girl why she brought the money to school, the girl replied- ''I don't really know. It just kind of happened.''

CHICAGO (JUNE 2) UPI - Parenthood appears to be a universal desire and almost every adult in the United States has children or wants them, a Gallup poll published Saturday said.

The poll of 1,239 adults taken in April by the Gallup Organization and published in Sunday editions of the Chicago Sun-Times said 90 percent of Americans older than 40 have children.

Of the 10 percent who do not have children, six of 10 say they wish they had.

Of those polled under age 40, 58 percent said they had kids. Of the remaining 42 percent, 84 percent said they would like to have them.

''Only an extremely small segment of Americans - about 4 percent - are anti-children; that is, don't have any, don't want any, or are glad that they don't have any. Parenthood, in short, appears to be a universal desire,'' said George H. Gallup Jr. and Dr. Frank Newport, who wrote the poll.

Only 7 percent of parents said they wished they had not had children.

''Most parents find it somewhat difficult to pin down why they want children,'' the men wrote.

The most common reasons cited were: the love and affection children bring (12 percent); having the pleasure of watching them grow (11 percent); and the joy, happiness and fun they bring (10 percent).

The poll also found:

-Eight of 10 Americans think parents today are insufficiently strict in disciplining children; just 2 percent say parents are too strict.

-Children are at their worst and ''most difficult to be around'' during their teenage years.

-Sixty-three percent said a family where the father has a job and the mother stays at home is the ideal situation; Seventy-three percent of families with stay-at-home mothers believe the children are better off; but 64 percent of families with working mothers believe their children do just as well as those with stay-at-home mothers.

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (JUNE 2) UPI - Ethnic clashes spread Saturday to rural areas of Sind Province as motorcycle-riding gunmen shot and killed two Pakistani journalists in the hometown of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, reports said.

The army, which took control of the southern province Friday as mounting violence claimed nearly 400 lives, said it needed more troops to maintain order as bloodshed spilled over into the countryside.

The violence in Sind, first erupting last week in Hyderabad, was sparked by differences between the native Sindhis and Mohajirs - descendants of Moslems who migrated from India when the subcontinent was divided in 1947.

The attack on journalists occurred in Larkana town, 250 miles from Karachi. The victims were identified as Motahir Naqvi of Pakistan Press International, the national news agency, and Ahmad Kamal Khan, the local correspondent of Nawai Waqt, an Urdu-language daily.

The two were walking out of the telegraph office after filing their stories when two gunmen riding motorcycles opened fire, killing the journalists, reports said.

It was the second known attack on journalists in the area. Last Thursday, the local correspondent of the prominent Pakistan daily, Jang, was killed about 300 miles from Karachi.

Sind has been rocked by a bloody wave of ethnic clashes that has already claimed nearly 400 lives in different cities, including Karachi and Hyderabad. Tens of demonstrators were killed in Hyderabad last week when police opened fire on protesters who defied a curfew.

The army took control of Hyderabad following the unrest.

The situation in Karachi and Hyderabad has been brought under control with army troops patrolling the streets, authorities said. Army commanders are seeking greater powers to arrest suspected trouble-makers but the civil administration has not yet granted the extra powers.

PHOENIX (JUNE 2) UPI - A 5-year-old boy who contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion when he was 2 days old has been awarded $28.7 million, believed to be the largest damage award in AIDS litigation in the United States.

A Maricopa County Superior Court jury Friday awarded the damages to Alex Edwards, of Mesa. The damages were assessed against Dr. Abraham Kuruvilla and his clinic, Neonatology Associates Ltd.

Kuruvilla's attorney, Duane Olson, called the verdict ''worse than I ever could have dreamed'' and said he would appeal.

A suit filed on behalf of the boy claimed he contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome from a blood transfusion March 13, 1985, two days after his birth. The suit claimed Kuruvilla should have obtained consent from the parents before ordering the transfusion and should have pursued alternative treatments for the baby's respiratory problems.

Alex tested positive for the antibody of the AIDS virus in early 1987 after health officials determined that United Blood Services of Arizona - source of the blood given Alex - had received blood from an infected donor.

The nine-member jury awarded $26.7 million to Alex and $1 million to his parents for the loss of the boy's companionship and the emotional distress of having a child suffering from AIDS.

In closing arguments, Olson suggested that $2.5 million would be a reasonable award, but jury foreman Ray Howell said jurors rejected that immediately as inadequate.

Howell said jurors set the $26.7 million figures for Alex by setting a life expectancy of 40 years and giving him $600,000 for each year, with considerations for inflation.

Two defendants - Blood Systems Inc., parent of United Blood Services of Arizona, and Samaritan Health Services, operator of Desert Samaritan Hospital where Alex received the transfusion - settled out of court earlier..

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 2) UPI - Minnesotans will welcome Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to the American heartland Sunday after elaborate preparations in which Midwestern common sense vied with goofiness.

''Before you greet President Gorbachev, iron your shirt,'' the Minneapolis Star Tribune instructed its readers in a full-page message featuring a ''commemorative iron-on decal that you can transfer onto your T-shirt.''

The decal displays the flags of the two superpowers under the words ''Welcome to Minnesota,'' printed in the Russian alphabet.

After weeks of wrangling, a guest list was disclosed for Gorbachev's meeting in downtown Minneapolis with some of America's top business and agriculture leaders.

The 145 participants, many arriving on corporate jets, include Lee Iacocca who masterminded the Chrysler bailout and presumably could offer Gorbachev some advice on how to prop up the sagging Soviet economy.

But Gorbachev probably will not solicit solutions to his political problems from another guest: H.R. Haldeman of Watergate infamy.

The visit of the world's best-known communist set off a wave of capitalism in the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, the adjacent state capital dominated by the green-domed Cathedral of St. Paul.

Before an ecumenical prayer service at the Roman Catholic cathedral was scratched from the Gorbachev itinerary, an entrepreneur approached the archdiocese with a proposition.

He wanted the archdiocese to market T-shirts displaying the cathedral and the words, ''Gorby prayed here.''

''Thank God we didn't do it,'' Archbishop John Roach said. ''We'd be stuck with 5,000 T-shirts.''

Manufacturers have pressed for the opportunity to give Gorbachev presents, including such items as a commemorative Monopoly game that uses the Russian language and fake rubles with about as much buying power as real ones.

The Metrodome, home of the baseball Twins and the football Vikings, is being used as a press center for the more than 1,000 members of the news media here to cover Sunday's six-hour visit.

Details about touchdown-to-takeoff security plans have been kept deliberately quiet. Food to be eaten by Gorbachev will be tested randomly. Freeway overpasses along his motorcade route will be blocked.

Protesters will be monitored closely, including those demanding Baltic independence and Lao and Cambodian demonstrators opposed to Soviet military aid to Vietnam.

Star Tribune columnist Jim Klobuchar, noting the lack of pandemonium in the Minnesota lifestyle, wrote that when the locals celebrate or witness a historic event, their instinctual response is to organize a fishing contest, promote a potluck dinner or leave in the seventh inning.

The newspaper's instructions on how to transfer Old Glory and the hammer and sickle to a T-shirt told readers to ''put a clean sheet of paper over the decal, covering the entire surface.''

''Be careful not to let the iron touch the shirt, or it could damage the material,'' the Star Tribune warned in italic type, without specifically mentioning the prospect of being busted for flag-burning.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - Arms control analysts gave mixed reviews Saturday to the Bush-Gorbachev strategic nuclear weapons agreement that leaves three major issues to be resolved before a START treaty can be signed.

''They're 99 percent there,'' said Stan Norris, an arms control analyst with the private Natural Resources Defense Council. ''There's three more issues and then they can sign it.''

But former U.S. arms negotiator Paul Warnke called the remaining items ''roadblocks'' and said of President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev: ''I think they did not get quite as far as they hoped that they would get.''

Bush and Gorbachev agreed Friday to a framework for a Strategic Arms

Reduction Talks, or START, treaty that would reduce the superpowers' combined strategic nuclear arsenals from 23,300 warheads to 16,000 - or about 30 percent.

Among new agreements reached during the summit included limiting each side to 1,100 warheads on mobile missiles as part of an overall restriction of 4,900 warheads on land- and sea-launched ballistic missiles.

Also, negotiators agreed on verification procedures for road-mobile missiles to go with those for rail-mobile missiles and also agreed to prohibit placing so-called heavy missiles on mobile launchers.

Senior U.S. officials said three major obstacles remain: U.S.-sought limits on flight testing of heavy missiles, which only the Soviets have; U.S.-sought restrictions on the Soviet Backfire bomber; and ''non-circumvention,'' basically a Soviet-sought restriction on the U.S. transfer of the new submarine-launched Trident 2 missile to Britain.

''We get back into (formal START negotiating) business in Geneva on June 11. ... I hope we'll be able to resolve these questions quickly,'' one official said.

Warnke said the stickiest problem may be the testing of heavy missiles, where the United States wants to restrict Soviet modernization of the only heavy missile in existence - the 10-warhead SS-18, which is believed capable of destroying U.S. missile silos.

Former U.S. arms negotiator Richard Perle was critical of the agreement, noting that Gorbachev was perceived to be in a weaker negotiating position because of his troubles back in the Soviet Union.

''He's playing a weak hand as if it's a strong one,'' Perle said. ''What's harder to understand is why we're playing a strong hand as if it's a weak one.''

But Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said the agreement is ''doing pretty well.''

''I think that you can always do better. The solution is to sign this agreement and get on to START II,'' Aspin said.

Norris said he believes the three issues will be resolved quickly, in time for a START treaty signing by the end of the year - a goal Bush and Gorbachev have embraced.

''In the the context of dealing with eight years of (START) negotiations and dozens of intricate problems that have been overcome, some problems had to be last and these happen to be it,'' he said of the three issues.

The Soviets, addressing U.S. concerns, promised in the SALT II talks in 1979 that the Backfire bomber would not be converted to intercontinental range and a similar promise with ''the right language'' will be made again Norris said.

''This non-circumvention business ... we'll probably pledge not to circumvent but with one footnote that we do have this longtime relationship with the British,'' Norris said. ''We're in a position where we can't say, 'Well, we're sorry (British Prime Minister Margaret) Mrs. Thatcher, you can't have those missiles anymore.'''

''On the testing of heavy missiles, we wanted them banned outright. But that wasn't going to fly with the Soviets since we were giving up nothing in return.

''The Soviets are coming around to agreeing to some sort of future ban on its production, after a few more years,'' Norris said. ''They'll get about 154 of them ... then they'll have a modern heavy missile.''

Norris noted the treaty, as it now stands, does not prevent either side from building new, deadlier long-range nuclear missiles - it only places ceilings and sub-ceilings on new weapons while old models are being destroyed.

''We will have modestly reduced forces of brand new weapons,'' Norris said. ''A lean and mean force, and all of the junk is gone. They get credit for all of these reductions and they were going to get rid of the junk anyway.

''These are not the most painful things for the air force and navies of the two countries here,'' Norris said, adding, ''I have to support the treaty, but I have to be honest about what it really accomplishes.''

ST. GALL, SWITZERLAND (JUNE 2) UPI - The U.S. soccer team, in a tuneup for World Cup play, Saturday night lost to Switzerland 2-1 on two late goals.

The loss was the first this year for the United States, which entered the game with eight wins and one tie, mostly against foes of lesser caliber.

Switzerland is placed near the bottom of the European soccer hierarchy, did not qualify for the World Cup and missed four regulars who are playing in the Swiss Cup final Monday.

In the 22nd minute, as the Swiss attempted to set the offside trap, Bruce Murray escaped on the left side, ran in alone on goalkeeper Philipp Walker and beat him with a low shot to give the Americans a 1-0 lead.

When Swiss striker Adrian Knup hit the crossbar in the 62nd minute, it signaled the start of rally culminating in goals by Peter Schepull in the 71st and Knup in the 80th.

Schepull redirected a freekick cross from Marc Hottiger with his head, while Knup eluded the U.S. defense on the right side and beat goalie Tony Meola with a booming drive.

''We played a very good first half,'' said U.S. head Coach Bob Gansler. ''It was good for our self-confidence and in gaining experience.''

He added that the Americans will enter the World Cup clearly as an underdog.

''We were drawn from pot 4, which is the lowest seed group, and that is where we belong, no question,'' he said. ''But we hope to upset Czechoslovakia or Austria. The other team, Italy, playing before its own crowd, appears to be out of reach. But the Austrians are a good team too, they seem to peak at around the perfect time.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - Depending upon negotiating progress in Geneva and Vienna in the coming months, the Senate over the next year could face ratification chores on as many as four treaties and a chemical weapons agreement.

While final details need to resolved on a major pact curbing levels of long-range nuclear delivery systems and the number of warheads they carry, and talks still remain on setting limits on conventional forces in Europe, two other treaties face the prospect of quick and easy approval in the Senate.

Among the documents signed Friday by Presidents Bush and Gorbachev were verification protocols for the peaceful nuclear explosions treaty and the threshhold test ban treaty, both of which have languished in the Senate since the mid 1970s because of concerns about verification. They also signed a deal directing significant cuts in stockpiles of chemical weapons.

Although it is not immediately certain if the Senate's schedule for the rest of the year will allow approval of the first two agreements - peaceful explosions and the threshhold test deal - ratification would give the two leaders signed, sealed and delivered treaties to exchange at any summit late in the year to sign a START treaty or the conventional pact, also known as CFE for conventional forces in Europe.

The START, or Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, pact and the CFE agreement will take more than the handful of days that the first two deals will consume.

It took two Senate committees and the Senate itself four months to handle the Intermediate Nuclear Forces pact in 1988 when conservatives mounted a futile delaying action to delay the first superpower pact to eliminate an entire class of nuclear weapons.

While treaty ratification is the exclusive province of the Senate, the House also will get the rare chance to have a hand in some of the action.

The deal to cut the chemical weapons stocks of both Washington and Moscow to 5,000 tons, or 20 percent of existing U.S. levels, is an executive agreement rather than a treaty. U.S. law requires that such agreements, and any deal outside a treaty that cuts military strength, win a majority vote in both the House and Senate.

The START deal, whose ratification may turn on strength of its verification provisions as they apply to mobile missiles, sets a variety of limits on both the United States and Moscow.

It limits the number of long-range delivery vehicles - sea- and land-based ballistic missiles as well as bombers - to 1,600. It sets a cap of 6,000 accountable warheads, no more than 4,900 of which can be on the sea- and land-based missiles, and no more than 1,100 of those can be atop mobile missiles. The United States is working on but has not yet fielded two kinds of mobile missiles, and Moscow already has out on the roads and railroad lines two types of missiles.

Because warheads carried by bombers are not counted on a one-for-one basis the total number of warheads held by each side will exceed the 6,000 cap, but in any event both sides will see an actual reduction in the number of warheads, up to 35 percent in Moscow's case and about 25 percent for the United States.

The conventional pact is aimed at equalizing troop and equipment levels in Europe, and its central sticking point is agreement on how to deal with the military status of a unified Germany. West Germany is part of NATO and East Germany belongs to the Warsaw Pact.

The peaceful nuclear explosions pact covers the possibility of using nuclear charges for such things as mining or, as was once suggested, blasting a sea-level canal across Panama. Verification controls will ensure each side that the other is not using peaceful blasts as a guise for testing weapons.

The threshhold agreement sets a 150-kiloton limit on the size of weapons tests and contains a verification regime.

(JUNE 2) UPI - President and Mrs. Bush will host President Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, at the Camp David presidential retreat today. The two presidents are expected to focus on regional issues, such as the Middle East situation, during their third day of talks.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev signed 14 agreements at the White House yesterday... ranging from nuclear testing limits to establishing an international ocean park in the Bering Strait region.

Sources close to the P-L-O say the Bush administration has officially asked the Palestine Liberation Organization to denounce this week's attempted guerrilla raid on Israeli shores. The United States also asks that factional leader Mohammed Abu Abbas be expelled from the P-L-O.

Texas authorities say two people died and three others were seriously hurt yesterday when a twister touched down in the southwestern part of the state... touching off five traffic accidents. The tornado hit a rural area about 50 miles south of Midland and Odessa.

New York City police say three people were killed and one critically injured when a car collided with a city bus on Staten Island early this morning. NO one aboard the bus was hurt, but the car burst into flames, trapping the four passengers.

Miami police say a car bomb exploded yesterday as the wife of a police informant started her van in the driveway of their home. The F-B-I says the woman was thrown from the car but escaped injury. Debris was scattered as far as a block away.

CAMP DAVID, MD (JUNE 2) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev walked in the footsteps of their predecessors Saturday, conferring on weighty global issues in the relaxed setting of the president's mountaintop retreat.

The two leaders, wearing business suits and ties, flew to Camp David from Washington early Saturday for some nine hours of scheduled private talks and walks along the wooded trails in the heavily guarded presidential hideaway.

They were accompanied by their wives, Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev, for the more social moments of the daylong meetings on the highest mountain in Maryland's Cactoctin Mountains.

Bush enjoys the relaxed meetings at Camp David with foreign leaders but he was hard put to discover what sports he could engage the more serious-minded Gorbachev in during their ''family-style'' outing at the retreat.

When Gorbachev first accepted an invitation to visit Camp David, White House aides contacted the Soviet Embassy to learn what pastimes the Kremlin leader enjoys.

Word came back that Gorbachev likes to work, and would not be interested in the array of activities available at Camp David, like horseback riding, swimming, tennis, hiking or even chess.

''We were led to believe that he is pretty much of a workaholic,'' a White House aide said.

The news was a big disappointment to the athletic Bush, who had wanted to foster superpower relations with some friendly one-one-one competition.

As the presidents and first ladies stepped from their helicopters and onto a landing strip, a bell rang out announcing their arrival.

The bell is from the USS Endicott, a destroyer commissioned in 1942, the same year President Franklin D. Roosevelt opened the retreat, which has hosted numerous meetings between U.S. presidents and visiting heads of state.

Gorbachev told reporters on his arrival that he was interested in discussing global ''flashpoints'' during his Camp David visit.

''We have a lot of subjects,'' said Gorbachev shortly after landing amid the sparkling streams and towering pine trees of the retreat. ''The most important thing we are going to discuss are the global flashpoints and that means the regional issues.''

But Bush, taking a different approach, said: ''We have wonderful trails to walk. It'll be a totally relaxed environment today.''

Gorbachev declined an invitation to drive the golf cart and Bush took the wheel, saying, ''Here we go - a great day.''

After their talks, the two were to be joined by top advisers for cocktails and dinner.

Since he came into office, Bush has tried to establish a personal first name relationship with world leaders, with mixed results. He gets along famously with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. His relationship with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is more formal.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower met with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev at Camp David in 1959. At the height of detente, in 1973, President Richard Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev used the retreat to discuss arms control.

Camp David earned a lasting place in history as the setting for the Middle East peace talks sponsored by President Jimmy Carter, who worked with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The agreements, reached in 12 days during 1978, became known as the Camp David Accords.

The secluded site was created for the handicapped Roosevelt in 1942 to permit him to get away from Washington's oppressive summer heat while staying in close touch with the White House war room during World War II.

After Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's bombing raid on Tokyo, Roosevelt decide to name the retreat Shangri-La in honor of the location from which he said the bombers were launched. Roosevelt and his advisers held many military strategy meetings at the retreat.

Eisenhower renamed the camp after his grandson David. Lyndon B. Johnson renamed it ''Camp Three'' and Nixon changed it back again to ''Camp David '' as it has remained until this day.

Security around Camp David has become more restrictive during the nearly half century of its existence. Barbed wire rings the perimeter and armed Marines guard the premises.

While at Camp David, the Bushes stay in the comfortably furnished Aspen Lodge made of native woods and stone. Residents can swim in the pool, play miniature golf, go hiking or participate in target shooting.

The Bushes head for Camp David every possible weekend to get away from the official demanding life they live in the White House.

SPRINGFIELD, MA (JUNE 2) UPI - Massachusetts Democrats were blindsided Saturday by a police union job action that left candidates and thousands of state convention delegates on the street while one prominent party member fumed about a ''Bush dirty trick.''

The long-awaited gathering of 5,273 Democrats to endorse statewide candidates was reduced to a shambles when about 100 members of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers Local 364 set up picket lines outside the Springfield Civic Center to protest a contract stalemate with Mayor Mary Hurley.

Meanwhile, party officials labored to reach a compromise that would give each candidate the requisite 15 percent support required to earn a September primary ballot spot.

That would ensure the controversial gubernatorial candidacy of Boston University President John R. Silber, who had challenged the rule as the equivalent of ''white supremacist tactics'' and faced an uphill battle to win a ballot spot.

Candidates and thousands of delegates loitered outside the halls as party officials tried to mediate a compromise. Finally, exasperated party leaders obtained an injunction against an ''illegal labor action'' that convinced enough pro-union delegates to enter the hall and begin the session after nearly four hours.

The chaos added to the image problems Massachusetts Democrats have had since Gov. Michael Dukakis's unsucessful 1988 presidential campaign and the fiscal stalemate that followed in which the budget deficit grew to $1.2 billion while the Democratic-dominated Legislature could not reach consensus.

Angry Democrats noted the union had endorsed President Bush two years ago in a highly embarassing scene and a longtime Dukakis loyalist pointed to the GOP as being behind the job action.

''It's a Bush hit,'' said Human Services Secretary Philip W. Johnston. ''This is a dirty trick by the Bush organization.''

White House special assistant Ron Kaufman and state GOP executive director Alexander ''Sandy'' Tennnant were seen in the convention city 100 miles west of their Boston base Friday night, but kept a low profile during Saturday's protracted standoff.

Angry union members, who have worked without a contract since June 30, 1989, insisted their cause was simply financial.

''Other unions continue to receive their raises while we are told that the city's fiscal problems are such that there is no money for a police raise '' union leaders said in a letter distributed to delegates.

(JUNE 2) UPI - U-S-Soviet economic relations and regional conflicts around the world will be on the agenda at today's summit talks between President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev. The two leaders are changing their talks venue from the White House to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Maryland.

Bush and Gorbachev have covered a lot of ground in two days of talks so far. Yesterday the leaders broke a deadlock between their arms negotiators on a treaty to reduce their arsenal of long-range nuclear weapons. Both sides agree that a treaty limiting strategic weaponry should be signed by the end of 1990.

Summit focus has been on areas of U-S and Soviet concord. The biggest issue lying between Washington and Moscow... the alignment of a united Germany... has been swept under the rug. Rather than settling their differences, U-S and Soviet officials say the issue is too complicated for quick resolution.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 2) UPI - Persistent, personal lobbying by Mikhail Gorbachev tipped the balance in his favor for a coveted trade pact and spurred the eleventh-hour agreements that put a successful face on the U.S.-Soviet summit, officials said.

The U.S. officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said Friday night the last-minute progress and surprise signing of the commercial accord to boost trade between the two countries was largely due to Gorbachev's fervent pleas for the pact as a political gesture of great importance to him at home.

In addition, some progress was recorded on the talks to limit strategic nuclear arms, although not all the outstanding issue could be resolved.

Winning the trade pact was a top priority for Gorbachev to help his troubled economy but prospects appeared clouded down to the last minute by a continuing standoff over the Soviet Union's handling of Lithuania.

Bush, who has been urging political dialogue in the Baltic confrontation, had expressed reluctance to move ahead with the trade pact while Moscow continues its economic embargo of the breakaway republic, and a lucrative, five-year U.S.-Soviet grain deal also seemed caught in the cross-fire.

But officials said debate among the president's advisers finally went Gorbachev's way Friday afternoon under the sway of the Soviet president's persistent and extensive personal lobbying.

Despite word from their spokesmen that the topic was not central to the two days of talks preceding the suspenseful East Room ceremony Friday evening, one administration official said Gorbachev brought up the topic as the first order of business and pressed it on all subsequent occasions.

Gorbachev himself had stated bluntly earlier Friday that he would not ''beg for anything'' related to trade, but, said one official, ''The Soviet president made quite clear his need to revamp his economy and that he was going to need Western capital to bolster perestroika.''

In addition, the pact then became a ''heavy concentration'' Friday afternoon between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, the official said, ''right up to the ceremony.''

The signing event was also delayed for last-minute negotiations between the ministers, but they were unable to overcome remaining obstacles to full agreement on the START treaty.

Baker, briefing reporters later, said the two sides had resolved questions of sub-limits on mobile missiles, but were unable to resolve differences over a long-range Soviet bomber, testing of multiple-warhead missiles and questions of adherence to the treaty.

Most of the talk between the top advisers Friday, however, was spent on trade.

Baker refused to say what Bush had told Gorbachev about the conflict with the Baltics but indicated the U.S. side had exacted no commitments. He also would not say whether the Soviet had held out on the grain agreement as a bargaining chip to win the trade pact.

''I'm not going to talk carrots and sticks,'' said another official.

But according to the accounts of the unfolding events, Gorbachev's campaign began at the first meeting in the Oval Office Thursday morning with a ''very strong push'' for the trade deal, followed by further pleas.

Bush, officials said, decided in mid-afternoon Friday to sign the agreement but made clear to the Soviet the obstacles that remained, including a continuing concern in Congress that no trade benefits be handed to the Soviets while the Lithuania stand-off continued.

Once implemented, the pact would spur U.S. business investment and operations in the Soviet Union. But Bush will not submit it for congressional approval until the Soviets fulfill a promise to liberalize their emigration laws. That would clear the way for most-favored-nation tariff status.

Early in the day, Gorbachev strongly defended his handling of the republic's drive for independence and said of the trade pact, ''For us it would be humiliating if we were to beg for something from you and, of course, hopeless.''

But by nightfall he was clearly grateful.

Alluding to the economic and political turmoil he faces at home, he said, ''I am convinced that the Soviet people will appreciate the fact that the United States - the president of the United States - is signing this agreement to normalize Soviet-American commercial relations at this moment of special importance for our country.''

ELGIN, IL (JUNE 2) UPI - An accused killer and paranoid schizophrenic dubbed the ''star stalker'' was transferred to a maximum security facility after two people recently escaped from the mental health building where he was kept, a report said Saturday.

Ralph Nau was transferred Friday to the Chester Mental Health Center in southern Illinois from the Elgin Mental Health Center, where employees decribed him as a model patient, the Elgin Daily Courier-News reported Saturday.

Security has been increased at Elgin and the state Department of Mental Health and Disabilities is reviewing security procedures since the escape in recent weeks of two patients brought to the facility as a result of criminal charges.

One of the patients, David Youngerman, 25, escaped May 23 and is still at large. He was found innocent by reason of insanity in the attempted killing of his father. A second man, Paul Williams, held in the dismemberment slaying of his sister, walked off the grounds Monday but was recaptured the next day.

Nau's attorney, doctors and caseworker were not told of the transfer and may have violated the state's mental health code, the newspaper quoted a source as saying.

State law requires written notice 14 days in advance of any transfer, except in an emergency, if the patient poses a danger to himself or others or if adequate care is not available.

Nau has claimed female celebrities including Vanna White, Joan Lunden and Sheena Easton have sent love messages to him via television.

Nau confessed to police he killed his stepbrother with an ax in 1984 but a Lake County judge suppressed the confession after lawyers argued he was insane when he made the statement. He was acquitted and taken to Elgin in May 1989.

A trial was held when Nau petitioned to be removed from the mental health system, where he had been held involuntarily since his 1984 arrest in the slaying.

A Kane County jury found Nau should remain at the facility. The trial gained widespread publicity when Lake County assistant state's attorney Randall Stewart sent letters to more than 40 female celebrities warning them of Nau's possible release.

Nau has claimed he is married to singer-actresses Olivia Newton-John and Cher and has traveled to Australia and Las Vegas to see them.

(JUNE 2) UPI - Regional issues are expected to take center stage today as Presidents Bush and Gorbachev hold their third day of summit talks at the presidential retreat in Camp David. The two leaders, accompanied by their wives, will arrive at the mountain retreat this morning. Gorbachev welcomed the change of scenery, saying Camp David will allow for a lot of one-on-one contact.

Last night Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, hosted President and Mrs. Bush at a lavish dinner at the Soviet Embassy. The two leaders signed a trade agreement yesterday that still faces approval by a reluctant Congress, where members voice concern over the Soviet treatment of the independence-minded Baltic states. Bush and Gorbachev also signed a batch of other accords yesterday, including a treaty to drastically cut chemical weapons. UNALAKLEET, AK (JUNE 3) UPI - A MarkAir jet carrying no passengers crashed Saturday just before reaching its destination, injuring the four-member flight crew, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The Boeing 737, operated by the state's largest commuter airline, was on a flight from Anchorage to Unalakleet, which is on the Bering Sea coast of western Alaska.

The aircraft crashed 7 miles north of Unalakleet, FAA spokesman Mary Lou Wojtalik said in Anchorage.

The plane had made one approach to Unalakleet in fog and was unable to land and was making a second approach when it crashed, MarkAir spokeswoman Esther Miller said.

She said a flight attendant was seriously injured. She said the pilot, co-pilot and another flight attendant suffered less serious injuries. All were being returned to Anchorage for treatment.

This was not a regularly scheduled flight, but an extra flight added to meet passenger demand from Unalakleet to Anchorage, Miller said. She said the plane also was being used for cargo.

''We're luckly there were no passengers on it,'' she said.

The FAA said the crash occurred in rolling terrain in scattered low clouds. The FAA and the National Transportation Safety sent investigators to the scene.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (JUNE 3) UPI - An Angolan defense official accused the United States and South Africa of aiding Angola's right-wing rebels, jeopardizing the withdrawal of Cuban soldiers stationed in Angola, a report said Saturday

The official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, in a report monitored in Mexico City, said Cuba called back 1,753 soldiers in May, raising the total of returned soldiers to 34,801 of the 50,000 originally dispatched to aid the leftist government of Angola.

Cuba suspended withdrawal of its soldiers in February, citing repeated rebel attacks on Cuban forces.

Angolan Defense Vice Minister Antonio Dos Santos Franca said Friday in Havana the United States and South Africa are continuing to aid and support Angolan rebels, known as UNITA, breaking international agreements.

Dos Santos arrived in Havana Friday to attend Monday's eighth meeting of the joint commission on southwest Africa, formed in 1989 under the auspices of the United Nations and made up of representatives from Angola, Cuba and South Africa.

Prensa Latina quoted Dos Santos as saying, ''Washington has publicly stated it continues to aid UNITA and uses Zaire as a bridge to deliver the help.''

''Pretoria (the South African government) is doing the same thing, taking advantage of the lack of control prevailing on African borders,'' he said.

Dos Santos, also chief of staff of the armed forces, leads the Angolan delegation to the commission meeting, which is to be held Monday and Tuesday in Havana.

The commission monitors agreements signed in 1988 regarding independence for Namibia, which shares borders with both Angola and South Africa. It also monitors the withdrawal of Cuban forces.

The last meeting was held March 5-6 in Angola because of concern over two UNITA attacks on Cuban forces that left 10 soldiers dead.

''As a consequence of these attacks, the governments of Cuba and Angola decided Jan. 25 to paralyze the retreat of Cuban troops from this African country,'' Prensa Latina reported.

The commission is scheduled Monday to discuss developments in the internal Angolan conflict and to offer full membership in the group to the new state of Namibia.

Prensa Latina said international observers from the United States and the Soviet Union are expected to attend the meeting and will be arriving in Havana over the weekend.

TOKYO (JUNE 3) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Saturday he would sign a peace agreement with the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government during a meeting in Tokyo this week, but a statement from the Khmer Rouge indicated there would be difficulties in carrying it out.

''The Cambodian National Resistance and myself accept to sign the afore-cited peace accord, and the after signing, to implement it faithfully,'' Sihanouk said in a statement after arriving in Tokyo for two days of peace talks hosted by Japan.

Sihanouk plans to meet Monday and Tuesday with Vietnamese-installed Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen as representatives of the three Cambodian rebel factions discuss an end to hostilities.

In Bangkok, Thailand, Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan said Saturday all four Cambodian factions should sign the proposed cease-fire in Tokyo instead of just the two top leaders as previously arranged.

But his statement backed away from previous understandings and indicated there would be difficulties in the signings and in implementing the cease-fire.

Khieu Samphan, in the statement delivered to United Press International, said his group would attend the Tokyo talks ''with the most sincere good will.''

He said all four Cambodian parties should sign the document despite an earlier arrangement that the only signers would be Sihanouk, the leader of the three-party resistance coalition, and Hun Sen.

''The signing of that document by the four Cambodian parties will be a great success for the Tokyo meeting for it will constitute an important step towards a comprehensive political solution,'' Khieu Samphan said.

Sihanouk said the cease-fire could end up being little more than a piece of paper if the Khmer Rouge refuse to honor it and without an effective means to monitor it.

He said that Vietnamese troops, who are reportedly still in Cambodia despite Hanoi's official troop withdrawal last September, will remain the most serious stumbling block for the end of the 11-year-old conflict.

He said that despite that he and Hun Sen would sign the accord during their Tokyo talks, apparently without the Khmer Rouge.

Hun Sen said before leaving Phnom Penh a cease-fire with opposition forces should begin without international supervision to create the mutual trust needed for a comprehensive settlement of the war.

''After more than seven months of testing our military strength following the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, all factions and countries involved have come to realize the need for creating an atmosphere of mutual trust in order to advance toward a comprehensive political solution, beginning with a cease-fire,'' Hun Sen said in an interview with the official news agency SPK.

Japan, at the urging of Thailand Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan, agreed to host the latest round of talks to end the war. The most recent negotiations were held in February in the Thai capital of Bangkok.

The two non-communist rebel factions are supported by the United States and other Western nations, but Sihanouk nevertheless supports the inclusion of the Khmer Rouge in the peace process.

The United States is withholding support for the Khmer Rouge because of its post-1975 genocide that left up to 1.5 million people dead.

Sihanouk has proposed an immediate cease-fire and a greater peacekeeping role by the United Nations in a Cambodian settlement.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Igor Rogachev, who arrived in Bangkok Saturday, said the Soviet Union has been trying to help progress toward a political settlement in Cambodia but would not ''pressure'' Hun Sen.

''I think there will be more than only a cease-fire in the document they sign,'' he said. ''We hope this meeting in Tokyo will bring a consensus agreement and we hope it will be a real cease-fire.''

Vietnam has said only advisers, technicians and intelligence officers remain in Cambodia, but U.S. officials and the Cambodian resistance charge there are 40,000 Vietnamese combat troops - many dressed in Cambodian army uniforms - still active in Cambodia.

The Hun Sen government retains control of nearly 90 percent of Cambodia despite the reported troop withdrawal and a major offensive by the rebels.

Gorbachev says the third and final full day of talks will focus on discussing the world's regional ''flashpoints'' but says he and Bush will chat casually in the hopes to- as he put it- ''understand each other better.''

Observers say that the summit accords, taken individually, are NO great triumphs. But collectively, the series of agreements reflect the political urgency of cementing a foundation for a post-Cold War era.

Democratic Representative Dante Fascell of Florida says those who think there will be an immediate improvement in trade between the two countries ''are slightly ahead of their time.''

A waiver that is required to put the trade accord into effect will NOT be sent to Congress until the Soviet Union passes a law allowing for the free emigration of its citizens.

The trade pact would help the Soviet Union receive the lowest available tariffs in the United States, if Congress grants ''most-favored-nation'' status. High tariffs have cooled U-S interest in Soviet manufacturing ventures in the past.

Trade experts say the agreement gives Gorbachev a valuable symbolic victory to take home. The analysts say U-S approval is crucial for the Soviet Union to shift to a market economy.

(JUNE 2) UPI - A bomb exploded today at an election rally in a tourist area of Prague, Czecoslovakia, injuring 15 to 20 people.

Witnesses and the Czechoslovak News Agency say the blast occurred in the afternoon in Old Town Square.

Elections for the Czech Parliament are scheduled for June 8th and 9th... and until now, security had NOT been a major issue in the campaign.

The Interior Ministry says the blast came from a pipe bomb placed in a backpack filled with pellet-sized lead fishing weights. The pack was strapped to a statue of Jan Hus... a famous 15th century Czech religious reformer.

The lead weights sprayed into the crowd like shrapnel.

11 of the injured were hospitalized. Witnesses said many of the injured appeared to be seriously bleeding.

No one claimed responsibility for the bombing.

A candlelight rally was scheduled for tonight in the square to commemorate the first anniversary of the killing of students in Tiananmen Square in Beijing.

Stage and screen star Rex Harrison died today of pancreatic cancer at his Manhattan apartment. He was 82.

Harrison kept constantly active in theater and was starring in the Broadway revival hit ''The Circle'' up until three weeks ago, when he dropped out for reported gall bladder problems.

He starred in a score of plays and films but was best known for his portrayal of Henry Higgins, the phonetics professor in ''My Fair Lady.''

The British-born actor once said he had serious doubts about adapting the George Bernard Shaw play ''Pygmalion'' as a musical. His doubts were matched by ''My Fair Lady'' creators Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Lowe, who did NOT think Harrison could pull off a musical role. They once jested that Harrison had a singing range of one and one-half notes.

The musical was a wild success, and Harrison said it took him years to escape from the character afterwards.

A memorial service will be held on June 18th at New York's Church of the Transfiguration. Harrison's funeral will be private.

Barry... who has been called the most powerful local politician in the history of the District of Columbia... faces charges of using cocaine throughout two of his three terms in office and lying about it to a federal grand jury.

And although Barry last week admitted to smoking crack cocaine on the night of his January 18th arrest, he says he does NOT expect to be convicted.

A published Washington report quotes the mayor as saying- ''I think the prosecutors know that, in this town, all it takes is one juror saying, 'I'm NOT going to convict Marion Barry. I don't care what you say.'''

Barry could face a maximum sentence of 26 years in prison and nearly two-Million dollars in fines if the case goes to trial and he is convicted of all counts.

The case is expected to command world-wide attention.

Some political leaders in drug-torn Colombia say they view it as a test of whether President Bush is serious about prosecuting drug users.

A Gallup poll says parenthood appears to be a universal American desire.

The poll published today found 90 percent of Americans older than 40 have children. Of the 10 percent who do NOT have children, most say they wish they did.

Among people under age 40 who participated in the survey, 58 percent have kids. Of those who don't, 84 percent said they would like to have them.

Only four percent of those polled don't have any children and don't want any.

And only seven percent of parents say they wish they had NOT had children.

Yet people have a hard time explaining why they want children.

The most common reasons cited were: the love and affection of children, the pleasure of watching them grow, and the joy and fun they bring.

The poll also found that 80 percent of Americans think parents today are NOT strict enough. Only two percent say parents are too strict.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 3) UPI - A luxury liner that caught fire twice and ran aground once in a week received conditional clearance Saturday to return to sea even though an arsonist might be lurking on board, the Coast Guard said.

Authorities said they suspect a crewmember aboard the hard-luck cruise ship may have set the second fire, which broke out Friday - five days after an apparently accidental blaze caused the ship to run aground in Delaware Bay.

''It's unnerving,'' Lt. Pete Hoffman said. ''We're concerned about the firebug and we want him to be found and removed. But the bottom line is, when we're satisfied the ship is safe to sail, we'll let it sail.''

Petty Officer Gary Rives said an inspection Saturday afternoon turned up several ''minor'' violations such as faulty hatches and fire doors. Rives said authorities will again inspect the ship Sunday morning, checking to see that the problems have been corrected and deciding whether to allow the Regent Star to depart on a scheduled five-day cruise to Canada.

Investigators said the fire in a lower-deck storeroom about 4:30 a.m. Friday was deliberately set while the 24,000-ton Regent Star was docked at Penn's Landing. No one was injured, but the fire forced the cancellation of a weekend cruise.

The arson is being investigated by Philadelphia police and the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, but no suspects were in custody.

An apparently unrelated fire as the ship was steaming toward Philadelphia five days earlier knocked out the ship's power and forced it to run aground in the Delaware Bay off Fortescue, N.J. The ship was refloated Tuesday after nearly 900 passengers were evacuated. Officials said they do not think the fire was set deliberately.

The Coast Guard conducted safety inspections and a fire drill aboard the liner Saturday to make sure the crew of nearly 500 is prepared to handle another emergency.

''They looked good,'' Rives said. ''But then they've had some practice in the last few days.''

Since crew members were the only authorized personnel on board when Friday's fire broke out, Hoffman said, it seems likely one or more of them is responsible for the fire. About 250 crew members were on board at the time of the fire.

Hoffman said the Coast Guard is doing ''everything we can to make sure the ship stays on schedule.'' He said the Regent Star could be cleared to sail on a five-day cruise to Canada Sunday afternoon.

The final decision on that voyage is up to Larry Murdoch, the Coast Guard's captain of the Philadelphia port.

Hoffman said if the 642-foot vessel is cleared to sail, it is unlikely the firebug would strike again when the ship leaves port.

''It's a tough situation, but when you're out at sea there's one big difference,'' he said. ''The guy who sets the fire has just as far to run as everybody else. And I don't think he's stupid.''

(JUNE 2) UPI - Arms control analysts say the United States and Soviet Union have a ways to go before they can make their nuclear arms agreement a reality. MOSCOW (JUNE 3) UPI - The foreign ministers and chiefs of staff from the Warsaw Pact countries wrapped up two days of discussions Saturday on future security arrangements for Eastern Europe, the official Tass news agency said.

The meeting took place amid U.S. charges that the Soviet Union has been stalling on talks in Vienna to cut conventional forces in Europe because of its opposition to the prospect of a unified Germany belonging to NATO.

''Chiefs of general staff from Warsaw Treaty member states and their foreign members met in Moscow on Friday and Saturday to discuss the Vienna talks on conventional arms and confidence-building measures and security in Europe,'' Tass said.

''They said their countries want a successful conclusion of the Vienna talks in 1990.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - A Cuban gunboat commandeered an $8 million Japanese-owned yacht Saturday, firing cannon shots over the vessel's bow in international waters and ordering it into a Cuban harbor, the boat's captain said.

The 145-foot luxury yacht ''Belesbat Queen,'' owned by Island Future Corp. of Kobe, Japan, and registered in Britain, was 14 miles north of Cuba when the Cuban ship approached and fired three shots, said the yacht's captain, Ian McCombe.

''They told us to stop. We did stop. Then they fired anyway,'' McCombe said from aboard the ship in a telephone interview with United Press International. The yacht was a half-mile from the Cuban coast after following the gunboat for five hours. He said several of the Cubans had fired automatic weapons into the air, apparently to scare his crew.

''I just hope they don't get careless about where they're firing those guns,'' he said.

Along with McCombe, an Australian, the yacht's international crew included four Americans, three West Germans, two Britons and a Japanese. One crewman was identified as Guthrie Butler of Las Vegas, Nev.

The Cubans made no attempt to board the elegant yacht when they fired the shots at about 3 p.m. and made no direct communication beyond waving and shouting in Spanish that it should follow, McCombe said.

He said Cuban traffic control authorities had contacted the ship on Friday and ''wished us a good voyage.'' Several commercial ships were traveling freely in the same area known as the Bahama shipping lane.

''Then these guys come up on us and start going nuts. They're yelling and waving at us, and shooting cannon fire, but wouldn't tell us why,'' McCombe said.

A British Embassy official, Andrew Henderson, said his government was aware of the situation. McCombe said he was instructed by the embassy to follow the Cubans and ''do whatever we're told.''

The captain said said the yacht was supposed to travel to Japan from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after several months of refitting.

The corporate yacht, elegantly decorated and equipped with a satellite navigation and communication system, was registered to Dragon Tree Ltd., a subsidiary of Island Future Corp., in the English Channel island of Guernsey.

McCombe said Island Future is a large diversified corporation whose interests include steel, real estate and international resort areas.

(JUNE 2) UPI - From a patio at Camp David, Maryland, today, Presidents Bush and Gorbachev compared views on world trouble spots. U-S officials are applauding none other than Gorbachev for getting the U-S-Soviet trade agreement signed. The treaty framework signed yesterday aims at resolving these differences by the end of the year.

Up to 20 injured in pipe bombing in Czechoslovakia...

And a rare show of Sandinista support for Nicaraguan President Chamorro...

These stories... and a wrap-up of today's bad weather... next, from the wires of United Press International:

With the hard bargaining out of the way, the White House says President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev today settled down for a more relaxed exchange of views.

The two leaders moved their superpower summit to the wooded presidential retreat in Camp David, Maryland. They spent time riding in a golf cart and pitching horseshoes, and talking on the patio of Aspen Lodge.

But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the two dropped any more discussion of the two bones of contention- German reunification and Lithuania's declaration of independence.

Instead, Bush and Gorbachev traded views on Afghanistan, Cuba, Central America, Southwest Asia and the Middle East.

Tomorrow, the two will conclude their summit with a news conference, before Gorbachev flies to Minneapolis and San Francisco.

Fitzwater says neither side anticipates reaching any other agreements. But he said both presidents ''are quite pleased with the progress of the summit.''

The two leaders initialed agreements yesterday aimed at cuts in chemical weapons and nuclear arms, as well as improving trade.

Bush did NOT achieve his stated goal of convincing Gorbachev of the wisdom of a unified Germany in NATO. Fitzwater says Bush emphasized the feelings of the United States on the Lithuania situation, to little, if any, outward effect.

Officials say the bomb was placed in a backpack filled with lead fishing weights and strapped to a statue in the public square. The force of the powerful blast sprayed the crowd with shrapnel.

One investigator says the bomb was probably detonated by remote control.

Elections for the Czechoslovak Parliament... the country's first free elections in 44 years... are scheduled for next week.

NEW YORK, NY (JUNE 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Ziff Communications Sunday announced that it had recently purchased three database companies to augment the continued expansion of the company's Computer Intelligence Company.

The acquisitions include Focus Research, a provider of computer site data, purchased from Dun & Bradstreet and located in Farmington, Conn., Atoll, a Paris, France-based provider of European computer site data; and Storeboard, located in Dallas, Texas, which tracks PC retail distribution.

Computer Intelligence (CI) is located in La Jolla, Calif., and is the prime source of market information about end-user sotes and resellers in the computer industry.

Kenneth H. Koppel, president of Ziff Communications, stated, ''When CI joined us in June of 1980, it was a company of approximately 13 employees. It has now grown to over 400 employees. Until these new acquisitions, all of CI's growth had been internally generated.''

According to Hugh Tietjen, president of CI, ''The purpose of acquiring Atoll was to develop in Europe the same informational authority we possess in North America. Since we acquired Atoll, it has been expanded to having research groups, who conduct interviews in French, Italian, German, Spanish, and English. We now have a European database of over 35,000 end-user sites in 11 European countries.''

Tietjen added, ''Storeboard helps us fill a gap in our understanding of PC distribution channels. It maintains a directory of computer specialty stores and tracks sales of PCs and other related products through this channel. Focus Research also fills out a niche for CI.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Coastal Associates Publishing, a two-year-old partnership between Ziff-Davis Publishing Co. and Patch Communications, Sunday announced the launch of PC Sources.

The new magazine is aimed at an emerging audience in the mail order market for microcomputer products. Based in New York, PC Sources will be published monthly beginning in October, with an initial circulation of 100,000.

The company also announced that Jeff Ballowe has been named publisher of PC Sources and that Peter McKie will be the magazine's founding editor. Ballowe is the former associate publisher of sales and marketing for Computer Shopper. Peter McKie is the former executive editor of Personal Computing.

In announcing the launch, William B. Ziff Jr., chairman of Ziff Communications and president of Ziff-Davis Publishing Co., said, ''PC Sources will meet a very specific need in the computer marketplace -- the need for a medium where often inexperienced direct buyers can make contact with direct sellers in a unique editorial forum.''

PC Sources is designed to gather experienced PC users recently drawn to the direct channel with an editorial package focused on helping them gain all the advantages of speed, service, and value offered.

Ziff added, ''Computer Shopper's tremendous increase in circulation and linage has made it the bible of the direct channel; but we feel that its surge upwards has created a place for the right kind of lower-cost publication. That publication is PC Sources.''

CHICAGO (JUNE 3) BUSINESS WIRE - MGM/UA Home Video and Downey Fabric Softner, a division of Procter & Gamble, in association with Goldcrest Films, have announced a sponsorship agreement for the home video release of Don Bluth's animated film ''All Dogs Go to Heaven.''

At a joint media conference Sunday, Bud O'Shea, president and chief operating officer of MGM/UA Home Video, and Marty Thompson, group sales manager for Downy Fabric Softner, unveiled the details of an agreement similar to last year's highly successful ''Wizard of Oz'' promotion.

MGM/UA Home Video, in conjunction with Procter & Gamble, has created a $21 million multimedia marketing campaign. This is approximately 2-1/2 times the $8.5 million spent on the marketing of the 50th anniversary of ''The Wizard of Oz.'' To support the release, as they did with ''Oz,'' Procter & Gamble will offer a $5 rebate that will effectively reduce the suggested retail price from $24.98 to $19.98.

Valued at over $13 million, the television portion of this campaign will run on broadcast and cable from street date, Aug. 29, through Christmas, with particularly heavy exposure during the holiday season. The television campaign will consist of two separate, but collaborative spots, with the latter emphasizing the gift-giving aspects of ''All Dogs Go to Heaven.''

Complementing the television blitz, a national radio promotion will start at street date and run for two weeks in 15 major markets. As an added incentive the promotion will also feature two grand-prize vacation packages to the Heavenly Valley Ski Resort in South Lake Tahoe, Nev.

A nationwide print campaign is also planned with ads running in Family Circle, US, McCalls, TV Guide and People magazine, among others.

For this event MGM/UA Home Video has created an exciting new product display as part of its point-of-purchase program. Created specifically in response to retailers suggestions, the new product display is unique in that it can be used in a variety of different configurations: either as one 48-pack floor merchandiser, or as one 24-pack floor merchandiser and one 24-pack counter unit, or as two 24-pack counter units.

MGM/UA Home Video is one of the largest videocassette distributors in the world. In addition to the new MGM/UA releases and new films licensed from other producers, the company controls worldwide home video distribution rights to the Turner/MGM Library of 2,950 titles and domestic home video rights to titles in the United Artists Library of more than 950 motion pictures.

BAGHDAD (JUNE 3) - Iraq paid Sunday 25 million dollars to aid the Palestinian Intifada or uprising in the Israeli-occupied teritories, the Gulf News Agency reported.

The Palestine Liberation Organisation (Plo) representative in Baghdad, Azzam al-Ahmed, who also serves as ambassador of the self-proclaimed Palestinian state, told the agency he received the Iraqi payment in accordance with the resolutions of an Arab summit conference in Baghdad which ended on Thursday.

Iraq has also doubled the tranmission period of the ''Voice of Palestine'' radio station from Baghdad to reach six hours a day, the agency said.

The extraordinary summit, which had been called for by the Plo to discuss the influx of Soviet jews into Israel, also adopted a resolution to extend similar aid, mainly from the oil-rich countries, to Jordan.

Amman said on Friday it had received notification from Baghdad that Iraq will pay 50 million dollars to Jordan to help its economic difficulties.

In all Amman will receive 700 million dollars before the end of this year, 500 million of which will be paid by Saudi Arabia, the London-based daily Al-Hayat reported Sunday.

Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates have pledged to pay a total of 75 million dollars to Amman in 1990, the paper said.

HONG KONG (JUNE 3) - Some 250,000 Hong Kong people marched here Sunday shouting anti-Beijing slogans on the first anniversary of the military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in the Chinese capital, organizers said.

The parade, applauded by crowds en route, was the biggest protest here since the Beijing massacre on the night of June 3-4 last year.

"The Hong Kong people's heart is not yet dead," said a leader of the massive turnout, which organisers placed at 250,000.

Dressed mostly in black or white, the traditional Western and Chinese colours of mourning, the marchers swarmed 20-abreast with black-and-white banners through the heart of Hong Kong island from the Central business district to the offices of New China News Agency (NCNA), China's de facto consulate here.

A police official at the halfway point estimated that at least 100,000 marchers had passed by.

"Down with Deng, Li and Yang," the crowd chanted, referring to top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, Premier Li Peng and President Yang Shangkun.

As marchers gathered and then dispersed in front of the NCNA building, more demonstrators arrived in a steady stream, undeterred by threatening skies.

About 100 college students and members of the April 5 Action Group, a militant political organization, began an overnight sit-in in front of NCNA.

The procession started at downtown Chater Garden, towered over by skyscrapers of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank and the Bank of China, the British and Chinese business symbols in this British colony, due to revert to Beijing's rule in 1997.

It took more than two hours for marchers at the front to cover the estimated 2.5 kilometres (four miles) to NCNA, focal point for anti-Beijing protests.

Officials of the Hong Kong Alliance in Support of the Democratic Movement in China, the event's organiser, led the march with a black banner bearing a giant Chinese character: "Mourning."

MAPUTO (JUNE 3) - Two officials of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) who disappeared in the central province of Zambezia, are presumed to have been abducted by RENAMO rebels, radio Mozambique said Sunday.

The radio report named the two as Traerre Tribolet, the head of the ICRC's operations in the province, and Brigite Carmen, an ICRC administrator.

According to the radio report, the two disappeared Friday, while returning to Mocuba, the second largest town in the province, from the famine-stricked district of ile.

They had been in a convoy of eight vehicles that had delivered foodstuffs and clothing to the locality of Nantevo, recently freed from RENAMO control by the Mozambican army.

The burnt-out shell of the vehicle used by Mr. Tribolet and Ms. Carmen was found on the Ile-Mocuba road, but with no sign of the two Red Cross officials.

The rebels had attacked the vehicle despite the red crosses that it prominently displayed, the radio report said.

The convoy was not accompanied by a military escort, in defiance of orders from the provincial authorities.

The road is known to be dangerous, and a provincial government spokesman quoted by the radio said that convoys were not authorised to travel in this part of the province without military protection.

The ICRC office in Maputo is keeping tight-lipped about the affair, and even refused to give the names of the two kidnapped officials, though these had already been broadcast over the radio.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 3) - Doctors here Sunday discharged Nelson Mandela, vice-president of the African National Congress, from the private clinic where he underwent an operation for a cyst on his bladder a week ago.

"I feel well", a smiling and relaxed-looking Mr. Mandela told journalists as he left surrounded by friends and relatives.

Dr. Louis Gecelter, his surgeon, told journalists that physically "Mr. Mandela is a man of about 50", adding, "Mentally, he is first-class, too."

The ANC figure, who is to start a six-week tour overseas Monday, would receive follow-up checks on return, Dr. Gecelter said, adding "So long as he follows the doctors' orders, everything will be well."

Mr. Mandela is to start his trip in neighbouring Botswana and visit 13 countries, including the United States, Canada, West Germany, France and Britain.

LONDON (JUNE 3) - British Sports Minister Colin Moynihan may get the drinks ban he wants for England's three World Cup matches in Sardinia.

Moynihan has tried to get drink sales banned in centre of Cagliari on the days of England's matches against Ireland, the Netherlands and Egypt.

The Minister said Sunday that "great progress" was made this week and the Italian Government had issued an edict to all prefects, strongly advising them to introduce such bans.

Moynihan announced that special football charter flights for the tournament, which begins on June 8, would be "dry".

He also said that on flights carrying a mixture of holidaymakers and fans the availability of alcohol would be limited.

Moynihan pushed the link between alcohol and hooliganism ceaselessly during his round of security talks in Rome and Sardinia last month.

However, he came away with no positive results and failed to win any promises from the prefect of Cagliari, whose decision it is.

Asked today whether an alcohol ban was now likely, Mr Moynihan said: "Obviously I am not responsible for the prefects' decisions.

"But what's clear to me is that the edict is a very tough one and I foresee there will be alcohol bans in sensitive areas where fans will meet before and after the games.

The Minister said he was concerned about "the possibility of serious incidents of hooliganism".

Asked about whether the England team should be withdrawn from the World Cup if major incidents occur, he said that would be decided by Fifa, world football's governing body.

KARACHI (JUNE 3) - A Pakistan army officer and two soldiers were killed during an operation against bandits in southern Sindh province early Sunday, an official said here.

They were among nine people reported killed during the day.

Nabi Baksh Khoso, the Sindh information secretary, said at a news briefing here that a captain and two soldiers were killed during the clash near Dadu, more than 300 kilometers (180 miles) north of here.

Two bandits were also shot dead, he said.

It was the first incident reported since the army launched an operation against terrorists and bandits after two weeks of violence in Sindh that has claimed more than 300 lives since May 14.

On Sunday, unidentified gunmen killed four people in four different towns in interior Sindh, Mr. Khoso said.

He said 119 people were killed in separate incidents in Sindh from May 27 to June 1.

Meanwhile, 40 people wanted in different cases were arrested during the past 24 hours in Karachi, he said.

On Saturday, 10 people including two journalists and a teacher were killed in different incidents of violence in Sindh, police said.

In another development, an official said in a statement issued at Lahore that more than 10,000 people from Sindh have crossed over to adjacent districts of Rahimyar Khan and Rajanpur in the opposition-led Punjab province.

Punjab's Chief Minister Nawaz Sharif met officials of the Rahimyar Khan district who conveyed to him "harrowing details of inhuman treatment" meted out to these families, it said.

He ordered immediate relief measures to provide food and shelter, and temporary centres were being established in both districts, the statement said.

The administration of Rahimyar Khan also was said to have rounded up five gangs of robberers who had entered Punjab from Sindh.

Checkposts had been set up in areas bordering Sindh to closely monitor the movement between the provinces of potential saboteurs and terrorists, it said.

LONDON (JUNE 3) - Some 2,000 people demonstrated here Sunday in support of freedom in China on the anniversary of the crushing of the pro-democracy movement in Beijing a year ago.

They were led by student Li Lu who escaped the army massacre in Tiananmen Square. "I am confident democracy will rise again, and this time the people will win," he said.

The demonstrators marched to the Chinese embassy, which was cordoned off by about 100 policemen, and there Li Lu placed in the letter box a petition calling for the release of all political prisoners.

The number of political prisoners in China is estimated by Amnesty International to be 700 at least.

Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labour Party, sent a message of support to the demonstrators in which he said: "The demand for peaceful democratic change has gained strength and won success in eastern Europe and in many other parts of the world.

"It is a process that has been irresistible and must be made universal. It must include China".

BEIJING (JUNE 4) - A demonstration by several hundred students at Beijing University ended peacefully three hours after it began, with students returning to their dormitories as police surrounded and sealed off the campus, witnesses said.

Before breaking up the demonstration, on the first anniversary of the crushing of a student-led pro-democracy movement last year, the students organized a sit-in near open-air bulletin boards which, last year, were covered with large character posters demanding greater democracy.

The students sang the Internationale as they returned indoors at around 2:00 a.m. (1700 GMT Sunday), the witnesses said.

Throughout the demonstration, students abstained from chanting any slogans, simply singing the Internationale and breaking thousands of small bottles.

The bottle-breaking -- an echo of the 50 days of democracy protests in central Beijing's Tiananmen square last year -- were a symbolic affront to senior leader Deng Xiapoing, whose given name is a homonym for "little bottle."

Large numbers of police armed with AK-47 assault rifles continued to patrol the area around the campus in the capital's northern suburbs early Monday, forcing back the many foreign reporters who arrived on the scene.

Throughout the night, with countless roadblocks thrown up around the city center, Beijing looked like a city under siege as all vehicles -- bicycles as well as automobiles -- were stopped and their drivers searched by police.

There were no reports of any disturbances on Beijing's other campuses.

SAN FRANCISCO, CA (JUNE 3) - South Korean President Roh Tae-Woo arrived here Sunday for unprecedented talks with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on normalizing diplomatic relations and expanding trade.

Mr. Roh was welcomed at the airport by a crowd of several hundred people including San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos and former secretary of state George Shultz. City officials declared Sunday "Roh Tae-Woo Day."

Before leaving Seoul, Mr. Roh said he planned to press Mr. Gorbachev on the "need for normalization" of relations between South Korea and the Soviet Union, one of the main backers of communist North Korea.

Mr. Roh is scheduled to meet Mr. Gorbachev in San Francisco Monday afternoon and will then go on to Washington for talks Wednesday with U.S. President George Bush.

"It is of great significance that I am going to discuss the Korean question in turn with the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union at the center of the stage where the drama of remolding the world order is being played," he said in a departure statement at Seoul's airport.

Mr. Roh said he would exchange views with Mr. Gorbachev on "how to spread the waves of openness and cooperation sweeping the world to Northeast Asia, especially to the Korean Peninsula."

He said that in that connection he would "discuss in depth how to pave the way for the peace and unification of the Korean Peninsula."

South Korean press reports quoted a senior official as saying that Mr. Roh would ask Mr. Gorbachev to help arrange a summit meeting with North Korean President Kim Il-Sung. The South Korean leader is also expected to invite Mr. Gorbachev to visit Seoul later this year.

KATHMANDU (JUNE 3) - A group of 136 dissidents from the Nepali Congress has rejoined the parent body at the call of the organization's leaders, party sources said here Sunday.

The former Nepali Congress members had left the party to join the Panchayat government, which banned political parties for 30 years until it was abolished in April by King Birendra.

A special welcoming event was held at the residence of Ganesh Man Singh, the Nepali Congress' senior leader. Party General Secretary G.P. Koirala was also present.

The Nepali Congress is the major party in Nepal's ruling coalition government.

The dissident group included four members of the recently dissolved National Panchayat (parliament), among them former minister for education and culture Parshu Narayan Chaudhary, and Dr. S.B. Shrestha, former mayor of the dissolved town Panchayat of Banepa district, 25 kilometers (15 miles) east of Kathmandu.

Welcoming the group, Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai said he appreciated the role played by rank-and-file activists and leaders of the Nepali Congress in 1950 and 1951 toward the establishment of democracy in Nepal.

Mr. Chaudhary, speaking for the group, said "our joining of the Nepali Congress parent body would definitely help to fight against the reactionary elements and sycophants of the now-dissolved Panchayat system."

Analysts here said that by rejoining the party, the dissident group -- headed by Mr. Chaudhary, who served the Panchayat government several times in the past decade -- would help the Nepali Congress in the planned general election in the far southwestern region 390 kms (243 miles) from the capital.

In May, a group of 34 former Nepali Congress activists who had joined a group headed by the the late General Subarna Shumshere Rana also rejoined the parent organization.

BONN (JUNE 3) - The superpower summit in Washington has made "significant progress" toward an agreement on the future military status of a united Germany, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Sunday.

An official statement issued here said Mr. Kohl welcomed the recognition by the United States and the Soviet Union that Germans were free to choose their military alliance in accordance with resolutions adopted by the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) and the U.N. Charter.

After the Washington summit, there is "genuine hope" that internal and external aspects of German unification can be resolved simultaneously, the chancellor added.

German unity is subject to debate in the so-called two-plus-four negotiations grouping the two Germanies and the former World War II allies who defeated Nazi Germany -- the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France -- that started earlier this year.

The four World War II victors agreed in February that East and West Germany would negotiate internal aspects of their unification, but that the former allies are to have a say in fixing borders and the future political and military status of a united Germany.

Progress was made at the arms control level, and on East-West cooperation,

Mr. Kohl said, adding that "the key to a settlement of a united Germany's military status lay in talks" on conventional disarmament being held in Vienna.

Mr. Kohl said an agreement by Presidents George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev to meet annually gave "new stability and a new perspective to East-West relations".

The U.S.-Soviet summit will have a "favourable impact" on European and German unity, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said in a television interview.

LIMA (JUNE 3) EFE - The Peruvian Army is to put most of the central department of Junin, the recent center of Maoist "Shining Path" rebel attacks, under a two-day night curfew.

Military officials said Saturday that the curfew will go into effect from 9 p.m. until 5 a.m. Monday and Tuesday in five of the department's seven provinces, excluding the jungle provinces of Chanchamayo and Satipo.

Authorities fear that Shining Path will step up attacks in Junin, already declared in a state of emergency, as the June 10 presidential elections near.

On Thursday, the rebel group set off a series of bombs in the departmental capital of Huancayo, 415 km southwest of Lima, destroying electrical transmission towers and leaving the town in darkness.

The blackout effected the Mantaro River valley, home of Peru's largest hydro-electric plant, which produces 80 per cent of the country's energy.

Rebels also threw bombs at a bank, a government office and the home of a deputy from presidential candidate Mario Vargas Llosa's FREDEMO coalition.

Interior Minister Agustin Mantilla said Friday that in the southeastern department of Ayachucho hundreds of Shining Path rebels, who began their armed uprising 10 years ago, are handing over their arms.

Mantilla promised that the rebels would receive +full guarantees to reincorporate in society+.

He said that a "significant and important group" had already turned over their arms, and that the number was increasing daily.

"I think we are witnesses to the beginning of the end of the war against Shining Path," Mantilla said.

Some 20,000 people have died in political violence since Shining Path took up arms in 1980.

LIMA, Peru (JUNE 3) UPI - A moderate earthquake rocked an Amazonian region in northwestern Peru Saturday that was hit four days before by a stronger temblor that left 56 people dead, Peru's Geophysical Institute said.

The quake recorded at 8:55 p.m. measured 4.9 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was located 10 miles north of Rioja, about 350 miles north of Lima, an institute official said.

An extensive region spanning from the provinces of San Martin and Amazonas to the coastal zone south of Ecuador felt Saturday's temblor, but it was not known if there were any injuries or damage.

The town was badly hit by Tuesday's 5.8 magnitude earthquake whose epicenter was located about 100 miles to the north. Authorities said 56 people were killed in the earlier quake.

An earthquake of 4.0 on the Richter scale can cause moderate damage while a 5.0 magnitude quake can cause considerable damage.

CARSON CITY, NV (JUNE 3) UPI - The Supreme Court early Sunday voted to lift a stay of execution for killer Thomas ''Scrappydoo'' Baal, who said he wants to die by lethal injection, officials said.

Sandra Cherub, a spokeswoman for the Nevada attorney general's office, said the nation's high court voted 5-4 to overturn a stay issued by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

Cherub said Baal was scheduled to be executed at 7 a.m. Sunday.

After the appeals court's decision to extend the stay, the Nevada attorney general's office appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Baal filed an affidavit with the Nevada attorney general's appeal saying, ''I believe in the death penalty and I want the penalty to be imposed against me immediately. I want to face up to my crime and pay the consequences for it.'' He said he was mentally and emotionally competent and understood the consequences of his request.

The circuit court had granted a temporary stay of execution late Thursday, blocking an execution originally scheduled for early Friday and saying it needed time to study the case. The appeals court continued the stay Saturday morning on a 2-1 vote.

In a hearing Thursday, Baal, 26, who pleaded guilty to killing a Las Vegas shuttle bus driver in 1988, repeatedly told U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben he wanted no more appeals.

''I just want to get the execution over with,'' he said. The condemned man also asked the judge, as a last request, to ''bring me a hooker.''

But his parents, Edwin and Doris Baal of Mesa, Colo., contend their son is not mentally competent to waive his rights to an appeal in federal court.

They asked the appeals court to order an evidentiary hearing in U.S. District Court in Reno to determine if their son knows what he is doing in giving up his appeals.

The two-judge appeals court majority said Saturday that Baal's parents had presented a record ''replete with undisputed evidence of substantial mental impairment, including diagnoses of depression, organic brain damage and several suicide attempts, and Thomas Baal has changed his mind about pursuing his appeal on several occasions.''

Judge Alex Kozinski, who dissented, said Baal has been found competent by several psychiatrists in the past two years.

''The people of Nevada want their punishment exacted. Baal has accepted their verdict. Why do we stand in the way?'' he asked.

Baal would be the fifth man in Nevada to die since the 1976 reinstatement of the state's death penalty.

Baal was convicted in the Feb. 26, 1988, slaying of Frances Maves in Las Vegas. Baal allegedly approached the shuttle bus driver and asked her for help. She gave him $20, but he allegedly pulled a knife and pushed her into her car.

She tried to reason with him, prosecutors said, and then attempted to grab the knife. Baal, who maintains he was on a drug spree at the time, allegedly told her she should not have done and and then said, ''I now sentence you to death.''

Maves was stabbed eight times and her car and purse with $120 was stolen. Baal was later arrested in Reno.

Baal's parents said their son had many emotional problems while growing up and they spent $100,000 for psychiatric care until they ran out of money. They said they could not find any government agency to help and Baal checked out of a mental hospital and left.

Three psychiatrists in 1988 found Baal competent before he pleaded guilty to murder. Last week, prison psychiatrist Charles Van Valkenburg testified he believed Baal was competent to make a decision to forego further appeals.

ST. REGIS INDIAN RESERVATION (JUNE 3) UPI - A virtual unknown Saturday ousted the only remaining anti-gambling chief on the New York Tribal Council to present a unified front for casinos on the strife-torn Mohawk reservation.

Pro-gambling political newcomer Norman Tarbell defeated Head Chief Harold Tarbell by 99 votes to win a seat on the New York Tribal Council, where all three chiefs are now advocates of gambling.

The exact vote tally was not available, but several Mohawks confirmed that the margin of victory was 99 votes.

The strong emotions attached to both sides of the gambling issue, made this the first race in the territory where candidates declined to do house-to-house campaigning for fear of their safety.

The gambling issue had resulted in nightly arsons, beatings and gunfire that resulted in the killing of two Mohawks May 1 and the descent of law enforcement officers from both New York and Canada to create a semblance of peace.

Norman Tarbell, 49, had been nominated by a caucus of casino owners and their supporters at the Mohawk Bingo Palace in Hogansburg. He later refused to engage in debate with his opponent, an articulate spokesman for traditional values.

Norman Tarbell, who some accused of having been chosen for possessing a name strikingly similar to the former chief's, is a former ironworker and foreman at the nearby ALCOA plant.

His campaign aide, Pat Thomas, described him as an affable man ''who is well-liked in the community'' but conceded he has had ''limited political experience.''

Speaking after his winning, Tarbell said he hopes to see gaming ventures benefit the reservation by improving the guality of life.

''I think we can get our water system all the way through our whole reservation,'' Tarbell said. ''Maybe some day, hopefully not too long, we can take care of sewage also.''

Speaking about gambling becoming a part of life for the Indians, he said, ''We got no choice on that. The state is going to set this up. ... You gotta go by them.''

The election amounted to a referendum on the future of gambling at the reservation with the winner determining whether or not the three chiefs would present a united front in favor of casinos in on-going negotiations with Dr. Henrik Dullea, a top aide to Gov. Mario Cuomo.

The private negotiations between the state and the divided tribal council have so far resulted in a stalemate.

Cuomo has steadfastly refused to negotiate the issue with the reservation's two other tribal governments - the 12 elected chiefs on the Canadian side of the reservation and the nine traditional non-elected chiefs.

Both those governments are unanimously opposed to casinos, arguing they disrupt the tribal way of life and go against the Great Law of the Iroquois Nation.

The supporters of gambling believe it is an answer to the reservation's endemic poverty, responsible for putting upwards of 90 percent of the population on some form of public assistance.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Tornadoes roared across the Midwest Saturday evening, killing seven people in Indiana and one in Illinois and injuring hundreds of others in restaurants, nursing homes and trailer parks in the twisters' paths, authorities said.

Homes were sucked off their foundations, tractor-trailers were blown from highways and countless utility poles were toppled, cutting off electrical service to thousands of homes, authorities in Indiana and Illinois said.

Four tracks of tornadoes moved through Indiana starting around dinner time sparing only the northwest section. About 12 to 15 separate twisters were reported, touching down at least 50 times, said Jerome Hauer, director of the State Emergency Management Agency.

Gov. Evan Bayh declared a state of emergency Saturday night, mobilizing the National Guard and sending it to the hard-hit southern Indiana cities of Bedford and Petersburg.

Hauer described the damage as the worst since April 3, 1974, when a series of tornadoes left 48 dead and $150 million in damages.

Three deaths were reported in Bedford, which was hit by at least three tornadoes. A restaurant in the town's southern section collapsed, injuring at least 27 people, Hauer said.

Another three deaths were reported in Petersburg, where a nursing home had to be evacuated after it sustained extensive damage. Hauer said numerous deaths likely occurred at the nursing home. Also, many downtown businesses were leveled, and roads to the city were cut off by debris.

Damage also was extensive along the Hendricks-Putnam county line in central Indiana. One person was killed and 10 injured when a tornado wiped out a mobile home and two houses near Roachdale.

In western Hendricks County, three people were injured when a house was sucked off its foundation, police said. The injuries occurred even though all seven family members retreated to the basement when the tornado struck.

Much of southern Indiana and parts of central and northeast Indiana were without power Saturday night, and SEMA was formulating an evacuation plan Saturday night to move patients from crowded southern Indiana emergency rooms to hospitals farther north.

At least four major electrical transformers were toppled in southern Indiana, said Dave Nugent, a dispatcher for the Indiana State Police post in Jasper. Other areas reported downed power lines that covered roads.

Heavy thunderstorms triggered tornadoes, high winds and hail in a half-dozen counties in the southeastern quarter of Illinois Saturday.

State officials compiling data on the storms counted at least 54 houses and mobile homes destroyed, another 106 damaged.

A tornado touched down in Findlay, Ill., around 4:30 p.m., causing extensive damage and leaving parts of the town of 800 without power, said a volunteer firefighter, Marsha Allen.

''We have 11 homes destroyed, 25 more homes damaged and one trailer destroyed,'' she said, adding that two people suffered minor injuries.

Lynn Bobo, of the Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency, said a factory near Albion ''sustained extensive damage'' from high winds.

Bobo said several other homes and farm buildings in the affected area of the state suffered wind damage as well. One home was demolished near Clay City, Bobo said.

A woman was killed in Browns when a tornado skirted the rural community, police said.

Rescue workers treated at least three people injured in Newton, Bobo said. The extent of injuries was not immediately known.

''We have 30 homes destroyed and extensive damage in Newton,'' Bobo said. Newton is a town of about 3,200 people.

In Ohio, a tornado destroyed a fast-food restaurant in Butler County on the Ohio-Indiana border.

''A few people were hit with glass but the extent of their injuries is very minimal,'' a police spokeman said.

Trees and power lines were blown down in Fremont near the shores of Lake Erie. Nearby areas were pelted with marble-sized hail.

MANILA, Philippines (JUNE 3) UPI - Hooded men stabbed and killed an American naval officer in an apparent robbery attempt in his house outside the U.S. Subic Bay Naval Base, police and U.S. officials said Sunday.

A Navy statement said the officer was killed Saturday night, but did not identify the victim pending notification of next of kin. But Philippine police said he was Lt. Richard Brown, 33, assigned with the naval supply depot.

The statement said an initial investigation indicated the ''killing was criminal and not political in nature.''

A police report said Brown was having a manicure by three Filipina beauticians in his house in Olongapo city adjoining the base, 50 miles north of Manila, at about 10:45 p.m. when two masked men broke inside.

The men told the beauticians ''do not shout or we will kill you,'' said police investigator Rommel Belesario.

Belesario said the women were herded inside a room and that a scuffle apparantly ensued during which Brown was killed. Belesario said the officer sustained ''multiple stab wounds'' and was found sprawled in the living room face down in a pool of blood.

Three American servicemen were killed last month outside Subic and the nearby Clark Air Base in slayings blamed on communist guerrillas who protest the U.S. presence in the Philippines.

Navy authorities restricted travel following the Saturday night incident, but eased the restriction Sunday morning.

There are about 40,000 troops, department of defense employes and dependants in the six U.S. facilities in the Philippines.

Eleven Americans have been killed in the Philippines in the past three years in politically motivated killings.

BEIJING (JUNE 3) UPI - A Chinese man defied massive security in Tiananmen Square Sunday, unfurling a protest flag and imploring countrymen to ''Rise up'' one year to the day after troops cracked down on peaceful pro-democracy demonstrations.

Police immediately detained the man and later described him as mentally ill.

Upon seeing a Canadian television crew in Tiananmen Square, the man dashed in view of the camera about 9:50 a.m. and pulled out a 2-foot-square yellow fabric banner inscribed in Chinese.

''To all the world's journalists we report that a new philosophy has been invented,'' the inscription read, according to Patrick Brown, a member of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. crew.

Two uniformed police officers grabbed the man's arms within 5 seconds and the banner fell to the ground, Brown said. One officer retrieved the banner as another tried to prevent the CBC crew from filming the incident, he said.

''He was struggling as the police officers led him away toward the Forbidden City,'' Brown said. ''Our interpreter says he was shouting 'rise up' as he went.''

Several police officers also swept through Purple Bamboo Park on Beijing's west side, breaking up young Chinese holding an informal ''English Corner'' that has long been held on Sundays in a wooded area despite being technically banned last year.

An American witness said police ''shooed people away'' and hauled off at least two people who did not move fast enough. It was not known if the two had been formally detained.

Scores of Chinese citizens witnessed the Tiananmen Square incident, which took only 40 seconds and was carried out in defiance of repeated official warnings against dissent.

A spokeswoman in the Tiananmen Square police substation confirmed that a man had been detained outside the Forbidden City on the northern edge of Tiananmen Square, the nation's spiritual heart and the focus of last year's ill-fated democracy movement.

The spokeswoman said police were ''not clear'' about the man's identity and age but said an investigation attributed his action to ''mental illness.'' Authorities have blamed mental illness for every incidence of public protest that has come to light in recent months.

The spokeswoman said the man had been released from custody, but refused to give details of the incident.

Brown said the man's clothing - an olive green Mao jacket and blue dungarees - suggested he was a worker, noting that he appeared to be in his 40s.

''He clearly was not a student. He was too old for that,'' Brown said.

Security was extremely tight in and around Tiananmen Square, which has been closed to the public since Friday for a series of invited-guests-only events unrelated to last year's crackdown in which hundreds died.

Columns of paramilitary People's Armed Police marched around the square as crowds of Sunday tourists and curiosity seekers looked on from a safe distance.

Two fire trucks mounted with water cannons were parked outside the Great Hall of the People on the west side of the square and police in motorcycle sidecars could be seen holding tear gas launchers.

China's leadership offered no direct commentary Sunday on its brutal suppression of dissent one year ago but made no secret of its paranoia about what it calls ''counterrevolutionary forces.''

Sunday's program in Tiananmen Square was devoted to a rally commemorating Chinese patriots who fought against Britain's superior forces in the humiliating Opium War of 1839-42.

The state-run Chinese media were filled with strident editorials extolling ''anti-imperialism,'' warning other nations to stay out of Chinese affairs and chastising Chinese dissidents in exile.

''We look down upon the political trash who have lost any sense of national dignity and sold themselves out to foreign reactionary forces,'' the Xinhua news agency quoted a senior Communist Party official as telling an Opium War symposium.

''We won't yield to any kind of pressure from outside and we will oppose any interference in our internal affairs and conspiracy to carry out 'peaceful evolution' in China,'' the official, Fang Yi, said.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Police in Bedford, Indiana, say at least two people were killed and others trapped in their homes when three tornadoes ripped through the small community late Saturday. The National Weather Service reports a number of twisters touched down across the state... blowing houses off their foundations and trucks off roads. Authorities say southern Indiana was particularly hard hit and much of it was without power Saturday night.

Earlier in the evening, half-a-dozen counties in east-central and southeastern Illinois were pummeled by severe weather. The meteorological menu included high winds, tornadoes and heavy thunderstorms. Authorities say as many as four twisters ripped through the region... killing one woman, injuring at least five, and destroying more than three-dozen homes.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Saturday that President Bush and his Soviet counterpart, Mikhail Gorbachev , are- quote- ''quite pleased with the progress of the summit.'' Gorbachev reiterated this view when he told reporters at the Camp David retreat in Maryland that current U-S-Soviet relations allow- quote- ''ample opportunity for cooperation.''

The superpower summit draws to a close Sunday. One of the more imposing issues between the two sides as the summit got underway Thursday was a single German state's possible membership in NATO. That issue was shunted to each nation's foreign minister. Fitzwater said the two sides are closer on the issue now, but that NO agreement will be reached by the close of the summit.

Northwestern Peru was rocked again Saturday by a moderate earthquake. Peru's Geophysical Institute said the shaker measured four-point-nine on the Richter scale and was centered about 350 miles north of Lima. 56 people died earlier in the week when the region was hit by a temblor with a magnitude of five-point-eight.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Randy Johnson became the first Seattle pitcher ever to hurl a no-hitter by being ''effectively wild.''

Johnson, 4-3, walked six and struck out eight Saturday night, leading the Mariners to a 2-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Johnson's gem was his first complete game of the season in 11 starts. He faced 33 batters and threw 136 pitches, 87 for strikes.

Detroit outfielder Tracy Jones, who popped up twice and grounded to third, felt the frustration of trying to bat against the 6-foot-10 left-hander.

''He threw his fastball in, a backdoor slider and a good changeup,'' Jones said. ''The ball was all over and you can't zero in. He was wild, but effectively wild.''

Johnson completed the no-hitter by striking out Cecil Fielder and inducing Chet Lemon to foul out in the ninth inning, then struck out Mike Heath on an 0-2 pitch.

After Heath swung at a high fastball to end the game, Johnson jumped in the air and hugged catcher Scott Bradley as the rest of the Mariners rushed out of the dugout and the right-field bullpen.

''I'm just exhausted. It was an unreal feeling - a feeling I can't describe,'' Johnson said. ''I just let it go.''

After Johnson went into the Seattle dugout, the Kingdome crowd of 20,014 gave Johnson a standing ovation for nearly two minutes until he emerged and tipped his hat.

Johnson credited catcher Scott Bradley for helping him achieve the no-hitter.

Johnson also credited his newly-purchased drum set for keeping him loose between innings.

''I was really relaxed,'' Johnson said. ''I recently bought a drum set. I played the drums for an hour and a half today. I played that beat on the bench between innings. It was no song in particular. It was a beat I learned today.''

Johnson's gem was the second no-hitter in the major leagues this season. California's Mark Langston and Mike Witt combined to no-hit the Mariners on April 11, the third day of the season.

The closest any Detroit player came to a hit was Lemon's two-hopper to the left of third baseman Edgar Martinez in the fourth inning. Martinez fielded the ball, made a 360-degree turn and threw out Lemon by a step.

Seattle took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off Detroit starter Jeff Robinson, 4-5. Harold Reynolds led off with a walk and Alvin Davis walked one out later. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch, and Reynolds scored on a groundout by Jeffrey Leonard.

The Mariners made the score 2-0 in the fourth when Reynolds contributed a sacrifice fly.

(JUNE 3) UPI - For the second straight day, the Houston Astros felt the pinch from the San Francisco bench.

Mike Kingery's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th inning scored pinch runner Scott Garrelts, lifting the the Giants to a 5-4 victory over the Astros.

One inning earlier, Kingery's pinch-hit RBI single helped start a three-run ninth inning to send the game into extra innings. Brett Butler and Will Clark added RBI singled to complete the ninth-inning rally.

''I don't believe I've ever come off the bench in the ninth and delivered two hits in a game to win it like this,'' said Kingery, picked up as a free agent by the Giants after being released by Seattle in spring training.

''I didn't hit it very well, but sometimes you just have to hope it will find a place. With two strikes on me, I'll always choke up (the bat) and try to hit the ball where he throws it.

The night before, pinch-hitter Greg Litton slapped an infield grounder in the 11th inning that gave the Giants a 6-5 triumph over the Astros.

San Francisco reliever Steve Bedrosian, 2-3, allowed a run in the top of the 10th, but the Giants rallied to make him the winner. Losing pitcher Danny Darwin, 1-1, worked two-thirds of an inning, allowing two runs and three hits.

''We had this game but we just didn't close it out,'' Houston Manager Art Howe said. ''A three-run lead with this bullpen is pretty safe. I'd take this situation every time with these guys.''

Kevin Mitchell led off the 10th with a walk and one out later reached third on Terry Kennedy's single, his third hit of the game. Robby Thompson with Mitchell charging home on a suicide squeeze, lifted a bunt over the drawn-in infield for a single, scoring Mitchell.

After Jose Uribe made the second out on a liner to center, Kingery delivered the game-winner.

Franklin Stubbs' RBI double in the top of the 10th had given Houston a short-lived 4-3 lead.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

Elsewhere in the National League on Saturday, Philadelphia nipped New York 5-4, Pittsburgh edged Montreal 4-3 in 10 innings, Chicago upended St. Louis 7-6, Cincinnati beat Los Angeles 8-3 and San Diego crushed Atlanta 9-0.

At Philadelphia, Lenny Dykstra stroked three hits and scored two runs to help Philadelphia snap a five-game losing streak. Dykstra went 3-for-4 as he extended his hitting streak to 15 games and raised his major league-leading batting average to .405. Ken Howell, 6-3, won his third straight decision, and Roger McDowell earned his 13th save. Dwight Gooden, 3-5, absorbed the loss.

Pirates 4, Expos 3 (10 innings)

At Pittsburgh, R.J. Reynolds' two-out double in the 10th inning scored Jay Bell from first base to snap the Expos' four-game winning streak. Bill Landrum, 2-0, pitched the 10th inning for the victory. Drew Hall, 3-6, took the loss.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 6

At St. Louis, Dwight Smith's sacrifice fly scored Shawon Dunston in the ninth inning to snap a three-game Chicago losing streak. Les Lancaster, 4-2, picked up the win and Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his ninth save. Lee Smith, 1-1, took the loss.

SEOUL, South Korea (JUNE 3) UPI - President Roh Tae-woo departed Sunday for San Francisco and a meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in the first summit between leaders of the two nations.

Roh, accompanied by a seven-member entourage, took off around 3 p.m. (2 a.m. EDT) from Seoul Air Base, 10 miles southeast of the capital.

In a departure statement, Roh noted the unprecedented and unusual nature of the summit and said he expected it to open a new era in South Korea-Soviet relations.

''I intend to exchange with President Gorbachev extensive views on how to spread to northeast Asia, especially to the Korean peninsula, the waves of openness and cooperation now sweeping the world,'' Roh said.

''In that connection, I will discuss with him not only bilateral relations but will also discuss in particular depth how to pave the way for the peace and unification of the Korean peninsula,'' he said.

The Roh-Gorbachev meeting was expected to take place Monday afternoon somewhere in San Francisco. There has been no official disclosure of the exact time and place.

South Korea and the Soviet Union have never had formal relations in the 42 years since South Korea was formed in the aftermath of World War II. The Soviets have remained a close ally of North Korea, which invaded South Korea in June 1950 under promised support from Soviet leader Joseph Stalin.

Relations between the two nations date back to 1884 when Russia under czarism concluded a treaty of amity and trade with the Yi dynasty that was ruling Korea. Russia withdrew from Korea in all effects after the Japanese conquest of the peninsula in 1910.

Under a wartime agreement, the Soviet Union occupied North Korea at the end of World War II in 1945. North Korea became a communist satellite state with the installation in 1948 of a government headed by Kim Il-sung, formerly a North Korean army officer.

Relations between Moscow and Seoul remained chilly following the three-year Korean War. A turning point came 35 years later when the Soviets took part in the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics.

Bilateral trade, which had been through third countries, came into the open for direct deals soon afterward. The two countries exchanged trade offices in April 1989, and they subsequently established consular departments in their respective trade offices in Seoul and Moscow.

Two-way trade grew rapidly, rising to $600 million in 1989, an increase of more than 100 percent in one year. Of the total, imports from the Soviet Union stood at $392 million and exports out of South Korea $208 million. Seoul officials predict trade this year should top the $1 billion level.

South Korean businessmen as well as government officials are hopeful of quickly expanding economic cooperation between the two nations, as the Soviets provide natural resouces and South Korea supplies consumer products.

While trade is a major interest, Roh's main concern will be to set up formal diplomatic ties with the Soviet Union. The South Korean leader hopes Moscow will then use its influence to get North Korea to lessen its hostile stance and come to terms with South Korea.

After meeting with Gorbachev, Roh plans to travel to Washington and brief President Bush on his meeting with the Soviet leader. Roh also plans to discuss with Bush ways to further strengthen the ally relationship between South Korea and the United States.

BANGKOK (JUNE 3) UPI - As their leaders gathered for peace talks in Tokyo, the battling groups in Cambodia stepped up reports of fighting inside the country Sunday, saying more than 200 troops were killed last week.

The radio of the Vietnamese-backed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen reported that the heaviest fighting took place May 25 to May 27 at the key crossroads town of Svay Chek, about 20 miles east of the Thai border.

''The Cambodian government forces wiped out 150 enemy troops and wounded 200 others, and seized a number of war means in fighting at Svay Chek, Banteay Meanchey province, 225 miles northwest of Phnom Penh,'' the Phnom Penh broadcast said.

The report of large-scale casualties at Svay Chek could not be confirmed and analysts in Bangkok believed it was exaggerated, like other reports broadcast this weekend for their effect on the Tokyo talks due to start Monday.

Phnom Penh radio also reported that government troops killed 21 resistance soldiers in northwestern Siem Reap province in what it called ''sweeping operations.''

The three-part resistance coalition also reported fighting in the province but in different areas - claiming the capture of Roluos township only 10 miles from the 12th century ruins at Angkor Wat.

The radio of the Khmer Rouge guerrilla group reported Sunday that resistance troops captured five villages in Siem Reap on Friday and killed 19 government soldiers in a raid on Chong Kal District of Oddar Meanchey province, northwest of Siem Reap.

It also said that on May 28 its forces captured Samraong Tong district in Kompong Speu province, only about 30 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

''We totally liberated this township, killed two enemy soldiers, wounded three others, destroyed a quantity of war material, and seized three AKs (assault rifles) and a quantity of assorted ammunition and war material,'' the broadcast said.

The Khmer Rouge ''liberated'' 18 other villages nearby, it said. It said its forces also freed 30 other villages and killed 12 government troops in Kompong Chhnang province, northwest of the capital.

In a separate report it said Khmer Rouge forces were making progress in Kompong Som province - which includes the country's only deep-water port.

It said the guerrillas smashed defensive positions around Sre Ambel, a highway town about 45 miles north of the port.

None of the reports could be independently confirmed and all sides have exaggerated their successes in an effort to score propaganda points, particularly at important junctures in the effort to work out a political settlement to the conflict.

The talks in Tokyo are intended to produce an agreement on a ceasefire and the end of foreign military assistance to all of the groups.

BEIRUT (JUNE 3) UPI - An 11-year-old girl was killed in Christian east

Beirut Sunday, the first victim of renewed fighting between two Christian military leaders locked in a power struggle for control of the enclave, police said.

Police said the fighting broke out between troops of Christian military leader Gen. Michel Aoun and Lebanese Forces militia leader Samir Geagea, who had agreed to a Vatican-mediated truce last week.

Sporadic clashes were reported through the night along the demarcation lines in the Christian enclave but calm prevailed in the morning, security sources and witnesses said. Police said the girl was killed and her parents were wounded when a shell landed on their house.

More than 1,000 people have been killed and 3,740 others have been wounded since the battle for the control of the Christian enclave broke out Jan. 31 between Aoun and Geagea.

Papal Nuncio Pablo Puente announced last weekend a five-point agreement for peace in east Beirut which he said Geagea and Aoun had approved.

He said the agreement called for a permanent truce, the reopening of schools, the release of all prisoners and the suspension of the rivals' propaganda war.

TUCSON, AZ (JUNE 3) UPI - An early test of a treatment for the muscle defect blamed for the most common childhood form of muscular dystrophy appears to have been a success, it was reported Sunday.

Dr. Peter K. Law, a professor of neurology at the University of Tennessee, reported on preliminary studies of a cell therapy procedure called myoblast transfer, now being tested on children suffering from Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

Law, who revealed his findings Saturday at a Muscular Dystrophy Association meeting in Tucson, said that a foot muscle controlling a boy's big toe was injected with healthy myoblasts, or immature muscle cells. The muscle then produced dystrophin, the protein whose absence due to a gene defect causes Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

The boy's other foot was injected with a placebo, and neither the patient nor the researchers knew which foot had received the dummy treatment. The toe muscle was chosen for the research to avoid potential damage to more important mucles.

The patient was monitored for three months after undergoing the treatment.

The New York Times reported Sunday that the strength in the treated muscle increased 20 percent.

''Myoblast transfer holds great promise as a potential therapy for muscular dystrophy and other devastating hereditary muscle diseases,'' said Dr. Leon Charash, chairman of MDA's medical advisory committee.

Both Charash and Law cautioned, however, that the study is in the preliminary stages.

''Many more questions must be answered and much remains to be done before the procedure can become a treatment,'' Charash said. ''But Dr. Law's finding is an exciting first sign of success.''

Law said the patient, identified by the Times as Sam Looper, 9, of Pickens S.C., showed no evidence of adverse effects, including immune-system rejection of the transplanted myoblasts, which came from a muscle sample donated by his father. Cyclosporin, an immune system suppressant, was used to help prevent rejection.

The boy's mother told the Times that, while awaiting results, she often had asked her son to move his big toes, looking for signs that one was stronger.

''After maybe a month,'' Lynn Looper said, ''Sam said, 'This one's stronger.' And he was right.''

Law's research team began myoblast injections in February. Ten other boys also have undergone the procedure and are being monitored.

Charash told the Times that the finding is promising enough that researchers will now be moving ahead quickly with muscle cell injections in larger muscles of the leg that help control balance.

Duchenne muscular dystrophy is a form of the degenerative muscle disease found almost exclusively in boys. It leads to progressive muscle weakness. Most victims are confined to a wheelchair by age 12 and few survive their 20s, succumbing to breathing problems caused by weakened chest muscles.

Law said he believes the procedure can be applied to other forms of muscular dystrophy and other diseases of muscular degeneration.

Another MDA-supported study began in April at the Montreal Neurological Institute. Two other studies are to begin this year at Children's Hospital in San Francisco and New England Medical Center in Boston.

Scientists discovered the gene defect that causes Duchenne muscular dystrophy in 1986 and, in 1987, they identified dystrophin as the gene product absent in people suffering from the disease.

WESTMINSTER, CA (JUNE 3) UPI - A man driving along a freeway shot and killed a woman in his car, then killed himself as the car sped along with the woman's 3-year-old son in the back seat, authorities said Sunday.

The car careened into the guardrail and scraped along the divider until coming to a stop without hitting any other cars, Sgt. Bob Amren said.

The 3-year-old boy, whose name was withheld by police, was found unharmed in the back seat of the car stopped along the southbound San Diego Freeway north of Springdale Street shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday, Amren said.

''The initial investigation indicated that the male driver shot the female passenger and then took his own life while the car was still in motion,'' Amren said.

The victims' names were withheld until relatives could be notified.

The driver, a 28-year-old man, and his passenger, a 33-year-old woman, both of Long Beach, were dead in the front seat when officers arrived, he said.

The woman's 3-year-old son had witnessed the shootings from the back seat, he said.

''That's going to be with that kid for life,'' Amren said. The boy was turned over to social workers.

Detectives had not determined the dead couple's relationship.

''The motive for the shooting is unknown,'' Amren said. A gun was recovered inside the car.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev declared their second superpower session a success Sunday, each hailing a new, more trusting U.S.-Soviet relationship that can tackle tough problems in the future.

Wrapping up four days of meetings with a nationally televised news conference, Bush pointed to the array of topics the two had broached - ''and there were some tough ones'' - from the continuing controversy over a united Germany's membership in NATO to the Soviet crackdown on Lithuania.

''I think it's a mark of how far the U.S.-Soviet relationship has come in that all our exchanges - whether about issues on which we agreed or disagreed - the spirit of candor and openness ... has shown through,'' Bush said.

Gorbachev, reading an opening statement that ran a full 10 minutes, also was upbeat.

''I agree with President Bush fully,'' said Gorbachev, who noted that the two leaders had tackled ''difficult disagreements'' and that the new cooperation between the superpowers would ''make it possible for us to speak really of a new phase of cooperation.''

Both leaders also spoke of a growing personal relationship between them that they said should enhance ties between the superpowers.

Gorbachev said he believed almost three years ago, when Bush was vice president, that the president was a man ''you could do business with.''

The two men, sitting side by side in the White House East Room for the formal news conference, ended their second meeting in six months with Bush pledging more regular, less formal gatherings in the future, and Gorbachev extending Bush an invitation to visit the Soviet Union for a state visit.

The news conference climaxed the summit most notable for a flurry of agreements signed - including accords on cuts in chemical weapons and nuclear arms and a commercial accord to boost Gorbachev's economic reform program at home - as well as continuing disputes on the still-contentious issues of German reunification and Lithuania's drive for independence.

Bush pointed to the question of a reunified Germany's full membership in NATO as something the two sides still differed about. ''I'm not sure we narrowed the differences,'' he said.

But with the prospect of two more meetings before the end of the year, the relationship between the two leaders was clearly advanced by the session, with Bush throwing his full support behind the Soviet leader and his reform program at home, and Gorbachev clearly grateful.

Gorbachev, for his part, said it would take ''many many years'' to fully get to know his American counterpart but dubbed the relationship now ''very human.''

The Soviet president pointed to his relaxed consultations with Bush Saturday at the Camp David, Md., presidential retreat, where the two threw horseshoes, as ''quite important.''

He also said the summit had led to a ''qualitatively different relationship'' that enables the two countries to ''speak of a new phase of cooperation'' and a ''spirit of responsibility in which we discussed all questions'' that will have a ''stablizing effect on international situation.''

Bush said, ''We could never have had the discussions ... 20 years ago. There's been dramatic moves. And the more this reform and openness continues, the more compatible we become.''

On other topics, Bush reiterated that significant change in U.S. policy on improving trade with the Soviet Union is contingent on the passage of Soviet legislation allowing freer emigration.

Discussing the Baltic stand-off, Bush described it as ''a thorn in the side of U.S.-Soviet relations'' but refused to link it to granting most-favored-nation status to the Soviet Union.

Over the past few days Gorbachev has offered a combative defense of his actions toward Lithuania and the other independence-minded Baltic states of Estonia and Latvia.

Bush, who has called for dialogue to end the confrontation, had expressed concern earlier about awarding Gorbachev with a major trade agreement while a Soviet economic blockage of the republic continues.

On European issues, the president restressed the importance of NATO, as well as U.S. troops remaining in Europe.

Gorbachev agreed that little headway had been made in the dispute over Western demands of full NATO membership for a unified Germany but added, ''That does not mean our efforts were futile.

CARSON CITY, NV (JUNE 3) UPI - Thomas ''Scrappydoo'' Baal, a former mental patient who said he deserved the death penalty and fought attempts to extend his life, was executed Sunday for the murder of a Las Vegas shuttle bus driver during a $120 robbery.

Officials at the Nevada State Prison administered a lethal injection to Baal at 7:05 a.m. PDT. The 26-year-old killer, strapped on a table with needles in his arms and legs, was pronounced dead at 7:14 a.m.

During the minutes before he died, Baal stared at the ceiling, muttering to himself. At one point, he turned to one of the witnesses outside the glass-enclosed death chamber, prosecutor Dan Seaton, and mumbled something. Seaton said he could not make out the words.

About three minutes after the injections were given, Baal slowly closed his eyes.

The U.S. Supreme Court had cleared away the final legal barrier to the execution earlier Sunday, voting 5-4 to lift a stay of execution issued Saturday by a federal appellate court in San Francisco.

The Nevada attorney general's office included in its petition to the high court an affidavit from Baal stating, ''I believe in the death penalty and I want the penalty to be imposed against me immediately. I want to face up to my crime and pay the consequences for it.''

He said he was mentally and emotionally competent and understood the consequences of his request.

The appeals court had granted a temporary stay of execution late Thursday, blocking an execution originally scheduled for early Friday and saying it needed time to study the case. The appeals court continued the stay Saturday morning on a 2-1 vote.

In a hearing Thursday, Baal, 26, who pleaded guilty to a 1988 murder in Las Vegas, repeatedly told U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben he wanted no more appeals.

''I just want to get the execution over with,'' he said. The condemned man also asked the judge, as a last request, to ''bring me a hooker.''

His parents, Edwin and Doris Baal of Mesa, Colo., contended their son was not mentally competent to waive his rights to an appeal in federal court.

They asked the appeals court to order an evidentiary hearing in U.S. District Court in Reno to determine if their son knew what he was doing in giving up his appeals.

The two-judge appeals court majority said Saturday that Baal's parents had presented a record ''replete with undisputed evidence of substantial mental impairment, including diagnoses of depression, organic brain damage and several suicide attempts, and Thomas Baal has changed his mind about pursuing his appeal on several occasions.''

Judge Alex Kozinski, who dissented, said Baal has been found competent by several psychiatrists in the past two years.

''The people of Nevada want their punishment exacted. Baal has accepted their verdict. Why do we stand in the way?'' he asked.

Baal was the ninth person executed in the United States this year and the 129th - the fifth in Nevada - since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to be reinstated in 1976.

Baal was convicted in the Feb. 26, 1988, slaying of Frances Maves in Las Vegas. Baal allegedly approached the shuttle bus driver and asked her for help. She gave him $20, but he allegedly pulled a knife and pushed her into her car.

She tried to reason with him, prosecutors said, and then attempted to grab the knife. Baal, who maintains he was on a drug spree at the time, allegedly told her she should not have done and and then said, ''I now sentence you to death.''

Maves was stabbed eight times and her car and purse with $120 was stolen. Baal was later arrested in Reno.

Baal's parents said their son had many emotional problems while growing up and they spent $100,000 for psychiatric care until they ran out of money. They said they could not find any government agency to help and Baal checked out of a mental hospital and left.

Three psychiatrists in 1988 found Baal competent before he pleaded guilty to murder. Last week, prison psychiatrist Charles Van Valkenburg testified he believed Baal was competent to make a decision to forego further appeals.

(JUNE 3) UPI - TODAY'S PEOPLE:

JANE AND TED: Jane Fonda is a cut above Ted Turner's usual girlfriends, his daughter says. Laura Turner, oldest daughter of the communications mogul, told People magazine that she hasn't always approved of Turner's women, but says Fonda is OK. ''I think they're appropriate for each other '' she said. ''They're both independent and exciting. Dad gets bored quickly. Usually, he needs a whole stable of women to keep up with him, but they're not always the brightest.'' Turner says he was the first person to seek a date with Fonda after she split from husband Tom Hayden, but she turned him down at the time. ''I think I said I wasn't feeling so hot, that he was an interesting guy, too, but I wasn't feeling peppy,'' Fonda says. Now that she's feeling peppier, Fonda says the relationship with Turner ''is a natural,'' even though both claim to be dating other people too.

CLEANSHAVEN ELLIOT: Timothy Busfield plays a naval officer in the Broadway play ''A Few Good Men,'' which means he had to shave the red beard he wears on ''thirtysomething.'' Busfield told the New York Daily News that the beard was merely a gimmick to help him get the Elliot role on ''thirtysomething.'' ''I know I look young and, when I auditioned for the part four years ago, I wasn't even thirty-something,'' he said. ''I was 29. But I wanted the part, so I figured one way of making myself look older was growing a beard. I kept putting off an audition until I thought it was full enough. Now I guess I'll have to start growing it again.''

ROYAL BIRTH: Marina Mowatt, the 23-year-old cousin to Queen Elizabeth who caused a royal uproar by becoming pregnant out of wedlock, has given birth to a daughter. Mowatt, who is 27th in line to the throne, had a baby girl last weekend after secretly entering a National Health Service hospital in West London, British newspapers reported. Mowatt made headlines last year when she announced she was having the child of her boyfriend, photographer Paul Mowatt, who she married in February. The healthy 7-pound girl, whose name has not yet been announced, is the first grandaughter of Princess Alexandra and Sir Angus Ogilvy.

ROCK AND FIRE: Dennis Elliot, the drummer for the rock band Foreigner, and his wife, Iona, had to abandon ship off Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Saturday after their boat caught fire. Iona discovered a fire in the engine room of the Charisma III and Dennis was unable to put it out with a fire extinguisher. ''We really don't know what happened,'' he said. ''It was so sudden and unexpected.'' The Elliotts radioed the Coast Guard with a mayday call, giving their location and saying they were going to jump overboard. A Coast Guard plane spotted them about 20 minutes later and dropped a raft into the water. They were later taken aboard a freighter, ferried by Coast Guard helicopter to the Bahamas and then flown to Florida.

GLIMPSES: Charlton Heston once played Moses, and now he's portraying God in Paul Hogan's new movie, ''Almost an Angel.'' ''This is a serious God,'' Heston said. ''Otherwise, they could have used George Burns'' ... The Branford Marsalis Quartet has three gigs set for the Soviet Union. Through a grant provided by the U.S. Information Agency, the group will play the Moscow Jazz Festival Monday and Tuesday as well as a show in Leningrad Thursday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev closed a successful summit meeting with President Bush Sunday and headed West for a brief, two city tour before his return to the Soviet Union.

Wrapping up four days of meetings with a news conference, Gorbachev hailed the new, enhanced relationship between the superpowers and, despite continuing disputes with the United States, seemed genuinely optimistic that the two leaders could work together.

Gorbachev, noting the increased cooperation, said he believed almost three years ago, when Bush was vice president, that the president was a man ''you could do business with.''

After the hourlong session with reporters, the Bushes bade formal farewell to Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, who headed next to Minneapolis, where Minnesotans were ready to welcome him to the American heartland.

Boarding a helicopter that took him to Andrews Air Force Base, Gorbachev told some 400 people gathered to see him off, ''I'm leaving Washington with a very good feeling, the feeling that the work we did was worth it.''

After a 21-gun salute, the Gorbachevs walked the length of a red carpet to head out of the muggy capital city.

After the stop in Minnesota, where he planned to meet with some of America's top business and agriculture leaders, Gorbachev was to visit San Francisco for a reunion breakfast with former President Ronald Reagan before returning to the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev left Washington with a series of signed agreements - including landmark accords on cuts in chemical weapons and nuclear arms and a much-desired commercial accord to boost his economic reform program at home.

In addition, the Soviet president, facing economic and political turmoil, was expected to gain from Bush's full support.

During the four days of talks - at the White House, over formal dinners and at the Camp David, Md., presidential retreat on Saturday - the Soviet president also kept true to form by leaping repeatedly from his limousine to greet Washingtonians.

But perhaps the most tangible gain for Gorbachev was the surprise signing of the pact to enhance trade between the two countries, a prospect that was clouded by the Soviet economic blockage of independence-minded Lithuania.

Bush, who has called for dialogue to end the confrontation, had expressed concern about awarding Gorbachev a major trade agreement, but bowed by summit's end to the Soviet's persuasion and need to bolster perestroika.

The two leaders, however, ended their second summit meeting admitting sharp disputes remain. In addition to Lithuania, both Bush and Gorbachev restated their positions on the also-controversial reunification of Germany.

But Gorbachev continued to play down reports that his country was in a position of weakness because of the troubles.

''When you look from outside without knowing all the subtleties,'' he said ''one could certainly arrive at erroneous conclusions.''

#90154u0416 06/03/1990 ~United Press International
WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - Here are highlights from the joint news conference held Sunday by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev:

Opening remarks

Bush called the summit ''productive'' and said, ''President Gorbachev and I have agreed to meet on a regular basis, perhaps annually. Both of us would like to think that we can get together more often with less formality because, you see, we're now at a stage in the U.S.-Soviet relationship and, indeed, in world history where we should miss no opportunity to complete the extraordinary tasks before us.''

Gorbachev singled out the nuclear reduction agreement as the most important of the summit and said he hoped to sign a formal treaty later this year. He also expressed hopes for an agreement on conventional arms in Europe sometime this year.

Gorbachev said he appreciates Bush ''very much as a political leader. Now we have a good human relationship and I think a good human atmosphere between us.''

He has invited Bush to visit the Soviet Union.

Germany

Differences remain over whether a reunited Germany belongs in NATO. Bush said, ''I'm not sure we narrowed (the differences). I feel I understand President Gorbachev's position, but I know this for a fact certain: I had every opportunity to explain in considerable detail why I felt a united Germany in NATO would be stabilizing, would be important for the stability of a post-German unification Europe. So, I can't say whether we narrowed them.''

Gorbachev said, ''I believe the fact that the president, myself, and our colleagues have devoted a great deal of time to this issue. We have thrashed out this idea very, very thoroughly. I think (it) has been very helpful and beneficial because we will continue our debates on this.''

Soviet Jews settling in Israeli-occuppied territories

Bush restated U.S. opposition to new Israeli settlement in the occuppied territories ''beyond the 1967 lines.''

He acknowledged ''there are settlements that go contrary to the United States' policy, and I will continue to represent the policy, reiterate the policy, and try to persuade the government of Israel that it is counterproductive to go forward with additional settlements in these territories.''

Gorbachev said his country ''is now being bombarded by a lot of criticism from Arab countries.''

Gorbachev has met with the Syrian and Egyptian leaders. ''Either after these meetings and exchanges with the president of the United States of America on this particular issue, our concern will be heeded in Israel and they will make certain conclusions, or else we must give further thought to it in terms of what we can do with issuing permits for exit.

''And some people are raising the matter in these terms in the Soviet Union: namely, as long as there are no assurances from the Israelis that this is not going to be done by them, to postpone issuing permits for exit to put it off. But I hope they will heed what the two presidents strongly advise them: that they should act in a wise fashion.''

Trade

Most-favored-nation trading status for the Soviet Union hinges on improved emigration laws, Bush said.

And if the law is passed in Moscow, ''We'll cross that bridge when we get to it, but ... MFN is hooked into the emigration law being passed. That's it. We have other trade agreements ... the grain agreement. And we have a maritime agreement.

Baltic independence

Bush said, ''We had some good discussions of this. I have been encouraged to see discussions going on over there between various leaders, and let's hope the matter can be resolved because I haven't lessened my view as to peoples' aspirations for self-determination. And I feel strongly about that.''

Gorbachev said, ''It seems to me that our position is constructive and convincing. Our constitution has recorded the right for each people to make a choice for sole determination up to and including secession.

''... We did not have a mechanism that would regulate the implementation of that right. Now we have it recorded in the law.''

Russian leader Yeltsin

Gorbachev drew laughter when he told a Soviet reporter, ''I don't think you have chosen the best place for clarifying our internal problems, but c'est la vie, as they say.''

As to his relationship with Russian leader Boris Yeltsin, Gorbachev concluded: ''In short, I always say life will place everything in proper perspective. Now that we have reached a phase of radical fundamental change, where everybody is supposed to show great responsibility for their country, where we are changing everything now that we have - we are about to make a radical change-about in our economy - it is all very serious. Everything will become clear pretty soon what comrade Yeltsin is after.''

ATLANTA (JUNE 3) UPI - The American Cancer Society played host to a ''Survivors' Day'' celebration Sunday to call attention to the estimated 6 million Americans who have beaten the nation's second most deadly disease.

''Today, about one out of two people survive cancer, compared with one out of five people 50 years ago,'' the cancer society said in a prepared statement announcing the third annual event. ''Most encouraging are breast cancer statistics, which show a 90 percent to 100 percent survival rate if the cancer has not spread.''

Hundreds of cancer survivors, joined by actor Jack Klugman, gathered at the society's headquarters for a tree-planting ceremony designed to boost the morale of sufferers and remind people of the benefits of early detection.

Other survivors from around the country were represented at the event by sending cards telling of their successful battles with the disease, the nation's No. 2 killer behind heart disease.

The cards will become a permanent part of the exhibit when they are placed in a receptacle at the bottom of the tree.

''I, too, am a survivor,'' said Klugman, recently diagnosed with throat cancer. ''Because of early detection, my prognosis is excellent.

''The progress in cancer research is phenomenal, and there are wonderful doctors out there,'' Klugman said. ''But you have to help yourself. I urge everybody to get checked regularly.''

A breast cancer survivor from Columbus, Ohio, wrote on one of the ceremonial cards: ''Keep a positive attitude. Keep busy with people. Take care of yourself, and God will help you show others it is possible.''

A message from an Atlanta survivor said, ''Get in a good support group. Don't lose hope. Most importantly, take your treatments and remember nothing is impossible.''

The cancer society, in press materials announcing the event, said breast cancer is not the only form of the disease with increasing survival rates.

People diagnosed with cancers of the colon, ovaries, cervix, uterus, prostate, bladder and skin have between an 84 percent and 90 percent chance of survival if the malignancies are detected early, the Cancer Society said.

Without early diagnosis, those figures drop to 23 percent to 41 percent, the organization said.

Despite the recommendations of health officials, the National Cancer Advisory Board reports that in 1987 only 45 percent of women had the breast exam called a mammogram and only 77 percent had a Pap test, two common methods for early cancer detection.

About 42,500 lives could have been saved in 1989 with early diagnosis and proper treatment, the Cancer Society said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev jointly criticized Israel Sunday for settling Soviet Jews in Israeli-occupied territories and Gorbachev hinted Moscow might hinder further emigration if Israel does not stop the practice.

At a White House news conference ending a four-day summit between the two leaders, Bush noted: ''U.S. policy on the settlements in occupied territory is unchanged and clear.''

''We oppose settlements in territory beyond'' the areas captured by Israel as a result of the 1967 Middle East War, Bush said. ''It is a stated, reaffirmed policy over and over again.''

New policies in Moscow have enabled thousands of Jews to leave the Soviet Union and, with State Department curbs on the number of Jews allowed into the United States, the influx of Soviet Jews into Israel topped 10,000 in April.

Some 130,000 Soviet Jews are expected to move to Israel this year, leaving Palestinians worried the new emigrants will settle in the occupied West Bank and mostly Arab East Jerusalem and complicating any territorial concessions that might be agreed to in a Middle East peace accord.

Gorbachev noted in the news conference that he had come under fire from Arab leaders, including Presidents Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria, for permitting the large-scale emigration of Soviet Jews who end up living in settlements in the occupied territories.

The Soviet leader stressed that if Israel continued to allow the settlements, ''we must give further thought to it in terms of what we can do with issuing permits for exit.''

''And some people are raising the matter in these terms in the Soviet Union: as long as there are no assurances from the Israelis that this is not going to be done by them, to postpone issuing permits for exit,'' Gorbachev said.

''I hope they (the Israelis) will heed what the two presidents strongly advise them - that they should act in a wise fashion,'' he said.

After the news conference, Secretary of State James Baker said while the United States opposed the new settlements, it did not believe the matter should be tied to the rights of Jews to leave the Soviet Union.

''We have a different position on this issue,'' Baker told NBC's ''Meet the Press.''

''We haven't linked the two in the way President Gorbachev was suggesting. They have a great deal more trouble with that then we do,'' Baker said.

Israel claims less than 1 percent of the Soviet Jewish emigrants moved to the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. But U.S. officials, who include parts of Jerusalem seized in the 1967 war as occupied territory, say that about 10 percent of the new immigrants end up in occupied territories.

Bush also said Sunday that the United States does not oppose a United Nations special envoy going to the occupied territories to investigate the situation. The government of Israel, however, has said it opposes such a mission.

Last week, the U.N. Security Council passed a resolution calling for a special Security Council mission to go to Israel, but the United States vetoed that specific mission.

Trying to reconcile the U.S. position, Bush said the United States supports sending a special envoy, Marrack Goulding, representing the U.N. secretary general, but would oppose a larger contingent under the authority of the Security Council.

Bush said the United States will continue to try to bring Israel to the peace table. The government of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, however, has refused to go along with an American initiative to start direct Israeli-Palestinian talks leading to local elections by Palestinian Arabs.

The Middle East was one of the regional issues discussed by Bush and Gorbachev Saturday at Camp David, Md.

Baker said Gorbachev did not make a similar point on Jewish emigration during the Saturday session, but that the Soviets have made such comments in other recent meetings.

PARIS (JUNE 3) UPI - The new and improved Andre Agassi appears to be very good indeed.

The 20-year-old American, devoted to a new fitness program for the past five months, has reached the quarterfinals of the French Open in convincing fashion. Agassi has dropped just two sets in his first four matches and Sunday disposed of fourth-round opponent Jim Courier 6-7 (8-10), 6-1, 6-4, 6-0.

Two years ago, Agassi reached the semifinals at Roland Garros, where he met Mats Wilander. The fifth set was no contest as the exhausted Agassi was shut out 6-0 and the memory remains vivid.

''It's tough to forget, when you are so close and then you get to the fifth set and you're a different player. I felt horrible,'' he recalled. ''I was weak and cramping. At that point, I was just thinking about bed and getting off the court.''

In January, Agassi started a regimen of hard exercise and better eating.

Now, he says, ''I am a different player. My physical strength is a lot more and when you're physically strong, it's tough not to be mentally strong.''

Defending champion Michael Chang, who will meet Agassi in the quarterfinals, said of the ''new'' Agassi, ''The guy's a monster.

''He worked a lot harder and he's a lot better player.''

Courier, who attended the Bollettieri tennis academy with Agassi several years ago, also noted his opponent's improved fitness.

''He's definitely in better shape than last year,'' said Courier, who upset Agassi in the third round of the 1989 French Open. ''Last year, he wasn't there to answer my forehand and this year he was there with a pretty good response. He's been working pretty hard I guess.''

''After the first set (Sunday), I wasn't able to take control of the points, I was always on the run,'' said Courier. ''Last year, I was able to take control and hurt him a little bit. Today, he came out determined not to let me do that to him ... I guess maybe he's a step quicker.''

Agassi and Courier use the same hard-hitting style, staying on the baseline and pounding their forehands and two-handed backhands. Because both players slam every shot at top speed, Sunday's match lacked any versatile shotmaking and became a monotonous exchange of 90-mph groundstrokes.

Agassi, when asked about the second-set turnaround, said that before the match he had little hope for the opening set.

''Jim always comes out banging the balls in the first set - my goal was just to stay with him.'' Having forced the tie-breaker, Agassi felt in control of the match and recalled saying to himself before the second set, ''I'm in great shape.''

The Las Vegas showman again wore hot-pink cycling shorts beneath his denim tennis shorts, plus a hot-pink headband. He said there had been no repercussions since his statements Friday, when he ridiculed the possibility of an all-white clothing code at the French Open.

Agassi said Sunday that tournament organizer Philippe Chatrier claims that an ''all-whites'' clothing rule is important because of tradition but then signs up many sponsors and puts their logos along courtside.

''It is unfortunate he doesn't care about tradition when it comes to reaping the benefits,'' said Agassi. ''I just think he should be consistent.

''If he says no flashy clothes because of Wimbledon (adhering to the traditional dress code), then he shouldn't stop there. He should get rid of all the sponsors or leave the clothing issue alone.''

TEHRAN, Iran (JUNE 3) UPI - Huge crowds of mourners gathered at the tomb of former Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Sunday, first anniversary of his death.

The tomb, at the Behesht Zahra cemetery 10 miles south of Tehran, was the focal point of a huge crowd stretching for hundreds of yards in every direction.

Khomeini died on the night between June 3 and 4 last year, slightly more than 10 years after he led the Islamic revolution that toppled the late Shah Mohammed Pahlavi.

The Islamic Republic of Iran, which he founded, has officially declared June 4 as the anniversary of his death, and official memorial ceremonies were set for Monday. Officials said 3 million people would attend.

Mourners began arriving at the tomb last week, some from hundreds of miles away, and many camped at the site.

At a speech 10 days ago, President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said memories of the imam, or spiritual leader, had to be broadly sustained.

''Some claim that, when one is deceased, we should speak only of the living,'' he told a crowd of worshipers. ''It should never be so. If, God forbid, the imam is ever considered dead, then it is unclear what path the revolution will take.''

At the ayatollah's tomb, ceremonies began last week, with mourners trying to get as close as possible to the glass-encased tombstone draped in green. The crowds circled round the tomb, kissing the railings.

Mournful tunes were played around the clock, filling the interior of the shrine as the faithful kept late-night vigils. Processions of weeping men beat their breasts continuously and those unable to get close to the tomb walked round the cemetery perimeters.

Medics and ambulances stood by, as temperatures in the day soared to 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and scenes of people fainting in the heat were common, witnesses said.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said more than 3,000 city buses were used to bring mourners to Behesht Zahra from Tehran.

The state media reported that thousands marched to the capital from points hundreds of miles away, such as the holy city of Mashad in northeastern Iran, many with blistered feet and wearing headbands which read: ''Greetings to Ruhollah.''

About 3,000 foreign guests were expected at Monday's ceremonies, including groups from Soviet Azerbaijan, Lebanon, Pakistan, India, and South Africa and representatives of the Afghan and Iraqi Shi'ite clergy.

Among official foreign guests arriving over the past few days was Palestinian leader Ahmed Jibril, who was greeted at Tehran's Mehrabad airport Saturday by Deputy Foreign Minister Mohammad Ali Besharati.

Officials said Iran would keep open two checkpoints on the Soviet border Sunday and Monday to allow visitors in, and was prepared to issue 1,500 visas to Soviet citizens. By Sunday, some 42 Soviet Azerbaijanis had entered, reports in the media said.

The state radio and television have devoted hours to eulogies of Khomeini. Newspapers devoted editorials and special sections to the late ayatollah.

IRNA said the government would issue a special stamp Monday to commemorate the first anniversary of Khomeini's death.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - President Bush indicated Sunday that the United States and Soviet Union had agreed to try to revive talks on an ''Open Skies'' system in which all East and West Bloc nations would allow flights over their territory by military aircraft.

Bush told reporters at a White House news conference ending his summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that the two leaders had discussed the stalled ''Open Skies'' talks.

''I'm hopeful that 'Open Skies' will be revived,'' Bush said.

The talks, which involve the 23 nations from the Western NATO alliance and the East Bloc Warsaw Pact countries, opened in Ottawa in February with signs that an agreement would be possible, once some technicalities - such as frequency and altitude of flights - were worked out.

But in a follow-up conference in Budapest, Hungary, in April, the Soviets stopped cooperating, according to U.S. officials, and ''began stonewalling.''

U.S. officials believe the change in Soviet behavior was the result of opposition by high-ranking Soviet military officials, acting in opposition to Gorbachev. Negotiations have been frozen since then.

The talks are meant to produce a system in which all the countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union, open their territory to overflights by military reconnaissance aircraft, as a means of reducing the chance for any surprise attack.

Bush proposed the idea one year ago in a speech at College Station, Texas, resurrecting a 1955 proposal by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, but rejected by Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev as ''an attempt to peer into our bedrooms.''

The idea became less important militarily with advances in reconnaissance satellites, but the United States has pushed it as a form of arms control that contributes to stability since it requires the active participation of all the countries concerned.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The wooded presidential retreat... Camp David... provided the backdrop for the third day of talks between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev yesterday. The leaders tackled regional issues such as the Middle East, Afghanistan, and Central America. But it wasN'T all work and NO play. Bush gave the Soviet leader a tour of the grounds in a golf cart. And Gorbachev tossed a few horseshoes, one of Bush's favorite games.

Between 12 and 15 tornadoes touched down at least 50 times in Indiana last night, leaving seven people dead and hundreds of others injured. Governor Evan Bayh has declared a state of emergency. Authorities are calling the damage the worst since 1974. Tornadoes and hail in Illinois left one person dead and many homes damaged. A twister also hit Ohio, destroying a fast-food restaurant and injuring several people.

A Cuban gunboat commandeered a Japanese-owned yacht yesterday, firing cannon shots over the vessel's bow as it sailed in international waters. The yacht's captain says the 145-foot vessel was 14 miles north of Cuba when a Cuban ship approached and ordered the boat to follow it. The captain says the British Embassy in Washington told him the action might be related to the interception of a Cuban ship earlier this year by the U-S Coast Guard. The Cubans did NOT attempt to board the yacht.

The number two man in the Palestine Liberation Organization says the group is rebuffing a formal U-S request that it denounce the attempted Palestinian raid on Israeli shores. But the P-L-O official told U-P-I in Tunis, Tunisia, yesterday the request would be considered at an executive meeting to be held within 48 hours in Baghdad, Iraq.

ALBANY, NY (JUNE 3) UPI - Gov. Mario Cuomo announced Sunday he will seek a third four-year term, bucking the trend of Northeastern governors stepping down because of economic woes.

''Matilda and I don't want to do anything else,'' Cuomo said.

For the past eight years, Cuomo, 57, has been considered a prospect for the Democratic presidential nomination. Cuomo has often derided speculation on his reported plans to seek national office, but has never squelched it and sometimes encouraged it.

Cuomo's announcement that he will run again for governor came less than 24 hours before the Democratic Party's nominating convention and 24 hours after the Liberal Party endorsed him as its 1990 gubernatorial candidate.

Although the governor's popularity has sunk from its record-high level of 77.1 percent in polls reported in January 1988, it hovers now around 60 percent, making Cuomo a formidable opponent in November.

His expected Republican opponent, Pierre Rinfret, is a political unknown and not a registered party member. Rinfret is an independent and supports abortion rights. On those grounds, some GOP leaders are talking about mounting a petition drive to force a Republican primary.

The disarray in the once-strong New York Republican Party could offset Cuomo's vulnerability on issues such as the state's budget problems and economic slowdown.

Similar woes prompted Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin and Connecticut Gov. William O'Neill to announce they would retire at the end of their terms in December.

NEW YORK (JUNE 3) UPI - Former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos left a hospital Sunday, saying she felt ''much better'' three days after she collapsed during her racketeering trial suffering from stomach pains and bleeding from the mouth.

Wearing a black dress covered with a black shawl, Marcos was brought out of New York Hospital-Cornell University Medical Center on the Upper East Side in a wheelchair shortly before noon.

A few feet away from her black Mercedes sedan, the heavily made-up Marcos stood up from the wheelchair and walked slowly to the car.

''I feel much better,'' she whispered as she sat in the back seat of the sedan.

Marcos, 60, collapsed Thursday during her racketeering trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, spitting up blood before she was carried from the courtroom on a stretcher. Her face pale and eyes closed, she was loaded into an ambulance with an oxygen mask over her mouth.

Marcos is being tried on charges that she and her late husband, former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, conspired to buy New York real estate, art and jewelry with $222 million stolen from their homeland.

After Marcos's collapse, Judge John Keenan recessed her trial until Tuesday.

Doctors diagnosed Marcos as suffering from erosive gastritis, an acid-related stomach condition that is not life-threatening, said Mary Cialone, a spokeswoman for New York Hospital-Cornell University Medical Center.

Erosive gastritis, in which the stomach lining is eroded, requires intravenous medication to suppress production of acid.

Cialone said Marcos's condition had stabilized by Sunday and she was released into the care of her personal physician.

The incident on Thursday was the third in which Marcos, who suffers from high blood pressure, has collapsed in court since her trial began April 3.

Dressed in her customary black, in mourning for her husband, Marcos had been sitting at the witness table listening to her trial lawyer, Gerry Spence, question an associate of her co-defendant, former Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi.

After Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella began his questioning, Marcos suddenly slumped over, her face flat on the table, as spectators gasped.

A Marcos attorney, John Bartko, said when Marcos collapsed, she murmured, ''No, no, no.'' Asked what she meant, he replied, ''She wanted the trial to go on. She didn't want this to happen to her.''

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 3) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev - the first Soviet leader to tour America's heartland in 31 years - arrived in Minnesota Sunday for a seven-hour visit, highlighted by talks with more than 140 top U.S. business leaders.

Gorbachev concluded four days of summit talks with President Bush, marked by progress in arms control and economic coopertion, and flew directly to Minneapolis for the frantic stopover. He was to fly on to California Sunday night.

The Soviet airliner touched down in a chilly, blowing rain at about 1:40 p.m. at the restricted military section of Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport.

Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, were welcomed by Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, and his wife, Lola, along with Sens. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., and Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., former Vice President Walter Mondale and others.

The Gorbachevs bounded down the steps from the airliner without overcoats and they quickly discovered it was a far cry from Washington's humid weather in the 80s.

In Minneapolis, the temperature was a chilly 47 degrees with winds blowing at 20 miles per hour, and occsional gusts reching 30 mph. Persistent rain had tapered off just before his arrival.

Despite this, Gorbachev - as has become his hallmark - walked away from his waiting Zil limousine and plunged into a crowd of about 50 Air Force reservists on the tarmac to shake hands and wave.

He then got into his car for the first item on the agenda, a luncheon at the governor's mansion in St. Paul, the twin city across the Mississippi River, with Perpich and his wife.

British publishing magnate Robert Maxwell was expected to be in attendance and to announce afterward details of a privately funded environmental institute that he will help set up in the Soviet Union.

Following the luncheon, Gorbachev's 42-car motorcade was scheduled to take a slow, winding tour down St. Paul's Summit Street, past the State Capitol and west on Interstate-94 to Minneapolis.

Police had expected hundreds of thousands of people to turn out along the motorcade route to greet the Gorbachevs, but the unpleasant weather was an unexpected factor that threatened to keep Minnesotans at home.

At the end of the motorcade tour, Gorbachev was to meet for more than an hour at a downtown Minneapolis hotel with more than 140 U.S. business and industry leaders, many of them among the most powerful and influential in the country, including Lee Iacocca of Chrysler and Roger Smith of General Motors and James Robinson III of American Express.

Gorbachev was expected to seek free-market money tips and to talk trade issues in an effort to improve the economic situation in the Soviet Union and his reform policy of perestroika.

Except for this, the stop was to be mostly a sightseeing trip.

While Gorbachev was addressing the business leaders, Mrs. Gorbachev and Mrs. Perpich were to visit the home of Steve and Karen Watson in Minneapolis, deemed by Minnesota state officials to be a typical American family.

Gorbachev, a former agriculture minister, was to visit a 650-acre dairy farm owned by Richard Brand in the rolling hills about 25 miles south of Minneapolis, and to stop by Control Data Corp. headquarters in suburban Bloomington to view new computers, which the Soviet Union has just purchased for use in civilian nuclear power plants.

He was to leave Minneapolis at about 8 p.m. for San Francisco. After a series of events in California on Monday, including a meeting with former President Ronald Reagan, he was scheduled to depart for Moscow.

Gorbachev is the first Soviet leader to visit America's heartland since Nikita Khrushchev toured Roswell Garst's Coon Rapids, Iowa, corn farm on Sept. 23, 1959.

The circumstances, however, were quite different. Khrushchev's visit came in the midst of the Cold War and the Soviet leader taunted his American hosts at times and boasted of the alleged supremacy of the communist system.

Gorbachev's trip comes at a time when East Europeans in unison have shed communist governments in favor of democracies and when the Soviet economy is in a downward spiral.

LONDON (JUNE 3) UPI - British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd said Sunday he hopes Britain and Iran will be able to resume normal relations but rejected calls to condemn Salman Rushdie's controversial novel ''The Satanic Verses.''

''I cannot, of course, condemn Mr. Rushdie or his book,'' Hurd said at a news conference during a visit to Jedda, Saudi Arabia. His comments were monitored in London.

''I can explain and gladly explain respect for Islam and also our reluctance and our wish not to have any quarrel or dispute either with Islam or with the government or people of Iran,'' he said.

Hurd's hopes for the resumption of normal relations with Iran were later echoed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher during a phone-in question program on the British Broadcasting Corp.

''It would seem that Iran would like to have talks,'' Thatcher said. ''I hope that it will lead to further talks to the restoration of diplomatic relations between Iran and our country.

''We have the greatest respect for Islam, the greatest possible respect,'' she said. ''We have been quite anxious to start talks once again to restore diplomatic relations but obviously we cannot do anything to hinder freedom of speech in this country.''

Hurd emphasized Britain's respect for Islam, saying he hoped the two countries could resume relations. But Hurd would not condemn Rushdie's novel, despite a news report which said top Iranian officials hinted they would lift the death sentence on the Indian-born British citizen if he did so.

Iran broke off diplomatic relations with Britain in March 1989, one month after the late Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini called for Rushdie's execution, saying ''The Satanic Verses'' blasphemed the Prophet Mohammed. Rushdie has remained in hiding under police protection ever since.

The Sunday Times newspaper quoted Iranian foreign ministry official Hussein Musavian as saying: ''If Douglas Hurd would make it clear that the government of the United Kingdom respects Islam and Muslims and condemns insults to Islam, which is what the Rushdie book did, the biggest obstacle to British-Iranian relations would be removed.''

The newspaper said Musavian suggested that such a statement from Britain could ''faciliate'' the release of British hostages held in Lebanon and might enable Iran to revoke the death sentence against Rushdie.

Musavian later told the Islamic Republic News Agency that the report of his alleged statement to the newspaper about Rushdie was a ''blatant distortion'' and said the death sentence was irrevokable.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Tornadoes tore through the Midwest last night, leaving vast destruction in their paths. Seven people died in Indiana and one in Illinois as a result of the violent weather. Hundreds more were injured as strong winds sucked homes off their foundations in both states. A tornadoe also hit Ohio, leveling a fast-food restaurant and injuring several people.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev shed their ties yesterday for the more relaxed atmosphere of Camp David. The two leaders discussed human rights in the Soviet Union and addressed regional issues. Gorbachev called the talks very constructive. But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush and Gorbachev continue to be divided about German reunification and Lithuanian independence.

President Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, will head to the nation's heartland later today. During his stay in Minnesota, the Soviet leader will meet with a host of business and agricultural leaders, including Lee Iacocca. As part of ''Gorby fever,'' a full-page message in the Minneapolis Star Tribune advises Minnesotans to ''iron their shirts'' before greeting Gorbachev. The ad features an iron-on decal displaying the U-S and Soviet flags under the words ''Welcome to Minnesota'' in Russian.

South Korean President Roh Tae Woo is on his way to San Francisco where he'll meet with Soviet leader Gorbachev tomorrow. Before leaving Seoul today, Roh noted the unprecedented and unusual nature of the meeting. He said he expected it to open a new era in South Korean and Soviet relations. South Korea and the Soviet Union have NOT had formal relations in the 42 years since South Korea was formed after World War Two. The Soviets are a close ally of North Korea.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The Supreme Court early today lifted a temporary stay of execution for convicted killer Thomas Baal, set for later this morning. Baal was convicted of killing a Las Vegas shuttle bus driver in 1988.

The man was NOT arrested... but was taken to a hospital for mental tests.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 3) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, whose summit successes with President Bush were played against problems at home, sought Sunday to deflect attention from his nation's internal difficulties until he returns to Moscow.

The problems, including an ailing economy and a challenge from maverick politician Boris Yeltsin, lingered like a dark cloud over Gorbachev throughout his four days of meetings with Bush.

Yeltsin was elected president of the Russian republic - centerpiece of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics - just as Gorbachev was leaving Moscow for his visit to Canada and the United States. A one-time Gorbachev protege, Yeltsin is a radical who has often criticized the Soviet leader for being to slow in his pursuit of economic and political reform.

Speaking at a summit-ending news conference, Gorbachev sought to minimize the impact of Yeltsin's election.

Gorbachev noted it took three ballots to elect the fiery reformer, who has been described in some Soviet press accounts as a bombastic buffoon but is considered by some Soviets to be the symbol of perestroika and glasnost at its most appealing.

''I don't think you have chosen the best place for clarifying our internal problems,'' Gorbachev chided a Soviet reporter who asked him about his relationship with Yeltsin.

But, the Soviet leader acknowledged: ''There is real life, there are certain processes under way back home.''

Gorbachev stressed ''there was no strong preponderance'' of opinion favoring Yeltsin in Congress of the Russian Republic.

''So the situation (of a near-impasse) remains. ... Comrade Yeltsin, with respect to some very serious, important political, fundamental issues has changed his position,'' Gorbachev said.

The Soviet leader said it remains unclear what proposals Yeltsin is truly advancing and suggested Yeltsin might be playing ''a political game.'' If not, Gorbachev said, Yeltsin's leadership role ''will certainly complicate'' perestroika, the restructuring of the Soviet economy.

''If this is nothing but a manuever and he will return to what he has been doing in recent years,'' Gorbachev said, Yelstin still ''went as far as to fertilize ... our efforts with some ideas, with ideas regarding forms of life where we are making a turnaround in all spheres.''

Yeltsin could emerge as a major challenger to Gorbachev's leadership based on popular discontent with the Soviet economy and its inability to supply consumer goods.

In his first days on the job, Yeltsin indicated he would continue to be a thorn in the side of Gorbachev and the central government's bureaucracy, saying he expected the Russian republic to pass a declaration of sovereignty even before Gorbachev's return Tuesday.

''This pyramid must be turned upside down,'' Yeltsin said of the centralized Soviet power structure.

At one point, he called on the whole Kremlin leadership to resign. He also suggested he would sign an independent trade agreement with Lithuania, currently suffering under a partial economic blockade by the Kremlin for its effort to separate from the Soviet Union.

At the same time, Yeltsin told a news conference after his election that he wanted a relationship with Gorbachev based ''not on confrontation, but on a business-like basis.''

NEDERLAND, CO (JUNE 3) UPI - Rescuers worked Sunday to recover the bodies of two British hikers who were killed when they were caught in a freak spring blizzard on 13,397-foot South Arapahoe Peak.

The bodies of the man and woman were located Saturday by members of the Rocky Mountain Rescue Group. Their identities were being withheld until relatives were notified, as was the name of a second man who survived the ordeal. All three were believed to be in their 20s.

A Boulder County sheriff's spokesman said the two men had enrolled at the University of Colorado-Boulder last August. The woman was a friend who had moved to Boulder last month.

Dixie Hutchinson, leader of the Boulder-based rescue group, said the three were experienced hikers, but did not carry adequate survival gear.

''I don't think these people were stupid,'' Hutchinson said. ''They were climbing too close to their ability, and a heck of a storm came along.''

The three spent Thursday night at the Fourth of July Campground west of Nederland, authorities said. On Friday morning, they climbed North Arapahoe Peak and were crossing a ridge to South Arapahoe Peak when they were hit by the snowstorm, carrying winds estimated at 100 mph.

They were trying to secure their equipment when one of the men fell head-first into a snow-filled gully. He fell about 1,000 feet down a snow field and his head hit a rock.

The other two continued their descent, but decided to spend the night in a sleeping bag when the woman became hypothermic, a sheriff's office statement said. The surviving man told authorities the woman was unresponsive and appeared dead when he awoke Saturday morning.

The survivor hiked out of the area and drove to Boulder, where he notified authorities at 8:40 a.m. Rescuers located the bodies about 200 yards apart in a gully between the two peaks.

AUBURN HILLS, MI (JUNE 3) UPI - Isiah Thomas scored 21 points and collected 11 assists Sunday in Detroit's all-out assault, sending the Pistons into the NBA championship series for the third straight year with a 93-74 victory over the Chicago Bulls in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference final.

The defending champion Pistons will meet the Portland Trail Blazers in the best-of-seven NBA final starting June 5 in Auburn Hills, Mich. The Trail Blazers, making their first final appearance in 13 years, defeated the Phoenix Suns 4-2 in the Western Conference championship.

The Pistons who won for the first time in five seventh-game appearances, held the Bulls to 28 of 90 shooting from the field. The Bulls lost despite 31 points from Michael Jordan as the home team won each game of the series.

The Pistons outscored the Bulls 8-2 to open the final period and build a 77-61 lead. Jordan twice hit baskets to bring Chicago within 11 points, the last time at 79-68 with 5:35 remaining, but the Bulls never were able cut the deficit to a single digit.

Detroit, which also received 15 points from Mark Aguirre, 14 from John Salley and 13 apiece from James Edwards and Dennis Rodman, outscored Chicago 14-6 to close the game.

Horace Grant added 10 points and 14 rebounds for Chicago. All-Star forward Scottie Pippen was held to just 2 points.

Jordan took over the third period, scoring 12 points and collecting 4 assists as the Bulls reduced a 22-point deficit to 69-59 entering the final period.

Thomas sank a 3-point shot to give the Pistons a 61-39 lead with 7:45 left. Jordan then started a 12-2 run with a jumper that brought the Bulls within 63-52 with 4:58 left. Stacey King hit a pair of free throws with 26 seconds left to bring the Bulls within 69-59.

The Pistons defense kicked in during the second quarter, holding the Bulls to just 6 points over the final 7:53. The Pistons outscored Chicago 21-6 over the final eight minutes to lead 48-33 at intermission.

The Bulls were held to 5 of 24 shooting from the field in the period, while the Pistons converted 14 of 17 shots.

As the Pistons defense dictated the tempo, Detroit was able to hold Chicago to just 14 points in the second. With each Chicago miss, the Pistons would push the ball up the court for an easy basket. The first quarter was a tense struggle as both teams threw up air balls and wild shots. Chicago converted 7 of 22 shots from the field and the Pistons 6 of 22.

The slow pace favored Detroit, which trailed 19-17 after one period. John Paxson, who re-sprained his left ankle in Game 6, was replaced by Craig Hodges. Hodges, who scored 19 points and hit 4 of 4 3-pointers in Game 6, had just 5 points, making 1 of 6 from 3-point range in the first half.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 3) UPI - Hard-line politician Ariel Sharon pressured acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir Sunday to create a narrow right-wing coalition as time began running out on the Likud Party leader's bid to form Israel's next government.

Shamir has had more than a month to form a government and his presidential mandate to do so ends Thursday.

Former Trade and Industry Minister Sharon, who resigned his post after a falling out with the Likud Party in February, said he believed if Shamir failed to form a Likud-led coalition the 74-year-old party leader should be replaced. Sharon said he saw himself as a candidate for the post.

But Sharon said he believed Shamir would form a narrow coalition without the rival Labor Party, despite commentary in Israeli newspapers Sunday that the country's next government would be another Likud-Labor ''national unity'' government.

''Mr. Shamir has the support of 61 members of Parliament without the slightest doubt,'' Sharon said. ''There is no reason at all to think about such a (national unity) government. It will be a mistake. It is the gravest thing that can happen.''

Israel's 120-member Parliament, the Knesset, is virtually split down the middle into camps supporting Labor and Likud. Shamir's task is to garner a majority of Knesset members to approve a vote of confidence in a coalition he forms.

But these efforts have been hampered by demands of small right-wing and religious parties whose support he needs.

The possibility also exists for a temporary coalition either led by Likud or governed by both major parties, with new elections in the coming months.

In a dispute over Shamir's rejection of a U.S. plan to begin Israeli-Palestinian talks, the prime minister fired Labor leader Shimon Peres from the Cabinet in March and triggered the collapse of Israel's second ''national unity'' coalition. Two days later, Shamir's government fell in a vote of no confidence orchestrated by the Labor Party.

On Sunday, Shamir met with Likud ministers to discuss the their strategy, including the possibility of a unity government, with less than a week to go before his mandate expires.

Army Radio reported the Likud ministers supported Shamir continuing his efforts to form a narrow government without Labor.

Peres, however, was unable to form a government and Shamir received a presidential mandate to try his hand at coalition negotiations.

Shamir has remained caretaker prime minister of a three-month-old transitional government faced with the nearly 30-month Palestinian uprising, increased friction with the United States and a wave of Soviet Jewish immigrants.

During the weekly Cabinet meeting Sunday, Israeli leaders discussed Wednesday's foiled attack on coastal resorts claimed by the Palestine Liberation Front, a hard-line faction with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Several ministers criticized the military decision against immediate evacuation of the Nizzanim beach where one of the guerrilla speedboats landed.

Israel Radio reported that Chief of Staff Dan Shomron told the Cabinet that PLO chief Yasser Arafat cannot shake off responsibility for the infiltration. The attempted attack has threatened the U.S.- PLO dialogue, which began after Arafat said he recognized Israel's existence and renounced terrorism in 1988.

During the Cabinet meeting, Shamir called on the United States to halt its dialogue with the PLO, which the government maintains has not ended violence against Israel. Shamir said an end to the U.S.-PLO dialogue was necessary ''in an effort to encourage moderate Palestinian elements to negotiate with Israel,'' a Cabinet communique said.

In the Israeli-occupied territories Sunday, Palestinians in the West Bank observed a general strike while shops in the Gaza Strip remained open. Gaza residents argued against Sunday's call for a strike because they had been under nearly two weeks of curfew after widespread Palestinian rioting sparked by the May 20 slayings of seven Gaza residents by an Israeli civilian.

Palestinian sources said five Palestinians were wounded during clashes with Israeli soldiers in the Gaza Strip Sunday.

(JUNE 3) UPI - A Chinese man defied extraordinary security measures in Tiananmen Square today, raised a protest banner and urged his countrymen to- quote- ''Rise up.'' Today's incident falls on the anniversary of last June's government crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators. Police detained the man and described him as mentally ill. Chinese authorities have blamed mental illness for every incidence of public protest during the past few months.

Convicted killer Thomas Baal is scheduled to be executed this morning by lethal injection at Nevada State Prison in Carson City. Baal's parents petitioned an appeals court, saying their 26-year-old son was NOT mentally competent to waive his appeal rights. The inmate says he wants to get the execution over with.

Police in Westminster, California, say a man driving along the San Diego Freeway shot and killed a woman in his car last night and then turned the gun on himself. PATERSON, NJ (JUNE 3) UPI - A deaf toddler whose parents were slain in March was expected to be the focus of a three-way custody battle in Passaic County.

A hearing in the case of 19-month-old Colleen Turzinski, who survived a week alone before authorities foud her in the Clifton apartment where her parents and grandfather were stabbed to death, was scheduled for Monday.

Police found Colleen among the decomposing bodies of her father, Kazimerz, 35, mother, Lee Kui Yin, 39; and grandfather, Mieczyslaw, 61. The three victims also were deaf.

Last week, George and Colleen Thomas, a deaf couple from Clifton who were close to the child and her family, went to the Superior Court Division of Family Court in Paterson to ask for the right to adopt the orphan.

Teresa Turzinski, the child's natural grandmother who came to the United States in April to bury her husband and son, remained to seek custody in the case. She plans to bring Colleen back to Poland to stay with her and an uncle. Both speak sign language.

And attorneys representing an aunt from Singapore have requested custody and are expected to attend Monday's hearing.

The Thomases have argued that the child would receive better care in the United States and that educational facilities for deaf children are superior to those available overseas.

But Susan Slaff, the state-appointed guardian for the child, said state law calls for the child's relatives from Poland and Singapore to be considered for custody.

''In a state case, the law is you try to keep the family together,'' Slaff said. ''In this case we have both aunts and uncles. There is really nothing to indicate that they are innaproppriate.

''There is nothing to indicate that we should consider legal strangers at this point. It has nothing to do with them (the Thomases) personally. The law says we have to consider the family first and there's just no reason why we should look outside the family at this point,'' Slaff said.

Superior Court Judge Carmen Ferrante, who will rule in the case, says there is little precedent for outsiders to become involved in custody proceedings between family members.

''The unique part is that these people who have applied for custody are not blood related,'' Ferrante said. ''They (the Thomases) are basing part of their application on the fact that they are part of the local deaf community, that they know sign language, and that it will be in the best interests of the child to stay in the United States.''

Police arrested a deaf friend of the Turzinskis shortly after the murder and charged him with stealing a video camera from the apartment. Abdul Qodooss, 25, an illegal Pakistani immigrant, is being held in Passaic County Jail on theft charges but has not been charged with murder in the case.

Police say Qodoos often baby-sat for Colleen.

Bush said some of the topics the two men discussed were ''tough ones,'' including the Lithuanian situation and the question of Germany's membership in NATO. But his overall assessment of the summit was upbeat, as was Gorbachev's. The Soviet leader spoke of ''a new phase of co-operation'' between the two nations.

Earlier today, Gorbachev and President Bush wrapped up their four-day summit with a White House news conference. NO agreement was reached on the Lithuanian situation or on the question of Germany's membership in NATO- two issues that have divided the two leaders. But they said they now understand each other better, even if disagreements persist. Bush praised the ''spirit of candor'' that characterized the talks, and Gorbachev said the summit re-inforced his view that Bush is ''the kind of person to do business with, to build Soviet President Gorbachev visits Minneapolis today, and tonight he's to go to San Francisco. Tomorrow, Gorbachev meets with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo in San Francisco, for the first summit between leaders of the two nations. Today, Roh left Seoul for the summit. (JUNE 3) UPI - George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev call their summit a success, despite differences... students protest in Beijing on the first anniversary of the Tiananmen Square massacre... and tornadoes leave nine dead in the Midwest. Those and other top stories, next, from U-P-I.

Soviet President Gorbachev hailed four days of meetings with President Bush, saying they fostered greater understanding between the world's two superpowers.

Speaking at a news conference today at the White House, Gorbachev said his conversations with Bush since Thursday allow the two sides to speak- in his words- ''of a new phase of co-operation.''

Bush agreed with his Soviet counterpart by saying the U-S-Soviet relationship has come- in his words- ''a long way from the depths of the Cold War.''

It remains to be seen what additional concrete steps will stem from the Washington summit. Major developments during the just-completed sessions include a chemical weapons treaty and a U-S-Soviet trade accord.

The trade pact must still be O-K'd by the Senate, where its passage could be stymied by Moscow's reluctance to loosen the reins on Lithuania's bid for freedom.

The two sides also reported progress on cutting nuclear arms.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The Nevada convict who repeatedly refused his right to appeal his death sentence got his wish today.

Thomas ''Scrappydoo'' Baal died early this morning by lethal injection at the Nevada State Prison at Carson City.

Baal's parents had fought to get the exectution postponed, claiming that Baal was mentally incompetent and should NOT be allowed the right to waive his appeal. He was convicted of killing a Las Vegas bus driver in 1988.

The execution was stayed twice last week by the 9th U-S Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

But late last night, the U-S Supreme Court voted 5-4 to cancel the stay of execution, yielding to Baal's pleas to be allowed to die.

Baal spent his final night on the telephone talking to friends and praying. His last meal included pizza with anchovies, apple pie, chocolate ice cream and jelly donuts.

Before he died, Baal turned to witnesses and said that he loved them.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The Sunday Afrikaans newspaper reports that South African President Frederick de Klerk may relax, or even lift a four-year-old state of emergency.

The decree has been a major stumbling block during power-sharing talks between the white ruling government and black nationalists.

News that it might be lifted comes on the eve of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela's departure on a 45-day world tour to encourage fresh support for economic sanctions against Pretoria.

The emergency decree was imposed in January 1986 during widespread anti-government rioting. It gave police sweeping powers that led to thousands of arrests and sharp curbs on news media and political freedoms.

The state of emergency is scheduled to lapse on Saturday.

The newspaper report says at that time, de Klerk will scrap most, if NOT all of the emergency decree.

Tomorrow is the official one-year anniversary of the death of Iran's former spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini , who died last year on the night between June 3rd and June 4th.

But huge crowds chose today to gather around Khomeini's glass-enclosed tomb about 10 miles south of Tehran.

Medics and ambulances stood by as throngs of breast-beating mourners withstood 100-degree temperatures to honor the man who led the Islamic revolution that toppled the late Shah Mohammed Pahlavi .

Iranian officials say nearly three-Million people are expected to attend ceremonies tomorrow.

A week and a half ago, Iran's president said efforts must be made to ensure that the memory of Khomeini is preserved.

(JUNE 3) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev say trust is the cornerstone of new Soviet-U-S relations. The world leaders this morning wrapped up four days of talks, with each labeling the summit a success. But the two superpowers still are far apart on German re-unification and Baltic independence. Gorbachev is in Minneapolis this afternoon and leaves for San Francisco tonight.

Two separate highway accidents in France today claimed the lives of 14 British nationals. French police say 11 British tourists were killed when the double-level bus in which they rode blew a tire and overturned. Officials say two teen-agers and their mother were killed in another crash when the mother apparently fell asleep at the wheel and plowed into a safety barrier.

Hundreds of students at China's Beijing University today marched in memory of pro-democracy demonstrators who were killed last year during the Tiananmen Square massacre. Police and troops armed with automatic weapons have thrown a net of security over the city to stop more protests before they start.

Cities worldwide are planning rallies to commemorate the anniversary of the Tiananmen Square crackdown. In Hong Kong... which the People's Republic of China will re-claim in 1997... thousands of demonstrators marched today calling for democracy in China and the resignation of Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng.

Philippine First Lady Imelda Marcos is out of the hospital. Marcos collapsed Thursday during her trial in a U-S District Court in Manhattan. She was carried from the the courtroom and doctors later said she was suffering from inflammation of the stomach lining. Marcos says she's feeling ''much better'' now.

New York Governor Mario Cuomo announced today that he'll seek a third-term at the helm of his state. The 57-year-old Democrat, whose name has come up repeatedly for national office, made his decision public less than one day before his party's nominating convention. Cuomo currently has a nearly 60-percent popularity rating.

South African Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu today called for an independent Palestinian state, saying injustice is deplorable wherever it occurs. Tutu made his comments at commencement exercises at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. He did NOT deny Israel's right to exist, but said the Middle East issue WON'T go away until Palestinians are allowed self-determination.

Czechoslovakia's interior minister says yesterday's bomb blast in a busy public square in downtown Prague is probably linked to next weekend's elections. One top-ranking official went so far as to blame the disgruntled former members of the secret police for the blast, which injured 19 people.

Canadian officials today are grappling with a constitutional impasse that could result in the cutting of ties between English-speaking Canada and French-speaking Quebec. At stake is approval of the Meech Lake Accord, a proposed constitutional amendment that allows Quebec to preserve its French heritage.

The first-ever meeting of the so-called G-15 group of developing nations came to a close today in Malaysia. The general conclusion reached at the inaugural summit of the Group of 15 is that steps must be taken to reduce the problem of international debt that Third World countries face. Leaders also called for grater dialogue with industrialized lands.

(JUNE 3) UPI - President Bush and his Soviet counterpart, Mikhail Gorbachev , parted paths today after four days of talks in the nation's capital. At a summit-concluding news conference, both men admitted differences remain between them. But they declared the U-S-Soviet relationship is positive and offers the superpowers the chance to stabilize the world's unfolding political structure.

After concluding today's news conference, Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, headed to Minnesota for a short visit. Once in the nation's heartland, the Soviet leader did NOT disappoint the crowds who turned out to greet him. As his lengthy motorcade made its way toward the governor's mansion in St. Paul, Gorbachev hopped out of his limousine to mingle with the throng.

A several-thousand-strong security contingent could NOT suppress the pro-democratic hopes of hundreds of students at Beijing University today. The outburst by the bottle-breaking, chanting students marked the first anniversary of last year's anti-democratic crackdown. It's now Monday in China and the protesting students have dispersed. But Chinese officials say they'll punish those responsible.

Residents of Indiana face a major clean-up after a series of killer tornados whipped through the state overnight. Officials say eight people died and at least 200 others were injured in the storms, which caused widespread damage. Twisters terrorized much of the Midwest yesterday... reportedly sucking homes from their foundations and toppling countless utility poles.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Hundreds of Lebanese Christians... wearied by years of war... marched today to protest renewed fighting between rival Christian groups in east Beirut. A truce between General Michel Aoun and his rival, Lebanese Forces militia leader Samir Geagea, ruptured this morning when an 11-year-old girl was killed in a bomb blast in her home. More than one-thousand people been killed in fighting since January.

Senior Israeli Likud Party member Ariel Sharon says his conservative party should dismiss plans to form a coalition government with the Labor Party. Sharon, who resigned a Likud cabinet ministerial post in February, says current Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir should be replaced if he fails to create a right-wing coalition. Sharon says he views himself as a likely candidate to replace Shamir as prime minister.

Greece's prime minister is on his way to the United States for a week-long visit, which includes a meeting with President Bush. Constantine Mitsotakis is the first Greek prime minister to visit Washington in 26 years. He and Bush are expected to put the finishing touches on a new agreement to extend the U-S lease of two key military bases on the Greek island of Crete.

The King of Norway... the world's oldest reigning monarch... is reported to be in unstable condition following a stroke. Doctors in Oslo say 86-year-old King Olav is now partially paralyzed and he might NOT survive. Norway's national news agency says the country's crown prince... the next in line for the throne... is holding a vigil by his father's bedside.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The Washington summit drew to a close today without a hitch. Although President Bush and his Soviet counterpart, Mikhail Gorbachev , say differences continue to exist between the two superpowers, they also agree U-S-Soviet relations are generally positive. Also, Gorbachev revealed at the summit-closing news conference that he may curtail the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel if the Soviet Jews are settled in Israeli-occupied territories.

Gorbachev has been touted as a man of the people because of his tendency to halt his motorcades to mingle with pedestrians. But it does NOT appear as if the Soviet president will do this in San Francisco, where he'll arrive later tonight. Observers say Gorbachev's 22-hour visit is aimed at fostering a positive relationship with bigwigs in the high-tech Silicon Valley.

New York police estimate a crowd of one-thousand people gathered at the Chinese consulate today. The group voiced their opposition to China's government, which one year ago tomorrow deployed troops and tanks to crush a fledgling democratic movement. Many in the chanting crowd sported black arm bands to symbolically mourn the deaths of hundreds if NOT thousands of people mowed down in last year's Tiananmen Square massacre.

Indiana's National Guard is cleaning up after as many as eight tornadoes roared through the state overnight... killing at least eight people and injuring 200 others. Seven people died in southern Indiana alone, which was particularly hard hit by the series of storms. Illinois local and state officials are sizing up the damage after fierce winds and tornadoes ripped through, killing one woman.

(JUNE 3) UPI - A National Law Journal study says many defense lawyers in death penalty cases are underpaid, inexperienced and unprepared for trial... especially in the South, where most death sentences are handed out. The study found defense lawyers in death penalty cases doN'T make enough money to fight well-heeled prosecutors. The results prompted researchers to dub the south ''The Death Belt.''

The Coast Guard says a fire-plagued cruiseship can sail again after its crew completes a list of repairs. The Regent Star has been docked in Philadelphia since Wednesday after an electrical fire caused it to run aground in the Delaware Bay earlier in the week. Another fire... which investigators say was deliberately set... broke out Friday. The ship was set to sail tonight.

It appears the relaxation of international tensions has lead the Kremlin to announce it will experiment with a volunteer military force. The Soviet defense minister made the decison public today in the army newspaper. The recruitment plan will reportedly be phased in during the next few years, with the navy being the first branch to try the experiment.

Iranians are remembering spiritual leader Ayatollah Khomeini on the first anniversary of his death. Thousands of mourners gathered today at Khomeini's glass-encased tomb and many are even camping out on the site 10 miles south of Tehran. Observers say huge circles of weeping men surround the gravesite as medics and ambulances stand by to help heat-stricken mourners.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev visits Minnesota after wrapping up the summit with President Bush in Washington earlier today...

The aftermath of severe weather in the Midwest...

And, thousands rally worldwide to remember the Tiananmen Square massacre...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev took his show on the road today and headed to the American heartland. And, as was the case in Washington, Gorbachev displayed the astuteness of an American politician by hopping from his car to greet people lined up along the route of his motorcade.

Gorbachev's trademark handshaking ritual occurred as he headed to the Minnesota governor's mansion in St. Paul. It started off a frenzied seven-hour sidetrip on a leisurely pace.

The centerpiece of Gorbachev's visit was a luncheon involving more than 140 U-S business and industry leaders. Among those in attendance were some of the country's most powerful individuals.

More of the same is expected tomorrow during Gorbachev's San Francisco visit. He flies to California tonight.

Observers on the West Coast say the Soviet leader will focus on how to help his country's aching economy rather than performing crowd-pleasing feats. On tap for Gorbachev are visits with the high-tech region's corporate, business and academic leaders.

A professor of Soviet economics at the University of California at Berkeley says the Soviet delegation created an itinerary which allows them to- quote- ''meet people who have standing and power and can do something for them.''

Another Berkeley scholar says of Gorbachev's trip that the Soviet leader is- quote- ''NOT a sociologist. He's here as the head of state in economic crisis.''

Earlier in the day, Gorbachev and President Bush termed their four days of meetings a success. The two admitted differences exist between the superpowers, but they say the current U-S-Soviet relationship is conducive to keeping the world situation stable.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Indiana's National Guard is patrolling southern sections of the state hard hit by tornadoes that ripped across four Midwestern states during the night... killing nine people and injured hundreds of others.

Indiana's governor has declared a state of emergency... ordering National Guard troops in to prevent looting and provide medical assistance... after an amazing 44 tornadoes roared through last night.

The storms in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky reportedly sucked homes off their foundations, blew over tractor-trailers and toppled countless power lines... cutting electricity to thousands of homes in the Midwest.

Eight people died in Indiana, seven of them in the southern part of the state. Tornadoes in Illinois killed one more person.

And the Weather Service says the weather isN'T letting up either.

A funnel cloud was sited near Lafayette, Indiana, this afternoon as thunderstorms and high winds raked the state for a second day. The severe weather uprooted trees, downed power lines and is blamed for an 18-vehicle accident near South Bend. NO serious injuries are reported.

Tomorrow marks the first anniversary of the Tiananmen Square massacre. Last year, on June 4th, Chinese troops rolled into the Beijing plaza and killed several hundred pro-democracy demonstrators.

Since that time, the aging Chinese government has squelched attempts to protest its authoritarian rule. Until today, that is.

Several hundred students at Beijing University defied a massive security presence and staged the first major demonstration since troops fired on protesters last June.

The sentiment expressed in China was repeated throughout the world, as thousands of people commemorated the bloody crackdown.

In Sydney, Australia, seven-thousand people gathered to memorialize the students who died as they tried to force their government to reform.

The national coordinator of protests in Australia says an all-night vigil will be held outside the new Chinese Embassy in Canberra. Demonstrators are slated to light candles throughout the night.

Protest rallies were held in dozens of U-S cities, including New York, Chicago, Seattle and Boston.

(JUNE 3) UPI - A deaf toddler whose parents were slain in New Jersey three months ago is now the focus of a three-way custody battle.

19-month-old Colleen Turzinski was found alone in her Clifton, New Jersey, apartment one week after her parents and grandfather were killed.

Tomorrow, a Passaic County judge will hear testimony from Turzinski's grandmother from Poland, an aunt from Singapore and family friends- all of whom want to adopt the girl.

George and Colleen Thomas, a deaf couple from Clifton who were close to the child and her family, last week went to the Superior Court Division of Family Court in Paterson to ask the court to award them custody.

They say the deaf child will be better off in the United States, where she will receive better care and education.

But the child's grandmother... who speaks sign language... wants to take the toddler back to Poland.

And now attorneys representing an aunt from Singapore have asked to adopt the girl as well.

The American Cancer Society wants people to know that NOT everyone who has cancer dies from it.

The institute today heralded the estimated six-Million Americans who have managed to beat the deadly disease as it hosted what it called ''Survivors' Day'' in Atlanta.

Hundreds of cancer survivors, including actor Jack Klugman, gathered at the society's headquarters for a tree-planting ceremony designed to boost the morale of sufferers and remind people of the benefits of early detection.

Other survivors from around the country were represented at the event by sending cards telling of their succesful battles with the disease.

An institute statement says that today, one of out every two people survive cancer... compared with one out of five people 50 years ago.

(JUNE 3) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev will fly to San Francisco tonight from Minnesota, where he thrilled another crowd by climbing from his limousine to mingle. The Soviet president ended his second summit with President Bush earlier today in Washington.

Both leaders ended their four days of discussions by hailing their ability to talk, despite disagreements. As Bush described current superpower relations- ''We've come a long, long way from the depths of the Cold War.''

Canadian Prime Minister Mulroney says a constitutional impasse is threatening a united Canada. Political leaders in Ottawa are trying to settle the dispute that could lead to an attempt at secession by Quebec.

As many as 50-thousand protesters marched in Hong Kong today, chanting slogans that urged democracy in China. The protest was one of many around the world marking the massacre in Beijing a year ago tomorrow.

Tornadoes tore into East Texas this evening... causing extensive damage in the town of Jacksonville. Police say buildings were damaged, trees were uprooted and most of the town's 12-thousand residents were left without power.

(JUNE 3) UPI - The superpower summit ended today in Washington with Presidents Bush and Gorbachev admitting sore points remain between the two sides. But unlike most previous U-S-Soviet meetings, it is NOT just the U-S leader potentially facing criticism for actions taken or NOT taken. Gorbachev also faces this prospect when he returns home. In large part, this new aspect to Soviet politics rests in the form of newly elected Russian republic President Boris Yeltsin... who ultimately could pose a threat to Gorbachev's tenure as president.

Gorbachev responded to criticism by Arab states today when he declared Moscow may curtail the immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel unless Israel assures him it will NOT settle the emigres in Israeli-occupied territories. Gorbachev revealed the possible policy at a summit-ending news conference. President Bush agreed with his Soviet counterpart that Israel should allow NO new settlements in the occupied territories.

Indiana was one of several states dealing with more severe weather today. Police say an eight-year-old boy was crushed to death by a tree downed in West Lafayette. Two other people were injured- one critically- when the winds blew into a Clinton County park in the west-central part of the state. Tornadoes also hit East Texas today, causing extensive damage in Jacksonville. In southern Indiana, National Guard troops patrolled parts hard hit by twisters overnight that killed nine people- eight in Indiana and one in Illinois. Severe thunderstorm warnings remained tonight for Indiana, Kentucky and the Middle Atlantic states.

Students at China's Beijing University today staged a raucous anti-government protest on campus to mark the anniversary of the Tiananmen massacre. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Santa Anita Realty Enterprises Inc. (NYSE:SAR) announced Monday that it has closed escrow on its downtown Pasadena office building, jointly owned with Halferty Development Co., for a cash purchase price of $33 million.

Located at 200 S. Los Robles, the building is being purchased by Tohshin International Corp. Construction of the building was completed in February 1989.

''Santa Anita received an unsolicited and very favorable offer to sell the building. After careful review, the sale was judged to be in the best interests of the partnership and Santa Anita and its shareholders, especially considering the current softness in the office rental market,'' said Royce B. McKinley, chairman and chief executive.

''While we are confident that the property will generate good returns for the buyer over the long term, the purchase offer represents an extremely attractive opportunity that cannot be ignored,'' he added. McKinley said the building is currently about 65 percent leased.

The Santa Anita Companies comprise Santa Anita Realty Enterprises Inc., and Santa Anita Operating Co.

Santa Anita Realty Enterprises, one of the nation's leading self-adminstered, equity-oriented real estate investment trusts, owns the Santa Anita racetrack property; a 50 percent interest in the operation of Santa Anita Fashion Park; a 32.5 percent interest in Towson Town Center, a major regional shopping center near Baltimore; an interest in an industrial park; three apartment projects; three office buildings and a number of neighborhood shopping centers.

Santa Anita Operating Co. conducts thoroughbred horse racing at Santa Anita Park through its subsidiary, the Los Angeles Turf Club Inc. The shares of the two Santa Anita companies trade on a paired basis on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol ''SAR.''

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - In response to growing market opportunity for low-cost 10BASE-T connectivity, SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SNPX) Monday announced it has lowered the list price of its LattisNet Model 408 10BASE-T Host Module 42 percent from $1,725 to $1,000.

Pricing of other LattisNet products is uneffected.

SynOptics' new pricing strategy for the Model 408 10BASE-T Host Module establishes a lower cost of entry for customers who require basic Ethernet connectivity solutions for local area networks (LANs) of 20 to 100 nodes or more. This strategy also reduces the overall cost of implementing 10BASE-T Ethernet LANs with LattisNet 1000-series intelligent wiring concentrators.

While the worldwide market for Ethernet is expected to grow about 35 percent in 1990 over 1989, unshielded twisted-pair Ethernet is expected to nearly double over last year, according to International Data Corp., a Framingham, Mass.-based market research firm.

The Model 408 is a modular option for SynOptics' 1000-series concentrators for Ethernet connectivity and network management. Eight RJ-45 modular receptacles on the Model 408 provide 10BASE-T Ethernet connections. Small networks of 16 to 24 10BASE-T nodes can be created cost-effectively using the Model 1010 concentrator.

A configuration using 10BASE-T modules in all available slots of a Model 1000 concentrator creates a 64-node Ethernet LAN. Concentrators can also be interconnected in a hierarchical star topology to build larger network configurations.

10BASE-T, which is expected to become an IEEE standard, governs the transmission of 10 Megabit-per-second (Mb/s) Ethernet over ordinary telephone wire (unshielded twisted pair). 10BASE-T networks are configured in a star topology, which provides inherent managebility through a central point of control. This means isolating and correcting faults can be achieved in a minimum amount of time.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy which incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

FREMONT, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - U.S. Marine Corps pilots are using rugged, 12-pound laptop computers made by GRiD Systems Corp. to program mission data into onboard computers providing information to AV-8B Harrier II jet attack aircraft pilots.

By using the laptops, the pilots are able to get the vertical takeoff Harriers into the air faster, saving fuel and valuable time they would otherwise lose on the ground manually programming the Harrier's onboard computer.

The computer significantly reduces mission planning time, resulting in faster response to calls from Marines for Harrier support.

The AV-8B Harrier II provides close air support for Marine Corps operations. While on the ground preceding a mission, pilots use GRiD laptops to encode flight information including data related to engine performance, takeoff fuel and weight calculations, target sites, weapons data and flight route. The data is then transferred from the laptops into a black box device called a Data Storage Unit, or DSU.

The DSU is carried aboard the aircraft, where it is connected to the Harrier's onboard computer via a specially designed MIL-STD 1553B avionics bus interface.

Prior to the mission, the Harrier onboard computer that governs the aircraft's avionics is initialized by feeding it data on the course, current barometric pressure and latitude and longitude coordinates from the DSU.

Pilots can also store information for a given mission on a floppy diskette using GRiD's standard 3.5-inch, 1.4MB floppy drive.

The Harrier's jet engine, which has to be running while the computer is programmed, would consume precious fuel during the time formerly required for manual programming of the onboard computers.

Kraft said the battery-powered GRiDCASE 1530 computer, based on the Intel 80386 microprocessor, gives the Marine Corps the capability to program Harrier missions from virtually any location. This is an important benefit, Kraft explained, because the Harrier is designed to operate in battle areas where landing strips and ground support facilities are usually not available.

GRiD is a wholly owned subsidiary of Tandy Corp. (NYSE:TAN), Fort Worth, Texas. Tandy is a leading manufacturer and distributor of consumer electronics and computers. Tandy has sales in excess of $4 billion annually.

CANOGA PARK, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The five restaurants in the Mission Burritos/Sierras Restaurants group are using new Sharp 3310 cash registers replete with a sophisticated system of inventory controls, according to Bret Doherty, general manager of the corporation.

The network of point-of-sale systems that feeds information to the central computer for analysis was installed by Western Data Systems of Santa Barbara, Doherty said.

"This remarkable system, which links all our restaurants to our corporate offices here in Canoga Park, helps us maintain an inventory of produce, for example, that always is completely fresh," Doherty said.

He continued: "We are able to analyze the needs of all five restaurants from here and to purchase at volume discount. The system enables us to buy meat, produce and other items in such a way that we save money without sacrificing quality.

"Our prices always have been competitive, but this gives us the capacity to strengthen our competitive position by allowing us to pass savings on to our own customers in the form of menu enhancements or price reductions." The system provides for inventory control and analytical pricing, Doherty said, and it helps eliminate waste.

"Mission Burritos/Sierras Restaurants have used Sharp registers for a long time," said Duane Pushkaric, Western Data Systems account manager. He continued: "Doherty and Reagan Jaramillo, who owns the corporation, chose to upgrade with Sharp for several reasons. They like the large keyboard, for example, because it will accommodate the entire menu for each restaurant, helping the cashier take orders; they also like the remote printers in the kitchens. These two features speed all their operations."

In addition, Pushkaric said, a computer interfaces with cash registers in these restaurants, providing cost analysis and menu-engineering possibilities for restaurant and corporate management.

He continued: "The critical point here is that all of the major groups - the National Restaurant Association, the California Restaurant Association - and The Nation's Restaurant News, a publication at the forefront of this industry, have indicated that the gravy times of 1980 are over and project growth in this industry will be at less than two percent for the coming years.

"So it is critical that if a restaurateur is going to have a profitable restaurant - and that is what restaurateurs are in business for - then they have to have control over their inventory and over what they charge for food. With the systems they use, owners and managers of restaurants such as Mission Burritos/Sierras have that control.

DENVER (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Natural Fuels Corp., the first full-service alternative transportation motor fuel company in the United States, opened its ''pumps'' Monday for business.

The event marks the company's commercial entry into the $100 billion annual transportation fuels market. The company will sell compressed natural gas (CNG), which they have branded Natural (TM), directly to the public.

President of Natural Fuels Corp., Rajeana Gable, and vice president, Paul Nelson, outlined the mission of the new company at ceremonies held at the corporation's first public Natural service station located at Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

Natural Fuels Corp., incorporated in Colorado, is the joint effort of Public Service Co. of Colorado, Colorado Interstate Gas Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of the Coastal Corp., and Julander Platt Nelson Inc. of Denver. Together the three shareholders have made a multi-million dollar long-term commitment to the venture.

Assistant Secretary of Conservation and Renewable Energy with the Department of Energy, J. Michael Davis was present to congratulate Natural Fuels Corp.'s forward thinking as they outlined plans to establish a national network of public and fleet dedicated CNG fueling stations.

Recently the Colorado Department of Health and Public Service Co. conducted an emissions test on six vehicles converted to run on either natural gas or gasoline. The test showed that when running on natural gas the vehicle emitted virtually no particulates and 97 percent less carbon monoxide than when powered by gasoline.

The test further showed 39 percent lower oxides of nitrogen, 24 percent lower carbon dioxide, and 72 percent fewer reactive hydrocarbon emissions. The reductions are significant because these categories of emissions cause the most serious air pollution problems in urban areas.

The cost of converting a gasoline vehicle to natural gas ranges between $2,000-$3,500 depending on vehicle size and/or fuel storage requirements. Natural Fuels Corp. anticipates that automobile and truck manufacturers, which are involved in natural gas research, development and demonstration projects, will begin offering models that are engineered to run solely on CNG in the near future. Some engines will be commercially available as early as next year.

Currently there are more than 30,000 NGVs operating in the United States. The majority of these vehicles are operated by school district bus systems gas utilities and other large fleet operators such as Disneyland, where NGVs transport millions of visitors annually. CNG has been used as a motor transportation fuel since the 1930's and is widely used in such countries as Italy, New Zealand and Canada with a world population of 700,000 NGVs.

SEATTLE (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Two major Pacific Northwest electronic banking networks -- The Exchange and ACCEL -- have agreed, in principle, to merge before year-end, culminating discussions which began several years ago.

The announcement was made jointly Monday by Richard W. Brandt, executive vice president, Security Pacific Automation Co. and chairman of ACCEL, and Gerald J. Pittenger, president and chief executive officer, Great Western Bank, a Savings Bank, and chairman of The Exchange.

''With 2,892 ATMs in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Alaska and the western Canadian provinces operating from one network, this merger will provide more convenience, increased availability and less confusion for our customers,'' said Pittenger.

Brandt said that final details of the merger will be worked out during the next 120 days. ''We're fortunate in that The Exchange and ACCEL have operated out of a common data center and with a common management group for some time now, so many details involved in a merger of this type already have been addressed,'' he said.

Thomas M. Bass has been appointed president and chief executive officer of the new organization. ''Tom has managed both networks in the past. He is very familiar with the people, technology, products and boards of both The Exchange and ACCEL,'' said Brandt.

Formed in 1972 as a cooperative venture between 30 financial institutions headquartered in Washington and Oregon, The Exchange provides electronic banking-related products and services as well as data processing services. In addition, The Exchange operates an ATM network with more than 2,000 ATMs with over 250 participating financial institutions in Alaska, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and the western Canadian provinces.

ACCEL is a network of nearly 50 Pacific Northwest financial institutions formed in 1984 for the purpose of sharing ATMs and point-of-sale (POS) terminals. ACCEL currently has nearly 2,000 ATMs and 357 POS terminals in Alaska, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Medco Research Inc. (NASDAQ:MEDR) (BSE:MRE.B) Monday announced that the lawsuit recently filed against Dr. William C. Govier, the company's former director of research and medical affairs, and the company by two of the company's shareholders has been dismissed without prejudice by the plaintiffs.

This action was taken unilaterally by the plaintiffs and did not involve any payment to the plaintiffs or any other concessions on the part of the company.

In previously disclosing this lawsuit, the company stated that it believed the company had not engaged in any wrongdoing. The unilateral dismissal of this lawsuit supports the company's position with respect to this matter.

Medco is engaged in the development of a number of new prescription drugs targeted primarily for the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular diseases. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - DEP Corp. (NASDAQ:DEPC) Monday reported sales gains for the third quarter and nine months of fiscal 1990.

Net sales for the three months ended April 30 were $24,518,000, up 6 percent from sales of $23,097,000 for the third quarter a year ago. For the nine-month period, sales were $77,766,000, up 15 percent from $67,654,000 in 1989. If discontinued product line sales of $2.4 million are excluded from prior year, the nine-month sales increase is 19 percent.

Third-quarter net income was $302,000, or 5 cents per share, up from $107,000, or 2 cents per share, for the same period a year ago. For the nine months, net income was $1,256,000, or 22 cents per share, compared with $2,060,000, or 35 cents per share.

Robert Berglass, president and chairman, said that the lower net income for fiscal 1990 reflects the effect of increased sales of products returning narrower profit margins. Profits were also affected by higher selling and delivery expenditures associated with new product introductions.

Berglass further stated that the nine-month increase of 19 percent over comparable sales was achieved in spite of a very competitive retail environment, compounded by declining unit growth in the health and beauty aids industry.

DEP manufactures, markets and distributes a wide variety of personal care products which are sold through drug stores, supermarkets and mass merchandisers. Its trademarked hair, oral and skin care product brands include DEP, L.A. Looks, Topol, Lavoris, Cuticura, Natures Family, Porcelana, Bantron and DietAyds.

BURLINGAME, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - San Mateo Financial Corp. (SMFC), whose principal subsidiary is Great Pacific Bank, s.s.b., announced that earnings for the first quarter ended Mar. 31, were $295,430, compared with a loss of $10,149 for the first quarter of the previous year.

The net earnings (loss) per share for the quarter ended Mar. 31, 1989 was (1 cent) which was calculated on 1,095,619 weighted average number of shares of SMFC common stock which were outstanding as of that date.

The net earnings (loss) per share for the quarter ended Mar. 31, 1990 was 17 cents, calculated on 1,773,619 weighted average number of shares of SMFC common stock then outstanding.

In August of 1989 SMFC experienced a change of control. The officers of the restructured organization are Mark A. Speizer, chairman; Howard L. Herman, vice chairman; Michael A. Heren, president; and R. Craig Pica, executive vice president.

The first quarter of 1990 interest rate spread between cost of funds and yield on investments was 2.475 percent, up from 1.59 percent for the first quarter of 1989, an increase of 56 percent.

Great Pacific Bank, s.s.b., has undertaken a lending strategy of concentrating on single-family residential construction loans, short-term residential loans and conventional residential loans.

The first quarter loss in 1989 was largely attributed to increases in reserves for, or charge offs of, non-residential loans intitially funded prior to September 1, 1988, and write downs of income taken in prior periods because loans paid off prior to maturity.

The first quarter profit in 1990 was partly attributable to operating and other income and partly a Federal Tax benefit under FASB 96. The reduction in the number of problem loans, increased revenues produced by the company's current increase in net interest rate spreads and lending strategy have resulted in a significant positive change in the company's earnings in this quarter.

Great Pacific Bank, s.s.b., currently meets all three of the current key capital ratios promulgated under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery & Enforcement Act. Other significant financial data follows.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. Monday previewed PostScript Level 2, the next generation of its industry-standard PostScript technology.

PostScript Level 2 is the first major new release of PostScript software since it was introduced over five years ago. Integrated into Adobe's total system solution for printing and display environments, the new release will offer improved performance.

It is also easier for software developers to use and adds important new functionality. PostScript Level 2 consolidates extensions to the current PostScript language and adds such new features as improved forms handling, color support and pattern manipulation.

PostScript Level 2 is one component of a total systems solution Adobe is assembling to enhance performance in printing and display environments.

Adobe has improved the performance of PostScript Level 2 by optimizing the implementation of the PostScript interpreter, incorporating techniques that reduce time of transmission for PostScript language programs, and adding new graphics and text operators optimized for performance.

In addition, Adobe is taking two other steps to improve the performance of PostScript devices -- writing systems-level drivers and developing controllers.

Adobe is writing drivers for the Macintosh, Windows 3.0 and OS/2 environments that take full advantage of the features and performance enhancements in PostScript Level 2 printers as well as enhancing the performance of existing PostScript devices. The drivers will reduce printing time and include extensive support for printer-specific features, such as multiple paper trays and duplex printing.

The company is also developing new controllers based on the latest RISC technology to take advantage of the speed and processing power of RISC microprocessors.

Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry-standard page description language for electronic printing and publishing and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics software component for computer displays. In addition, the company develops and markets the Adobe Type Library and a line of application software products including Adobe Illustrator 88, Adobe Type Manager and Adobe Photoshop. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Ralphs Grocery Co. Monday announced first-quarter results.

Net sales for the first quarter -- 12 weeks ended April 22, 1990 -- were $620.9 million, an increase of 8.5 percent from sales of the previous first quarter. Comparable store sales (excluding the large stores over 60,000 square feet) increased 6.7 percent from the first quarter of the prior year.

Operating cash flow for the first quarter was $52.9 million, a rate of 8.5 percent of sales, compared with $40.8 million, a rate of 7.1 percent of sales, for the same period last year. Byron Allumbaugh, Ralphs chairman and chief executive officer, said: ''We are extremely pleased with the company's performance. We believe our rate of operating cash flow to sales for the sustained period, since becoming a separate corporation in the third quarter of 1988, places Ralphs among the top supermarket companies in the nation.''

Allumbaugh continued: ''In the first quarter of 1990, without the non-cash equity appreciation rights charge, Ralphs showed profit before income taxes for the first time. We are proud of this achievement. Strong sales and cash flow are expected to continue through the year.''

ALAMEDA, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Ithaca Software moved its corporate headquarters on April 1, from Ithaca, N.Y. to Marina Village in Alameda, Calif.

The relocation is in resonse to the company's rapid growth and to a larger than expected demand for the company's primary software product, the HOOPS Graphics System. The San Francisco Bay Area is one of the world's major centers for software development and will provide the large talent pool necessary for Ithaca Software's expansion.

Over the next year, Ithaca Software plans to more than triple its personnel, and expects more than a three-fold increase in revenue over the preceding year.

HOOPS is an integrated library of software routines used by software developers to create highly interactive 3-D graphics applications. HOOPs provides programmers with all of the tools necessary to build complete 2-D or 3-D applications using vector or raster graphics. Because of its platform independent design, HOOPS applications can be ported, without modification, across a wide range of platforms.

In August of 1986, Ithaca Software introduced the HOOPS Graphics System at ACM Siggraph '86. Since 1987, HOOPS has been licensed to thousands of software developers at more than 500 commercial and 100 academic sites.

The rapid emergence of ''personal workstations,'' inexpensive computers that combine the computing power of technical workstations with the accessiblity of personal computers, is creating a dramatic increase in demand for 3-D graphics.

In the early 1980s, the combination of inexpensive microprocessors and a versatile and easy to use operating system created the personal computer revolution. Five years later, affordable laser printers and a language for handling graphics quality printing spawned the desktop publishing revolution. In the early 1990s it will be possible, for the first time, to perform fully interactive 3-D graphics on entry level computers. Three-dimensional graphics on personal workstations will be at the heart of the next great wave in personal computing. Ithaca Software's HOOPS Graphics System is the leading 3-D graphics system for personal workstations.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - National Semiconductor Corp.'s Computer Enhancement Group (CEG) Monday introduced Ethernet adapter cards for the IBM PC/XT/AT family of computers.

An Ethernet adapter card allows a PC to connect to the Ethernet local-area network. This new product offering complements the existing PC connectivity system solutions offered by CEG including 3270 terminal emulation, PC fax and SNA gateway products.

CEG's initial entries into the market, called EtherNODE, are Novell-certified adapters which run in the Netware 286 and Netware 386 environments. EtherNODE-16AT is fully compatible with the Novell NE-2000, the leading Ethernet adapter card.

EtherNODE-8PC is fully compatible with the NE-1000. The EtherNODE-16AT adapter card is designed for a 16-bit AT data bus, but can also operate in an 8-bit card slot, making it one of the few adapters with this self-configurable feature. In addition to the IBM adapter card, National's CEG group will build Ethernet interface hardware for the Apple Macintosh.

Due to the reliability of the industry standard National Semiconductor chip set utilized, CEG offers an extended five-year warranty for both EtherNODE cards. This is made possible by the cards' high level of integration (low chip count), extremely low power dissipation and a comprehensive factory test program.

Before year's end, the EtherNODE adapter cards will be equipped for 10 Base-T compatibility. This newest Ethernet media passes data over unshielded twisted-pair wires such as standard telephone wiring. The attraction of 10 Base-T is a much lower installation cost than conventional Ethernet with no degradation of the Ethernet 10-Mbit/sec data transmission speed.

A converter will be offered that can be used to upgrade thick coaxial cable Ethernet adapter cards to 10 Base-T systems via a 10 Base-T MAU (Medium Attachment Unit) attached to the IEEE 802.3 Ethernet AUI (Attachment Unit Interface).

Both EtherNODE cards are available now. Single-unit pricing is $375 each for the EtherNODE-16AT, and $315 each for the EtherNODE-8PC. For additional information call 800/538-8510.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - An agreement in principle has been reached between Blandin Paper Co. and Potlatch Corp. on the sale of the Blandin Wood Products oriented strand board plant (OSB) for an undisclosed amount, which will result in a gain for Blandin Paper Co.

The boards of directors of the two companies, in separate meetings, gave approval Monday to finalize details of the sale of the Grand Rapids, Minn. facility. The transaction is expected to close in late June.

''In spite of the excellent progress the company has made, it was determined that OSB did not fit into Blandin Paper Co.'s strategic long-term plan,'' said Al Wallace, president and chief executive officer of the Blandin Paper Co.

''We believe the employees and the plant will be better served through ownership by a company whose mission includes a stronger role for OSB. In the past few years the performance of Blandin Wood Products has improved steadily, and a great deal of that improvement is a result of the dedication of the employees.''

''This is a real opportunity for Potlatch to further expand its capabilities to offer additional products in the structural panel market '' said Richard B. Madden, Potlatch chairman and chief executive officer, ''and we are excited about expanding Potlatch's operations into the Grand Rapids area.''

The Blandin plant began operations in 1972. An entire new production line was built, and the old line retired, in December 1981. The board-forming equipment was modified in 1986 to enable the manufacture of oriented strand board. The Grand Rapids plant currently employs 167 employees and produces 340 million square feet of OSB annually.

Potlatch has operated OSB plants in Bemidji and Cook, Minn., since the early 1980s and is one of North America's leading wood products manufacturers.

EMERYVILLE, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Farallon Computing Inc. Monday shipped the MacRecorder Voice digitizer.

The new MacRecorder Voice digitizer allows users to record voice into sound-supporting applications, such as CE Software's QuickMail 2.2x, WordPerfect Office Mail, Microsoft Mail verion 2.0, and BrightStar's InterFACE.

These applications are the first of many business applications to incorporate Farallon's Sound Toolkit. The Farallon Sound Toolkit is a set of programming routines that build up on Macintosh system software, giving developers a standard and easy way to add sound input and playback capabilities to their applications.

The new MacRecorder Voice digitizer is a more compact and simplified version of the original Farallon sound digitizer that comes with the MacRecorder Sound System. The MacRecorder Voice digitizer contains a microphone and an analog-to-digital converter. It plugs into the modem or printer port of a Macintosh computer.

Both digitizers work with electronic mail or any applications that support sound input, and are fully compatible with the Macintosh Plus SE, SE/30, Macintosh II, IIx, IIcx, IIci and IIfx.

The Farallon Sound Driver should be placed in the Macintosh System Folder. This driver lets users record and play both compressed and non-compressed sounds from within programs that support it. HyperSound software records sound into HyperCard stacks.

The complete MacRecorder Voice digitizer package will be available in a single pack, or 10-packs for large customers that want to make sound a standard capability of all of their Macintosh computers.

The original MacRecorder Sound System is the complete sound editing system for the Macintosh. It includes a sound digitizer with a microphone input that allows connection to external microphones and a line jack that allows input from CD players or other stereo components. It also includes SoundEdit, HyperSound and HyperSound Toolkit software.

The MacRecorder Sound System is best suited for sound editing, multimedia presentations, HyperCard use and music applications. The MacRecorder Sound System has been shipping since January 1988 and is considered a standard for recording sound on the Macintosh. The system is priced at $249.

In contrast, the MacRecorder Voice digitizer provides a more cost-effective solution for users whose principal need is to add sound to general purpose productivity software.

The suggested retail price for the MacRecorder Voice digitizer is $149. The 10-pack has a suggested retail price of $995. Both single and 10-packs are available and shipping in quantity. The digitizer will also be available on an OEM basis to developers wishing to include a sound input device with their applications.

Developers interested in the Farallon Sound Toolkit should call Farallon Customer Service at 415/596-9000 or AppleLink FARALLON. Potential users must send proof of Apple Developer status.

Farallon is the world's leading provider of twisted-pair networks, with more than 1 million PhoneNET System nodes installed in Fortune 500 companies, universities and government agencies.

The company produces personal communications products and technologies, primarily for use on Macintosh computers. Farallon has more than 200 employees, and has headquarters in Emeryville, with research facilities there and in Lawrence, Kan. Farallon sells products worldwide through retail distribution and makes its technologies available through OEMs and relationships with other major vendors.

PORTLAND, Ore.(JUNE 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Robert A. Sprouse II Monday voted down a resolution seeking voting rights for all shares of non-voting common stock at the annual meeting of shareholders of Sprouse-Reitz Stores Inc. (NASDAQ:STRS).

Mr. Sprouse controls approximately 79 percent of the company's voting shares, although the Sprouse family only owns about 21 percent of all shares. The resolution was presented to Sprouse-Reitz by Robert H. Bisno, chairman of TransAction Financial Corp. of Oakland, Calif.

''We have all of the financial risks of a business owner. We as non-voting shareholders should have all of the rights and franchises that a business owner should have,'' Bisno said at the meeting in support of his resolution.

''The Sprouse family has conducted a campaign of misinformation to the detriment of the rights of shareholders,'' Bisno said. ''Sprouse-Reitz non-voting shares have borne the brunt of the decline in market value, decreasing from approximately $60 million in the third quarter of 1987 to less than $20 million today.

The individual members on this board should be keenly aware that there is a group of angry and worried shareholders who are no longer content with the annual charade perpetrated upon them by Sprouse-Reitz. We have been contacted by a number of shareholders who have asked us to commence legal action against Sprouse-Reitz and members of its board of directors to claim the shareholders' right to fair representation. We are considering all alternatives,'' Bisno said.

Bisno stated that at both the 1988 and 1989 annual meetings Sprouse-Reitz management misled its shareholders, the press and the investment community by proclaiming that it had received no proposals to buy the company. Bisno confirmed that his first proposal to buy the company was delivered to Mr. Sprouse personally in July 1987.

Recently, TransAction made a second offer to purchase Sprouse-Reitz at $17 per share in cash, subject to Sprouse family approval. The offer, presented to the board of directors of Sprouse-Reitz on April 23, was not made contingent upon obtaining financing, but would require the approval of shareholders owning both the voting and non-voting common stock of Sprouse-Reitz. The offer is being made on behalf of TransAction Financial Corp., First San Francisco Holding Ltd., and certain other investors.

(NASDAQ/NMS Symbol: RCDC) Monday announced the completion of a 21,000 square foot facility for the manufacture of eyeliner and lipliner cosmetic pencils. This facility is the only manufacturing facility located in the United States that is devoted exclusively to the manufacture of cosmetic pencils.

The new manufacturing facility is located on 16 acres of land on the Duncan-Reidville Road in Spartanburg County, South Carolina and will employ 15 people. This manufacturing operation will be operated as part of a new division established by the Company which will operate under the name American Cosmetics. American Cosmetics will produce all the Apple brand cosmetic pencils for Ross Cosmetics which were previously purchased from another supplier. Additionally, the opening of this facility will result in new opportunities for the Company to manufacture private label cosmetic pencils for other companies.

American Cosmetics will manufacture 30-35 million eyeliner and lipliner pencils in its first full year of operation. In addition, Ross Cosmetics anticipates that the manufacturing facility will result in an annual pre-tax cost reduction exceeding $575,000. The Company expects the start-up phase of production to be completed by the end of it's current fiscal year, August 31, 1990.

Ross Cosmetics' sales of cosmetic pencils currently represent approximately one-fourth of the Company's total revenues. CHICAGO (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Commodore International unveiled its Commodore Dynamic Total Vision (CDTV) interactive multimedia player at Summer CES.

The new player, which is a synthesis of Compact Disc and advanced computer technologies, represents a revolutionary advance in the development of interactive consumer electronics products and home entertainment.

Commodore's CDTV player is the first consumer-oriented product to combine the massive storage capabilities of the Compact Disc with the multitasking capabilities, audio, graphics, sound and processing power of an advanced personal computer into a single, simple-to-use, affordable unit.

The player connects directly to a television set and home stereo unit to become an interactive entertainment, information and education center.

A simple infrared remote device controls the player, allowing consumer access to a wide variety of programs. For example, CDTV technology makes it possible for consumers to access specific topics listed in reference materials such as encyclopedias, world atlases and almanacs at the touch of a button.

According to Bushnell, there is expected to be more than 100 titles available for the CDTV player at the time of product launch in the fall. In addition to various interactive resource materials, there is planned to be available a wide variety of instructional programs such as cooking, sports, foreign languages and special learning programs for children.

Music, from rock to opera, will be enhanced with video graphics. Electronic games will be significantly more sophisticated in depth of play sound and graphics than on any currently available video game or personal computer format.

The majority of discs will carry a retail price ranging between $30 and $100.

Commodore will offer a wide range of dedicated peripheral products as well. Planned peripherals include an infrared computer keyboard, infrared joysticks, a 3-1/2-inch floppy disk drive, a printer and a video genlocking card, which allow users to mix computer graphics with live video.

Commodore International, through its worldwide operations, is one of the world's leading producers of computer-based consumer and business products. Corporate headquarters are located at 1200 Wilson Drive, West Chester, Pa. 19380; 215/431-9100.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Shiva Corp. announced Monday that it has completed its acquisition of the FastPath gateway from Novell Inc.

Shiva is now the sole manufacturer, seller, supporter and developer of the FastPath; Novell has ceased all manufacturing and marketing of the gateway. In addition, Novell is referring all FastPath sales and technical support calls to Shiva.

FastPath is a LocalTalk/Ethernet gateway that supports AppleTalk, TCP/IP and DECnet protocols. Created in 1985 by Kinetics Inc. of Walnut Creek, Calif., the FastPath became a Novell product when Kinetics was purchased by Novell in 1988. Novell decided earlier this year to license the FastPath in order to concentrate more fully on the development of networking software.

Shiva was chosen to be the FastPath company because of its extensive experience with Macintosh networking hardware and its reputation for quality products backed by excellent technical support. The agreement to license the FastPath to Shiva was signed in April 1990, with June 4 set as the final transition date.

FastPath manufacturing will continue at the San Jose site used by Novell, but will move to New England by the end of the third quarter 1990. Shiva plans to have the FastPath assembled alongside its other networking hardware by September.

Over the past few weeks Shiva administrators and engineers have visited and spoken with many FastPath users. On June 6, 1990, Shiva executives will meet with a subset of the Northern California Internet Users in San Jose. The group represents a large portion of the installed base of FastPath users.

Shiva president, Dan Schwinn, vice president of engineering, Frank Slaughter, and newly hired marketing director, Campbell Stras will be present at the meeting. Schwinn, Slaughter and Stras will answer questions and present their views on the future of the FastPath and new developments currently underway.

Shiva Corp., based in Cambridge, develops Network Communications products. NetComm products enhance communications beyond the local area network. Functions include connecting to a shared serial device, dialing-in to the network from a remote computer, and telebridging, linking remote networks over regular phone lines or high-speed data links.

Shiva was founded in 1985 and currently manufactures seven Macintosh networking hardware products and two DOS networking software products. The addition of the FastPath brings Shiva into the Mac-VAX and Mac-TCP/IP networking communications arena.

HERNDON, VA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - David C. Lucien, president and chief executive officer of TEMPEST Technologies Inc. announced Friday a net loss for fiscal year ending March, 31, 1990 of $1,327,000, or 17 cents per share compared to net income of $316,000, or 4 cents per share for the previous fiscal year.

Net loss for the quarter ended March 31, 1990 was $1,213,000, or 15 cents per share compared to net income of $148,000, or 2 cents per share for the quarter ended March 31, 1989.

Revenues for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990 were $8,109,000 as compared with revenues of $8,570,000 for the previous fiscal year. Revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1990 were $1,975,000 as compared with revenues of $2,664,000 for the quarter ended March 31, 1989.

Lucien stated that 14 cents per share of the loss for the fiscal year is attributable to two events. First, the company recognized a one time charge of $348,000 for the write down of inventory and second, the company determined that the Spring Park facility in Herndon would no longer be used and accrued $890,000 for the remaining obligation under the lease.

Lucien further stated that revenues overall for the fiscal year were impacted due to the continued slow down in defense spending and overall softness in the TEMPEST marketplace. The company has continued to develop new products to further diversify the company into non-defense areas and expects the diversification strategy to have a positive impact in the future.

TEMPEST Technologies Inc., a publicly held company headquartered in Herndon, designs and manufactures modifications for computer and peripheral equipment to comply with Military Standards and TEMPEST specifications established by the United States Government. Its shares are traded on the NASDAQ under the symbol ''TTOI''.

ATLANTA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Digital Communications Associates Inc. (NYSE:DCA) Monday announced IRMAtrac Token-Ring Adapter/Convertible, a highly flexible new Token-Ring solution offering end users connectivity over local area networks (LANs) using a variety of media, personal computer architectures and data transmission speeds.

IRMAtrac communicates at 4 or 16 megabits per second (Mbps) through replaceable Ring Interface Modules (RIMs) over shielded or unshielded twisted pair media. Two separate RIMs are included with IRMAtrac, supporting all adopted media standards for Token-Ring.

One RIM supports 4 Mbps for both shielded and unshielded twisted pair, another is for 16 Mbps for shielded twisted pair cable. Future RIMs will also support fiber optic cable as well as any new adopted media standards. Because the RIMs are easily replaceable, users can migrate to other media standards as they emerge.

Like DCA's IRMA 3 Convertible, IRMAtrac supports both the Industry Standard Architecture (ISA) and the Micro Channel Architecture (MCA) personal computer architectures through a unique dual bus design. Both MCA and ISA bracketry is included.

IRMAtrac is ''performance-tuned'' for the LAN environment and includes bus mastering, on-board processing of 802.2 LLC, and on-board memory.

Bus mastering is a user-transparent technique that dramatically improves performance allowing IRMAtrac to take over the management of the personal computer bus from the central processing unit (CPU). IRMAtrac's bus mastering is managed by a DCA proprietary Versatile Interface Chip (VIC).

The unique DCA VIC chip identifies the bus type, determines if it can support ''bus mastering'' and makes the necessary adjustments. Because the communications is processed on the board, the personal computer is free to process other applications.

IRMAtrac processes 802.2 LLC communications software on-board and has 128 Kilobytes (Kbps) of adapter RAM to downland microcode, including LLC, to provide maximum buffer space. Software-loadable microcode also enables users to easily install hardware upgrades and enhancements directly from the diskette, without the need for new PROM (Programmable Read Only Memory) chips or returning hardware.

IRMAtrac also supports industry standards for the Token Ring environment, such as IEEE 802.5 and 802.2, and is IBM software compatible, enabling users to interoperate with other standards-based hardware and software. In addition, IRMAtrac supports LAN operating systems available from DCA, IBM, Microsoft, Novell and 3Com.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Software Publishing Corp. (NASDAQ:SPCO) Monday announced PFS:Preface 1.0, a menu system and DOS manager designed to simplify the basic functions of a DOS-based computer.

PFS:Preface 1.0 allows novice and occasional users to organize and manage software applications and the contents of their hard disks without requiring knowledge of DOS syntax.

PFS:Preface offers an application menu system, providing users with mouse or one-key access to their software applications. It also features pull-down menus and file selector displays to help users streamline common file and directory management tasks. In addition, the specially designed DOS window equips users with an easy-to-understand, on-line guide to the DOS operating system.

Users can get to work faster by having one-key access to their software applications through the product's menu system. During its install routine, PFS:Preface searches the user's hard drive(s) for more than 100 software programs. When the search is complete, PFS:Preface creates a personalized main menu listing, including all of the software programs it has located.

The application menu system also allows users to create new links to the main menu by providing help in locating additional programs on the hard drive. PFS:Preface users can set up unlimited sub-menus to organize and rearrange their software applications.

By using the program's cut and paste operations, PFS:Preface users can customize the order and contents of their menu listings. In a networking environment, the product can be used to create and link to ''remote'' menus, providing seamless network integration.

PFS:Preface offers users pull-down menus and familiar file selector displays to simplify their routine file and directory management tasks, such as copying, deleting, renaming, moving or viewing files. Users can mark multiple files or directories so that any of these tasks can be carried out simultaneously for numerous items.

PFS:Preface users are also provided with a menu option to format diskettes without having to exit the program. The file manager also helps users find misplaced files by employing a feature that searches the user's drive using either a file name or wildcard specification.

TINTON FALLS, NJ (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Concurrent Computer Corp. has signed an agreement with AT&T for its System V/MLS multi-level security system.

Concurrent will port the System V/MLS to its real-time UNIX (RTU) operating system. The RTU operating system is fully compatible with the AT&T UNIX System V, Release 3.1 and BSD 4.2.

UNIX System V/MLS, released by AT&T last September, is the only UNIX system certified at the Orange Book B1 level by the U.S. Department of Defense National Computer Security Center (NCSC).

Concurrent's performance-enhanced RTU operating system provides high throughput, multiprocessor capability, interprocessor communication and a guaranteed response time of less than 100 microseconds. Although, typical security implementations cause a 20-40 percent degradation of system performance, because of the simplicity of the System V/MLS design, performance is degraded by no more than 5 percent.

Under the agreement announced Friday, Concurrent expects to offer its RTU system with the System V/MLS port by February 1991 for use on the company's 6000 and 8000 series computers.

Langa said security features have always been important elements of the UNIX operating system, starting with protection against security flaws contained in the original UNIX systems that other operating systems lacked and noted that the UNIX system has always supported a discretionary access scheme for the protection of files and directories.

This announcement is an extension of a long relationship and a commitment to standards, as Concurrent was one of the first computer licensees of AT&T's UNIX, Langa noted.

Concurrent Computer Corp. is the leading supplier of high-performance, real-time computer systems worldwide. With systems ranging in price from $10,000 to more than $1 million, the company is focused on the real-time simulation, measurement and control, C4I and transaction processing markets. Its common stock (CCUR) is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System.

ROCKVILLE, MD (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - GE Information Services (GEIS), owner and operator of one of the world's largest teleprocessing networks, has announced the results of its survey of 25 international hotel chains in Europe and North America. The survey focused on the current and future requirements for central hotel reservation systems and how these requirements can best be met. Survey respondents told GEIS:

o A majority of hotel chains' consider their current reservation system inadequate. o A substantial overhaul/replacement of central hotel reservation systems is planned. o Multi-million dollar investments are required to overhaul/replace a chain's reservation system. o Any solution selected to meet current requirements must enable continuous future upgrades. o Chains are ready to consider a reservation system operated as a service by an outside supplier, if they can retain full control over their data.

Hotel chains are evaluating new hotel reservations systems to acquire and use. The three areas mentioned repeatedly in the survey results as the most important in evaluating the functionality of a new reservation system were: facilities for room and rate inventory management; features designed specifically for hotels rather than airlines; and facilities to improve management control of every property in the chain.

The hotel chains also want a central reservation system which communicates efficiently with chain headquarters, hotels, airline reservation systems and other sources of bookings on a global basis. The reservation system must be fully integrated with global communications facilities.

The survey indicates there is a willingness of hotel chains and referral organizations to consider using a full service supplier for their next central reservation system rather than buying, installing, operating and maintaining their own reservation system.

As a result of this survey, GEIS has identified a substantial opportunity in the market for a range of reservation services, using GEIS' global technology and teleprocessing facilities which are in place today. GEIS will offer the MANOR System, a new central hotel reservation system, to the worldwide hotel industry in mid-June 1990.

IRVINE, CA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Toshiba America Information Systems Inc. has established Toshiba Printer Products at its Irvine headquarters to handle product planning, marketing, sales and distribution of its advanced printer products.

Richard H. Walker has been named vice president/general manager of the new group, which will form a new division, Kiichi Hataya, president of TAIS, announced Monday. Walker joined TAIS in November 1989 as vice president/general manager of the Copier Products Division and vice president/corporate marketing for TAIS. He will retain these roles in addition to his new position with the new group.

The new printer group headed by Walker will build upon existing product support formerly conducted by the Computer Systems Division according to Hataya. Plans are in place to continue to expand both existing dealer distribution channels nationwide and establish Toshiba as a leading supplier of laser and 24-pin dot matrix printers.

Toshiba is known for its advanced high-technology, high quality laser printers. At the Spring Comdex Show in Atlanta, the company officially introduced the first 24-pin dot matrix printer which prints at 200 CPS, priced under $500 -- a breakthrough product that operates up to 30 percent faster than comparable printers on the market today according to Walker.

The new Printer Products organization will market Toshiba's advanced printer product line which ranges from compact 24-pin dot matrix units to multi-functional laser printers for personal computers. The printers are all compatible with most hardware and software systems on the market today. TAIS anticipates no staff reductions will occur as a result of this reorganization.

In fact, the company plans to hire additional employees.

Prior to joining TAIS in 1989, Walker brought more than 20 years of managerial, sales and marketing experience to his position at Toshiba. As the vice president/general manager of Toshiba Printer Products, he will be responsible for all product planning, marketing, sales and technical support of TAIS printer products in the United States.

Prior to his position at Toshiba, Walker served as vice president/marketing for the Office Automation Group at Panasonic Communications and Systems company based in Secaucus, N.J. While with Panasonic, Walker was responsible for that company's impact and non-impact printers.

Headquartered in Irvine, with annual sales of $900 million, TAIS manufactures and markets a wide range of business and information-oriented products in the United States. The current product mix includes laptop and desktop computers, printers, disk drives, plain paper copiers, facsimile systems, electronic key telephone and PBX systems and cellular mobile phones.

ATLANTA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - CMS Enhancements Inc. (NYSE:CME), a global producer of mass data storage devices and accessories Sunday announced two additions to its Platinum family of Macintosh-compatible hard disk subsystems.

The Platinum 1000 is a 1-Gbyte subsystem with an average access time of 16.5 ms and MTBF of 100,000 hours.

Available in both internal and external configurations, these drives are well suited for graphics, databases, accounting and multimedia applications in home or office environments.

''This subsystem was designed with high-end users and the limitations of SCSI addressing in mind. Because high-capacity users are more likely to connect scanners, tape backup devices, hard drives, additional monitors, 35 mm slide makers or other equipment which utilizes a SCSI address, having one large disk drive conserves valuable address connections,'' said August Steurer, Apple product manager for CMS Enhancements.

Two 20-Mbyte subsystems were also unveiled this week. Available in 2-inch low-profile cabinets or easy-to-install, 3-1/2-inch internal version for use in a Macintosh SE, both configurations feature micro-processor controlled diagnostic routines which are automatically executed at start-up to insure maximum performance.

The Platinum external subsystems also feature an external push-button SCSI ID select and 50-pin connectors.

The suggested retail price of the internal Platinum 1000 is $8,399 and $8,599 for the external version. The 20-Mbyte Platinum drives have a suggested retail price of $759 and $599 for the external and internal models, respectively.

CMS Enhancements is a $200 million public company, producing mass data storage devices and accessories for computers manufactured by Apple, IBM, Compaq, Digital Equipment Corp., Epson, NEC, Toshiba, Tandy, AT&T, Sun Microsystems, Commodore, AST and many others. ALBANY, NY (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Trans World Music Corp. (NASDAQ:TWMC) Monday announced that its outstanding litigation with Peaches Entertainment Corp. was settled with an agreement to pay $1.5 million.

In the first quarter of 1989 the company had recorded a reserve of $2.5 million, reflecting the original judgement of $2 million and related expenses. The $500,000 reduction in the judgement will increase net income in 1990's second quarter by approximately $300,000 or three cents per share.

At the annual shareholders' meeting on Friday, June 1, the Chairman, Robert J. Higgins, indicated that the company's revenues in fiscal 1990 could approach $400 million and that net income could exceed $18 million.

Although Higgins is comfortable with 1990 analyst estimates that range upward from $1.90 per share, company officials cautioned against relying on projections, primarily because the company's business is highly seasonal.

Historically, over one-third of the company's annual sales and one-half of its net income have occurred during the fourth fiscal quarter, which includes the Christmas season.

Trans World Music is one of the largest specialty retailers of prerecorded music and video products, operating stores under several distinct store formats throughout the eastern half of the United States. The company operates retail stores under several names, including Record Town, Tape World, Coconuts, Great American Music, Good Vibrations and Saturday Matinee.

ATLANTA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - CMS Enhancements Inc. (NYSE:CME), a global producer of mass data storage devices and accessories, Sunday announced a 2-inch, 20-Mbyte, internal hard disk subsystem for NEC's MultiSpeed HD version.

''The LDSNEC HD-20 is an outstanding replacement hard drive for the MultiSpeed HD because of its light weight, speed, low power consumption and value,'' said Jeff Corbett.

''Our LiteDrive is an outstanding performer. The CMS drive weighs only 10 ounces, is considerably faster at 28 ms., draws only 2.7 watts of power vs. 7 watts and is almost $300 less expensive,'' said Corbett.

''The light weight is achieved by utilizing 2-inch drive technology and an intelligent interface, which means the controller is smaller, so the entire subsystems weighs less.''

The LDSNEC HD-20 also includes the Stop Lite utility, which extends battery life to almost 90 percent of the normal operation time of a laptop computer without a hard disk, by automatically shutting down the new drive until access is required.

Available after May 15, the suggested retail price of the LDSNEC HD-20 is $999.

Revenues for the corresponding period of 1988 were $1,965,000 with a net loss of $548,000, or 31 cents per share.

These subsystems join the company's popular LANSTACK and Sentry subsystems.

The LANSTACK series of external hard disk subsystems has been upgraded to include drives that have a wider range of capacities and faster access times. A 50 pin connector has also been added to the external cabinets for greater reliabilty when daisy-chaining the drives together. The internal units, or Sentry Series, have the same capacities and specifications as the external LANSTACK subsystems.

From 90-Mbytes to 1-Gbyte, the new LANSTACK and Sentry Series subsystems support Novell Netware as well as SCO Xenix and DOS 4.0.

''A half-height internal 320-Mbyte drive and a full-height, 1-Gbyte internal or external sybsystems, are two particularly important additions to the Sentry and LANSTACK families. The half-height, 320-Mbyte device gives users of small machines the flexibility and power of high-capacity storage. For their capacities and performance, the 1-Gbyte subsystems have already been met with great demand from our customers,'' said Robert Wagoner, product manager for CMS Enhancements.

The internal drives include all necessary mounting hardware and a daisy chain cable for the external units. Each subsystems requires either a CMS SCSI host adapter or one of IBM's new SCSI adapters.

Available immediately, the suggested retail prices of the LANSTACK series subsystems are US $1,495, $2,295, $3,195, $4,395 and $7,495 for the 90-, 150-, 320- and 660-Mbyte and 1-Gbyte, respectively.

The new Express Series subsystems feature average access times from 15 to 18 ms and data transfer rates from 12.5 to 15 Mbits/s.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - R.R. Donnelley and Sons Co., North America's largest printer, has signed an agreement to purchase property in South Daytona, Fla., for a major new commercial printing facility.

Jack Oberhill, Magazine Group president, said the plant, which will initially produce catalogs and magazines for major U.S. retailers and publishers, also will have the capacity to expand to other product printing. The plant, which will start up in mid-1991, will employ some 150 persons, the majority to be recruited from the local community.

''We are opening a plant in South Daytona in keeping with Donnelley's ongoing strategy of offering its customers strategically located distribution facilities,'' Oberhill said.

Donnelley is purchasing an unoccupied 150,000-square-foot building (formerly Web World, located on Highway 1) and its adjoining property. The Daytona Division, as it will be known, is well situated to interstate, air and rail connections.

''Our Daytona Division will be a state-of-the-art facility that sets a new standard for catalog and magazine printing and distribution. In the face of changing postal regulations and an increasingly competitive market, it is vital that we offer our customers flexible distribution and production

'' explained Barry Schoder, Catalog Group president.

''Opening a plant in Daytona is just one more way to ensure that our customers have a quality printed product that can be delivered in a quick and competitive manner.''

Currently, there is a Donnelley facility within 8 hours of every major metropolitan area east of the Mississippi and within 12 hours of every major metropolitan center west of the Mississippi. The Daytona plant complements Donnelley's magazine and catalog service matrix, which already offers the printing industry's most efficient product distribution system.

Magazine and catalog sales accounted for more than half of Donnelley's 1989 revenue of $3.1 billion.

R. R. Donnelley and Sons Co. is a leading printer of catalogs, newspaper inserts, magazines, books, directories, computer documentation and financial printing.

It operates manufacturing plants, subsidiaries, sales offices and service centers in nearly 100 locations from coast to coast and in the United Kingdom, Ireland, Mexico, the Caribbean and the Far East.

COLUMBUS, OH (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Consolidated net sales for the fiscal year ended April 27, 1990, were $454,339,000, an increase of eight percent over $419,529,000 a year ago.

Net income for the fiscal year was $27,745,000 or 87 cents per share, compared with $30,663,000 or 95 cents per share in fiscal 1989.

The increase in net sales over a year ago for the fiscal year was mainly due to more restaurants in operation in the restaurant segment. In addition, higher wholesale prices were charged for sausage products in the sausage segment.

The decrease in net income for the just-completed fiscal year compared with a year ago was primarily due to higher live hog costs, which decreased profit margins in the sausage segment.

During the fourth quarter, eight new Bob Evans Restaurants opened in Bridgeport and Wheeling, W.Va.; Lake City, Fla.; Richmond, Va.; Traverse City, Mich.; Festus and Springfield, Mo.; and Toledo, Ohio. One Owens Family Restaurant opened in Arlington, Texas, bringing the total number of Owens Family Restaurants to seven, all located in the Dallas/Ft. Worth metroplex. The total number of restaurants in operation at fiscal year end was 241, compared with 222 one year ago.

In the sausage division, Bob Evans Farms Smoked Sausage has been reformulated and is being reintroduced in the company's market area.

The Bob Evans Farms board of directors declared a six-and-one-half cents ($0.065) per share quarterly dividend on April 20, 1990, payable June 4, 1990, to stockholders of record at the close of business May 11, 1990. The company's annual stockholders' meeting will be at 4 p.m. on Monday, August 13 at the Bob Evans Farm in Rio Grande, Ohio.

Bob Evans Farms Inc. currently owns and operates a chain of 241 family restaurants in 14 states, including seven Owens Family Restaurants in Texas. The company produces and distributes a variety of fresh pork sausage products in 19 states and the District of Columbia. Owens Country Sausage, operating in eight southwestern states, is also part of Bob Evans Farms Inc.

SILER CITY, NC (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Communication Cable Inc. (NASDAQ: CABL), engineers, designs, and manufactures special application electronic wire and cable for the computer, industrial, telecommunication, medical and military markets.

The company now operates three divisions located in Siler City, Hayesville and Sanford, North Carolina.

Consolidated sales of all divisions for the six months ended April 30, 1990 were $10,995,849 compared to $11,323,917 for the like period in 1989. Second quarter sales were $5,428,972 for 1990 compared to $5,783,224 in 1989.

Consolidated net income for the six months ended April 30, 1990 was $757,180, or 43 cents per share, compared to $510,024, or 42 cents per share in 1989. The weighted shares outstanding for the period increased from 1,223,221 shares in 1989 to 1,769,942 shares, an increase of 45 percent.

Net income for the quarter was $379,766, or 21 cents per share, compared to $273,038, or 22 cents per share for the like period in 1989. All earnings per share have been adjusted to reflect the 5 percent stock dividends in each of the past two years, 1989 and 1990.

Lackluster sales activity previously reported last quarter continues to dominate the electronic wire and cable market, but the major impact on our output has been the result of curtailed shipments due to our restriction of credit to two major accounts which have developed cash flow problems after changing ownership.

We are continuing to work with these accounts, but have no significant accounts receivable exposure.

Your management anticipated the current market direction and as a result are pleased to report that our company improved earnings on reduced sales. We believe Communication Cable is well positioned with an experienced management team which can continue to capitalize on these market conditions.

The new Saxton division has started limited production with operator trainees under the supervision of experienced operators and management. We expect Saxton to contribute to our performance during the second half of the year.

Our Chinese joint venture project is actively underway and some of our Chinese employees are undergoing initial training in our U.S. plants during May 1990. Our projected shipment of equipment from our U.S.

plants to the Shenzhen plant is ahead of our July schedule.

Continuing our growth objectives, our negotiations to purchase Texarkana Wire and Cable of Texarkana, Ark., have resulted in an executed contract, subject only to environmental clearance which is expected momentarily.

BEDFORD, ENGLAND (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - NFC plc (AMEX: NFC), a leading international transport, logistics, property and services group, today announced that its revenues for the 25 weeks to March 24, 1990 rose by 13 percent to 728.8 million pounds ($1.2 billion/a) over the 24 weeks to March 18, 1989 and, despite a 3 percent reduction in operating profit to 41.5 million pounds ($66.6 million), pre-tax profit was up by 12 percent to 36.4 million pounds ($58.4 million).

Earnings were up 17 percent to 27.0 million pounds ($43.3 million) and earnings per share increased 9 percent to 4.9p (7.9 cents).

Reflecting the strong performance of NFC's American subsidiaries, the overseas operating profit contribution increased by 22 percent to 11.7 million pounds ($18.8 million). In divisional terms, Logistics showed strong profit growth and the Home Services Division's results also improved on the previous half year in spite of declines in the level of demand in Pickfords Removals UK.

The property activity, Hyperion, achieved an increased level of profits, but there were signs towards the end of the period that activity was slowing down in the property market.

However, the Transport Division -- apart from improved profitability in contract hire -- experienced considerable volume and margin pressure, particularly in the areas of truck rental, car delivery and freight management.

Despite higher interest rates, interest charges of 3.2 million pounds ($5.1 million) in the recent first half were 1.5 million ($2.4 million) lower than in the comparable period a year earlier, reflecting aggressive cash management.

Profit-sharing contributions were significantly reduced by the downturn in operating profit. These contributions totalled 1.9 million pounds ($3.1 million), compared to 5.7 million last year, thereby protecting pre-tax profits.

Dividend

The directors have declared a third interim dividend of 1.1p (1.7 cents) per share, making a total of 2.9p (4.6) per share for the year so far. The increase in dividends paid in the first half reflects the special first interim dividend and the decision to move to regular quarterly dividend payments.

As in the past, shareholders outside the United States will be offered the option of taking the dividend in shares or cash. The share option will not be available in the United States as the cost would outweigh the benefit to shareholders and the company.

ATLANTA, GA (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The Hitachi subsidiary Nissei Sangyo America Monday introduced the new Hitachi 14MVX multi-scanning color monitor for business graphics applications.

The 14MVX delivers sharp, bright text and graphics, can adjust to horizontal scan frequencies from 30 to 40 kHz, and is VGA, Super VGA, 8514/A, 1024x768 and MAC II compatible.

NSA/Hitachi's 14-inch multi-scanning business graphics monitor is brighter and sharper than competitive monitors because it incorporates technology from high-end CAD/CAE monitors. These monitors are typically manufactured in low volume and sold at premium prices.

NSA/Hitachi is producing the 14MVX in a highly automated, large-scale production facility. Therefore, NSA/Hitachi is able to achieve the economies of scale needed to offer this technology at business graphics prices.

The 14MVX offers users improved comfort and safety features including silica anti-glare treatment which until now has been only available on high-end CAD/CAE monitors. The 14MVX can meet stringent European standards for emissions (as of yet, the U.S. has not set standards) and has lower electro-static and electro-magnetic emissions than competitors' 14-inch multi-scanning business-graphics monitors available in the U.S.

The multi-scanning capability of the 14MVX -- from 30 to 40 kHz -- extends beyond the 35.5 kHz limit of comparable 14-inch multi-scanning monitors. ''VGA was a breakthrough three years ago at 31.5 kHz and was quickly eclipsed by Super VGA and 8514/A at 35.5 kHz,'' noted Bowler. ''The 14MVX, by extending the horizontal scanning range to 40kHz, will be adjustable to new graphics standards as they emerge, increasing its long-term value.''

The Hitachi 14MVX is scheduled for general availability in July 1990.

Nissei Sangyo America is a North American trading company in the Hitachi Group. NSA/Hitachi Office Automation Group, headquartered in Waltham, Mass., markets monitors, graphic controllers, printers and data storage systems through OEM's and a network of distributors throughout North America. LEXINGTON, KY (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - A letter of intent was signed May 30, 1990, to drill 60 gas and oil wells including a nine mile pipeline for the development of natural gas production in Tennessee, and to market the gas to electric utilities and independent power producers.

The agreement was reached between Haben Industries Inc. a NASDAQ (HABN) listed diversified natural gas production and oil refining company headquartered in Wilmington, N.C., and Citizens Power & Light Corp., a subsidiary of Boston-based Citizens Corporation, which is an independent electric power marketing company and Miller Services Inc., a natural gas drilling and operations firm headquartered in Oneida, Tenn.

The parties have current control, via a Gulf-Arco farm-out agreement, of property capable of accommodating a minimum of 120 drill sites on a 19,000 acre tract located in Campbell County, Tennessee, extensive reserve and production reports indicate a high probability of the Phase 1 drilling program achieving stable, long-term production of 5,000 to 10,000 MCF per day of gas and reserves of 3 million barrels of oil. Subsequent step-out drilling is anticipated after Phase 1.

Miller Services and Haben Industries will be responsible for drilling, production and operations of the fields. Citizens will be responsible for arranging the long-term sale of the gas supplies to electric power generators, who place significant value on the stable, long-term supplies which this field appears capable of producing.

Financing activities for the $18 million drilling program have been intiated. In order to qualify for Devonian Shale Production alternative fuel tax credits, the parties have targeted initial production from this production beginning by the end of 1990.

GREENVILLE, SC (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - American Federal Bank (NASDAQ:AMFB) announced Monday that its capital plan has been approved by the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS).

The plan, submitted January 8, details how the bank intends to increase its capital position to meet new capital standards established last year by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act (FIRREA).

FIRREA requires federally insured savings institutions to meet phased-in, progressively higher capital targets over a five-year period. By Jan. 1, 1995, the institutions must have total capital equal to 8 percent of risk-based assets and tangible capital equal to 3 percent of total assets.

Under current requirements, American Federal's capital shortfall is approximately $27 million, based on the bank's present asset size and mix.

The bank has already boosted its tangible capital position by $53 million since the beginning of 1987, including $22 million from a public stock conversion, $14 million from the conversion of subordinated debt, and $17 million from retained earnings and amortization of goodwill. The bank has recorded 13 consecutive profitable quarters through March 1990.

Roy Abercrombie, president of American Federal, said, ''We are delighted to get the go ahead from OTS. This approval means we have complied with the statutory requirement for approval of a capital plan and can get on with our business.''

FIRREA allows the OTS to consider approval of an institution's capital plan, provided four conditions are met:

1) The exemption must pose no significant risk to the deposit insurance fund.

2) The savings institution's management is competent.

3) The institution is in ''substantial compliance'' with all regulations and requirements.

4) The institution's management has ''not engaged in insider dealing, speculative practices, or any other activities that have jeopardized the institution's safety and soundness or contributed to impairing the institution's capital.''

American Federal's common stock is traded on the over-the-counter market under the NASDAQ symbol AMFB. The bank has over $1.1 billion in assets and 34 branch offices covering eight counties in the northwestern region of the state. It also owns Finance South, a consumer finance company with 25 branch offices throughout South Carolina.

MIAMI (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - A week's worth of new launches around the country brought The Jukebox Network's total of operating units up to 100, it was announced Monday by VJN President/Chief Executive Officer Andrew H. Orgel.

Warner Cable in Cincinnati became the 100th location and 12th Time Warner Jukebox. Also launched were Paragon Cable/Portland, Ore.; and low power channels 62 - Lubbock, Texas; 43 - Boise, Idaho; and 63 - Reno, Nev.

Commenting on the expansion, Orgel said, ''It has taken a tremendous team effort to bring the network to this point. Just a year ago, we were a company with 39 employees and 20 operating units; today we have just 52 employees operating 100 separate 24 hour-a-day, viewer-programmed, localized channels.

''I am very proud of the efforts of our team and gratified by the response of viewers around the country.''

The expansion of the network was directed by Vice President, Affiliate Relations & Marketing Cheryl Greene and Vice President, LPTV Operations Bill Stacy. Of the 100 Jukebox units, 66 are operating on cable systems and 34 on low power television stations.

''Davida Shear and Shirley Rohn-Saito, our East and West Coast Affiliate Relations Directors have done a tremendous job in marketing The Jukebox to the cable community,'' commented Greene.

''They have placed The Jukebox in systems operated by 13 of the Top 20 cable multiple system operators (MSOs) - quite an accomplishment in view of the limited channel space and competition from newly launched services.''

''I anticipate continued growth in the low power arena,'' added Stacy. ''The recent agreement with Sunbelt Media Group Inc. to open 10 additional Jukebox affiliates demonstrates that we have been able to meet the needs of the growing low power community with our automated, interactive, viewer-controlled programming.''

Video Jukebox Network Inc. is an interactive television company that currently operates 100 viewer-programmed, localized units of The Jukebox Network, the leading interactive television network in the country. The Jukebox Network is available in 28 states and reaches 7.4 million households.

BROOKLYN, NY (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Creative Technologies Corp. (NASDAQ:CRTV) announced results for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990.

The company, which develops and markets products for the small appliance industry, had net sales of $530,000, representing an increase of approximately 35 percent compared to net sales of $394,000 for the same period in 1989.

Strong sales are due, primarily, to the company's pasta machine, Pasta Express, which continues to be the industry leader.

Creative reported a net loss from continuing operations of $85,000, or 2 cents per share, which compares to a net loss of $555,000, or 14 cents per share in the first quarter of the prior year. The company also incurred a one time charge of $52,000 from the sale of its Israeli subsidiary in the current quarter.

''While we will not be satisfied until we have turned the corner to profitability,'' said Richard Helfman, president of the company, ''We are very pleased that efforts to reduce expenses and increase sales have produced results. Gien the highly seasonal nature of our business, we are encouraged with our progress.''

Sales, general and administrative (SG&A) expenses were reduced by 58 percent over the same period last year, falling to $290,000 as compared to $694,000 in 1989.

''The total reorganization and relocation of Creative's operations to Brooklyn last summer has increased efficiency for the company's resources and reduced our general expenses. We are continuing to closely monitor costs and expect SG&A to decline as a percentage of sales as the year progresses,'' Helfman said.

''We are concentrating our efforts to broaden the distribution base of Pasta Express. Committed programs scheduled with major retailers and stores for the second half of the year are expected to translate into a significant sales increase for the year,'' he concluded.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The following is a summary of a presentation Monday at the New York Society of Security Analysts by Robert J. Shillman, chairman, chief executive officer and president of Cognex Corp.

In his speech to the New York Society of Security Analysts Shillman, said that the machine vision industry and his company, in particular, have a bright future at home and abroad.

''To date, we've recorded 12 consecutive quarters of growth in revenues and profits,'' Shillman told analysts. ''The most recent quarter was our best ever. Compared to fiscal 1989's first quarter, net income grew 135 percent to $1.3 million; we saw revenues increase 56 percent to $5.2 million. Given this track record and the growing demand for machine vision, I expect this expansion to continue.''

Cognex Corp., since its founding in 1981, has become the leading independent manufacturer of machine vision systems. The company's products -- computers that can ''see'' -- are used to replace human vision in a wide range of manufacturing processes where machine vision is necessary due to the complexity of products or manufacturing methods.

Cognex currently markets its product family, consisting of sophisticated image-analysis software and high-speed, special-purpose computers, to the semiconductor, electronics, pharmaceuticals and aerospace industries.

Shillman attributes the company's success to a focused marketing strategy. ''Since 1986, we have sold standard products, which require minimal customization and support, to OEMs and system integrators around the world '' Shillman stated.

''We concentrate our sales efforts on customers who can integrate our products into their own factory equipment. These customers are in industries which require machine vision for tasks demanding visual acuity, reliability and speed. As a result of this strategy, Cognex has seen a 50 percent gain in revenues each year, on average, since 1986.''

Cognex also has successfully penetrated the Japanese market, which represented 29 percent of the company's 1989 total revenues.

''One of our goals for 1990 is to derive over 40 percent of our total revenues from Japan,'' said Shillman.

Before an audience of analysts and portfolio managers, Shillman outlined the company's other goals for 1990. ''We will continue to grow revenues and profits through sales to current and new markets; increase our sales overseas, in Europe as well as Japan; and introduce several new products.''

One 1990 new product is ''On-Sight,''(TM) featuring ease-of-use for the customer. The product is targeted toward manufacturers with a ''critical use'' for vision systems, but without programming expertise. '''On-Sight' will allow us to enter new markets,'' announced Shillman. ''We can offer a wide range of manufacturers a machine vision solution that they can easily configure without any technical knowledge,'' he added.

The new product, which will be announced at the International Automation Show in Detroit tomorrow, is scheduled for shipment in 1991.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Sanyo Electric Co. Ltd. Monday announced a significant advancement in its amorphous solar cell technology with the introduction of a new flexible, light-weight, solar cell film material.

The new Amorton film, which is only 0.12 mm thick and is flexible enough to form a small tube 10 mm in diameter, can be shaped to conform to three-dimensional surfaces that would not normally accomodate fragile single or polycrystal cells, or conventional glass/stainless steel substrate flat panel cells.

In addition, the film's light weight yields a power-to-weight ratio of 200 milliwatts per gram, 10 times that of conventional glass-type cells.

The product's light weight and flexibility allows amorphous solar cell technology to be applied to a new range of solar-powered, pollution free products.

The potential for this new techology will be dramatically demonstrated in early July when the solar film will be used to power the ''Sun Seeker'' airplane, the first solar aircraft to attempt a transcontinental flight across the United States. The Amorton Solar film will be applied to the aircraft's wings and tail to power an electric motor that will propel the one-man aircraft quietly and cleanly during its 7-day cross-country journey.

This new solar film technology is the result of Sanyo Electric's research commitment to developing commercially feasible, environmentally safe and pollution-free solar cells.

Sanyo Electric Co. Ltd. is a multinational manufacturer of electronic equipment. The Osaka-based company has 93 manufacturing, marketing, financial, service and support subsidiaries in 27 countries around the world.

For the last forty years, Sanyo has been a leading producer of audio-video equipment, information and communications systems, industrial and commercial equipment, home appliances, semiconductors and solar cells.

VANCOUVER, B.C. (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Athabaska Gold Resources Ltd. and Chevron Minerals Ltd., a unit of Chevron Corp., jointly announce that the drilling program on their Nicholas Lake Joint Venture, located 60 miles north of Yellowknife, NWT, has been placed on hold pending completion of an initial feasibility study now well underway.

The Corona/International Mahogany 400 tons per day Jolu Mine, which is a highly profitable operation in Saskatchewan with many features similar to Nicholas Lake, is being used as a model. Published costs for Jolu are C$18,000,000 capital and C$77 per short ton total operating costs. Applying these costs to Nicholas Lake with appropriate factors for location reinforces management's belief that the current drill-indicated reserve at Nicholas Lake will support a profitable operation of similar size.

Kilborn Engineering are doing a preliminary mill design and cost estimates for milling. Mine design and costing is being refined by Tonto Mining, who are the mining contractor at Jolu. Preliminary tailings dam design estimates are being done by Hardy BBT of Edmonton and environmental studies by Norecol Environmental Consultants of Vancouver.

Positive results from the current study, which is expected to be completed by mid-June will pave the way for a $3,000,000 underground bulk sample test in 1991. Underground confirmation will support final feasibility for production in 1992. In the interim, additional diamond drilling may increase the reserve and raise the planned production rate.

Approximately half of the $800,000 1990 program has been completed. This included two deep inclined diamond drill holes which intersected the mineralized zone of the Main Showing between 1263 and 1542 feet below surface. Results were highly encouraging and the downward projection of the mineralized zone was confirmed.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Temporary Time Capital Corp. a New York-based corporation providing employment services, disclosed Monday that in response to mounting financial difficulties and expected problems in meeting temporary placement personnel payroll, the company has, after evaluating various alternatives, sought to form a relationship which would hold intact the company's temporary placement business while maximizing the company's ability to return value to both its creditors and shareholders.

The company entered into a Letter of Intent today to cause the sale to Joseph T. Maloney Associates Inc., a Delaware corporation which is controlled by Joseph T. Maloney, president and chief executive officer of the company, as purchaser, of substantially all of the assets of the temporary and permanent placement business of the company, including the assets or business of the company's majority owned subsidiary Temporary Time Nursing Corp.

Specifically excluded from the assets sold will be cash, accounts receivables and other current assets. The purchase price is expected to consist of an immediate cash downpayment, four quarterly installments of $12,500 each paid over the next year, and a percentage of ''gross receipts'' (as defined in the Letter of Intent) of the purchaser generated by temporary and permanent placements paid over approximately the next five years.

The purchaser will have the option of accelerating this payment schedule. The company is in the process of engaging professionals to advise its board of directors as to the fairness of the purchase price. The purchase price is subject to an upward adjustment depending on evaluations provided by the company's advisors, but in no case shall the aggregate purchase price exceed $250,000.

To assure a smooth transition, the letter additionally provides for immediate transfer to the purchaser of all the responsibilities and duties of operating and managing the employment businesses of TTCC, except the obligation of payroll services.

Except with respect to the transfer of responsibilities, the letter is not intended to be binding on the company or the purchaser but is only a statement of the intention of the parties to proceed toward the execution of a Definitive Purchase Agreement which will include, as necessary, provisions requiring approval of the respective boards of directors of the parties and their stockholders. The parties anticipate that the Definitive Agreement will be entered into on or before July 15, 1990, and that the closing shall be on or before Dec. 15, 1990.

COLUMBIA, MD (JUNE 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Noise Cancellation Technologies Inc. (NCT), Monday announced that it will temporarily reduce the exercise price of 3,817,972 of its outstanding common stock purchase warrants (the ''Warrants'') from $1 per share to 40 cents per share for the period commencing on June 4, and ending on July 2, which period may be extended by the company for up to an additional 30 days (the ''Warrant Exercise Price Reduction Offer Period'').

Each warrant is exercisable to purchase one share of the company's common stock. During the warrant exercise price reduction offer period, holders of warrants will be able to exercise their warrants at a reduced warrant exercise price of 40 cents per share. At the conclusion of the warrant exercise price reduction offer period, the warrant exercise price will revert to $1 per share through expiration of the warrants at varying dates through Dec. 1992.

The company has determined to lower the warrants exercise price during the warrant exercise price reduction offer period to encourage exercise of the warrants. The company believes that the exercise of the warrants will be in the best interest of the company by increasing stockholders' equity.

The company's common stock is traded on NASDAQ under the symbol NCTI. The closing bid price for such common stock, as reported by NASDAQ, was $15/32 per share on May 31.

JAKARTA (JUNE 4) - Indonesia's string of policy reforms in the past years has led to a generally stronger economic performance in the 1989-90 fiscal year which ended March 31, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has said.

But the IMF warned in its latest annual report on Indonesia obtained here Monday that Indonesia's foreign debt and debt service ratio - measuring debt payments against export revenues - "remained high."

"The policy reforms implemented contributed to a generally strong macro-economic performance in 198990," the IMF report said.

The report also cited trade, financial and industrial reforms, a more effective monetary management, improved tax administration and support from aid donors - notably in the form of quick disbursing special assistance - as having helped improve the economy.

It said output growth rose to seven percent in fiscal 1989-90 from an average of under five percent in the preceding four years, while the budget and external current account deficits were reduced to under two per cent of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

"After plummeting to 2.5 percent in 1985, real GDP growth recovered to almost six percent in 1988 and over seven percent in 1989," the report said, adding that the growth had been backed by a sharp recovery in oil and gas drilling and a higher growth in the construction sector.

The construction sector provided the main impetus to the recovery, expanding by 11.4 percent in calendar 1989 compared with 7.3 in 1988 while manufacturing grew by an estimated 8.8 percent in calendar 1989 and accounted for 15.5 per- cent of the GDP that year.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - British and Commonwealth Holdings, which was once Britain's second biggest non-banking financial service group, was placed in the hands of official administrators late on Sunday, the company said.

The move, representing the biggest financial collapse to occur in the City, affects the holding company and three key subsidiaries. The group has debts exceeding 1.3 billion pounds (2.2 billion dollars).

British and Commonwealth was formerly a shipping company. During the 1980s it changed direction sharply under John Gunn who had made fortunes by developing the Exco money-broking company and the Telerate financial information system.

It encountered difficulties in disposing of unwanted assets before the October 1987 stock-market collapse, and consequently began incurring heavy debt charges.

It then proceeded with a controversial takeover of the Atlantic Computers leasing company.

On Monday, Atlantic Computers was put into administration because it was found that accounting practices in the company had not highlighted serious liabilities.

British and Commonwealth immediately wrote off 550 million pounds against the Atlantic collapse, but consequently fell into breach of covenant with some of its bond holders.

Under the recently-introduced procedure of administration, the company will be protected from receivership while attempts are made to save and sell parts of the group.

Allowing for current domestic refining of around 750,000 bd, the weekly estimated total output at 3.432 million bd compared to 3.012 million bd and a current OPEC quota of 3.14 million bd.

JAKARTA (JUNE 4) - Indonesia has won an extension of a contract to supply liquefied natural gas (LNG) to its largest Japanese buyer, Chubu Electric Power Company, press reports said here Monday.

The reports quoted the president director of Indonesia's state oil and gas company Pertamina, Faisal Abda'oe, as saying last weekend that a contract for the supply of 2.8 million tonnes of LNG between 1991 and 1994 was signed with Chubu in Tokyo on May 31.

A contract for the supply of 2.6 million tonnes of LNG signed between Chubu and Pertamina in 1987 is due to expire at the end of this year.

Chubu is Pertamina's largest LNG buyer, absorbing 4.4 million tonnes of Indonesian LNG per year. Pertamina has already delivered a total of 38 million tonnes of LNG worth 7.3 billion dollars to Chubu so far, Mr. Abda'oe said.

SEOUL (JUNE 4) - The South Korean government will aim for single-digit inflation this year, an Economic Planning Board official said Monday following an announcement that prices had soared past expectations.

"We are going to try to achieve eight percent so we can end up somewhere under 10 percent," said the official. "If we aim higher we'll end up somewhere around 12 or 13 percent."

Inflation in South Korea stood at 6.7 percent for the first five months of the year, following a 1.9 jump in prices in May. The jump shattered the government's plan to limit inflation to between five and seven per cent this year.

Critics, including angry housewives who confronted President Roh Tae-Woo last month during a walkabout in a market, charge that the real inflation figure is actually higher.

But the official said the worst was over.

"Usually most of the price increases take place between January and June," he said. "Sixty per cent of the total year increase always comes during that time."

The board in its weekend announcement blamed the five-month rise on agricultural products, especially livestock, which went up 22.6 percent.

It said that the jump had occurred before recent anti-inflation measures could take effect.

The board also put the blame on two usual government irritants - wage increases and consumerism.

It said annual household income had increased 44 per cent in 1988 and 1989, outpacing national economic growth. Sales of home electronic appliances had also raced upward and were partially to blame for the inflation rate, it said.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - Rates paid to freight shipping owners continued to ease over the past week, although traders noted signs of a recovery just ahead of the weekend.

The Baltic International Freight Futures Exchange (BIFFEX)'s Baltic Freight Index (BFI) lost 12 points on the week to stand at 1,301, having fallen below 1,300 during the week for the first time in 20 months.

On the heavily weighted U.S. Gulf to Japan grain route 52,000 tonners were accepting between 19 and 20.50 dollars per ton, down from 20.75 the previous week.

Elsewhere shipbrokers said a number of fixings were made on a private basis, notably by Soviet charterers.

Indian charterers were active in the fertilizer sector, booking vessels in the 12,000 to 20,000 ton range at 37 dollars per ton against 36 the previous week.

A 15,000 tonner booked for the same destination from Jordan obtained 18.75 dollars per ton, 25 cents better than the previous week's going rate.

Among timecharter bookings, 50,000 to 70,000 tonners enjoyed improved rates, receiving 11,500 dollars per day for return trips between Britain and the U.S. Gulf, against a 9,500 dollar per day going rate in mid-May, but vessels making Japan to Australia return trips saw their rates cut from 9,750 dollars per day the previous week to 9,350 dollars.

Observers said that a dock strike in Brazil, which began on Friday and was due to last eight days, was likely to upset the country's exports.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - Britain's exchange reserves - gold, currency and special drawing rights - rose 65 million dollars in May according to seasonally-adjusted figures released by the Treasury on Monday.

The increase followed a 98 million dollar drop in April but was well below market expectations of a rise of around 300 million dollars.

The figures indicated that there had been no major Bank of England intervention on the foreign exchange market during the month to prop up the pound, which firmed markedly from mid-May on speculation of Britain's rapid entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the European Monetary System.

On a non-seasonally adjusted basis, the reserves fell 94 million dollars in May to 38.9 billion dollars, against 39 billion at the end of April.

NEW DELHI (JUNE 4) - Five children offering sweetened water to mark a Hindu festival and two Sikh militants were killed and some 35 others injured in three successive bomb blasts in the Punjab city of Patiala Monday, police said.

A powerful bomb hidden in a bicycle exploded around noon in a city centre where several children were distributing the traditional artifically sweetened water to motorists and other passersby on the "Ekadasi" festival.

Three children died instantly. At least 20 others were injured and rushed to hospital where two more children died of their injuries, the Press Trust of India (PTI) reported.

Police blamed the killings on Sikh separatists, who had apparently parked the bicycle near a betel nut shop at Patiala's Arya Samaj Chowk area where the sweetened water was being given away.

Shortly afterwards, two Sikh militants travelling on a scooter were blown to pieces when a bomb they were carrying exploded.

A third bomb went off opposite the government's State Bank of Patiala 15 minutes later, seriously injuring 15 people, the news agency quoted police as saying.

No further details were immediately available.

At least 910 people have died this year in the northern Indian state of Punjab where Sikh militants are campaigning violently for an independent state called Khalistan (land of the pure).

India accuses neighbouring Pakistan of arming the militants. Islamabad has denied the charge.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - Three men were arrested and were being questioned Monday in connection with the IRA killing last week of a British army recruit, police said.

A spokesman for Scotland Yard confirmed that police in London were holding a number of people in London under the Prevention of Terrorism Act in connection with "alleged Irish terrorist activities." He declined to give further details.

Speaking separately at a news conference in the central city of Tamworth, Detective Chief Superintendant Malcolm Bevington said police investigating the murder Friday of soldier Robert Davies were questioning three men.

It was unclear whether London and Tamworth police were referring to the same group of people, but the Scotland Yard spokesman noted that investigations of murders are headed by the police force in the region where the killing took place.

Mr. Bevington confirmed the three men, one of them Irish, were being held in London and questioned by his investigating team.

Mr. Davies, 19, was gunned down at a train station in Lichfield, in central England.

It was not immediately known what had started the blaze, which was cutting a path about 100 metres (yards) wide, fanned by dry winds and a prolonged drought here.

Firemen said the city itself was not in any danger. A 10th century Byzantine monastery with celebrated frescoes in the pine woods was also said not to be under threat.

Two Canadair firefighter planes, nine firetrucks, and about 70 firefighters as well as many local residents were fighting the blaze.

PRAGUE (JUNE 4) - The president of U.S. auto giant General Motors' European operation on Monday officially put a proposal for a joint venture in Bratislava to Czechoslovak Steelworks, Metallurgy and Electronics Minister Slavomir Stracar.

General Motors is the second auto maker after Volkswagen of West Germany to put forward a joint venture proposal for production and assembly of cars and light utility vehicles at the BAZ plant in the Slovakian town, the CTK news agency said.

Ford of the United States and Toyota of Japan are also expected to put forward proposals soon, the agency added.

The General Motors proposal was presented to Mr. Stracar by the president of General Motors Europe, Robert Eaton.

The Bratislava plant has hitherto produced only parts for Skoda cars, but it is planned that from 1993 it will assemble, and later produce, vans and small trucks and minibuses, aiming for production of 30,000 vehicles a year by 1995-96.

The Czechoslovak authorities are also holding talks with several western auto makers, including Volkswagen and Renault of France, on the future of the Skoda car plant at Mlada Boleslav north of Prague, but no final decision has yet been taken.

Manama (JUNE 4) - Abu Dhabi has allocated 500 million dollars for plans to raise its sustainable crude oil production capacity by some 600 barrels per day (pd) to around 2.2 Million bd by 1995, it was reported Monday.

The authortative weekly Middle East Economic Survey (Mees) said 400,00 bd will come from onshore fields and 200,000 bd from offshore fields.

Mees said the additinal oil from the offshore fields will not be excessively costly since essentially it represents a consolidation, through additional in-fill drilling and upgrading of water injection systems, of capacity for which surface production and export facilities are already in place.

The Cyprus-based weekly said it learned that as far as onshore oil fields are concerned, plans envisage an expansion of sustainable capacity by 385,000 bd to a total of 1.125 million bd by 1995.

The largest expansion will be at the Bab onshore field, where capacity will be increased by 210,000 bd from the current 40,000 bd.

Mees said this will be accomplished in gradual stages by 1995, mainly through infill drilling any tying in the wells to already installed surface production facilities.

ALGIERS (JUNE 4) - Some 7,000 oil workers have gone on strike complaining of the way their company is managed, and demanding its reintegration into the Sonatrach oil company, the APS agency said Monday.

The workers of the Entreprise Nationale des Travaux aux Puits (ENTP), which was set up after the restructuring of Sonatrach and is mainly involved in drilling and maintenance work at oilwells, went on strike Friday.

The strike has halted maintenance work and drilling equipment. The stopping of the drills alone is costing some 1.26 million dinar (159,500 dollars) a day, APS said.

The strikers are calling for an enquiry into the management of the company, which is based at Hassi Messaoud in the south, the country's main oil producing centre. They also want it re-absorbed into Sonatrach.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - Britain should be producing two million cars a year by the end of the century, against 1.3 million last year, Trade and Industry Secretary Nicholas Ridley said Monday.

He was speaking at the laying of the foundation stone of a new Toyota plant at Burnaston near Derby in central England.

The Toyota plant, costing 700 million pounds (1.2 billion dollars), will produce 200,000 cars a year and is expected, along with British plants of other Japanese makers including Nissan, to help give a new lease of life to British car production.

The Burnaston plant is to employ more than 3,000 people, with most of the cars it produces going for export.

Toyota is also investing 140 million pounds (237 million dollars) in an engine plant at Deeside in North Wales, which is to employ 300 people.

Mr. Ridley said Toyota's investment would create even more jobs in Britain, which he said could offer low costs, excellent workers and good productivity, now outstripping even that of Japan.

He said that cars produced in Britain could eventually be sold in Japan, and stressed that Britain would be an excellent base for Europe with the coming of the European Economic Community single market.

But Toyota officials said that the two British plants were likely to import a large proportion of the components they needed from Japan.

ISLAMABAD (JUNE 4) - Pakistan's defence spending increased from 46.55 billion rupees (2.12 billion U.S.) to 52.55 billion rupees (2.38 billion U.S.) in the fiscal year to June, an official economic review said Monday.

The review also said that the nation's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth was estimated at 5.2 percent.

The pre-budget economic survey issued by the finance ministry said the total budgeted expenditure during July 1989 to June 1990 was 216.63 billion rupees (9.88 billion U.S.), eight percent higher than the previous year.

The 5.2 percent GDP growth was due to a 4.0 percent growth in agriculture, down from the previous year's 7.1 percent, and a 7.9 percent increase in large-scale manufacturing.

The country's balance of payments improved with the current account deficit declining from 1.93 billion dollars to 1.70 billion dollars.

The improvement was attributed to a 22 percent growth in non-primary exports, while primary exports of rice and cotton declined because of relatively poor harvests.

Pakistan's external debt was 15.6 billion dollars, 9.9 percent higher than the previous year.

Foreign exchange reserves were expected to be 141 million dollars by the end of the current fiscal year ending in June against reserves of 12 million dollars last year.

Small-scale manufacturing grew 8.4 percent, and oil production rose by about 12.9 per cent, touching 52,808 barrels per day.

The country spends substantial amounts on oil imports, although exact figures were unavailable).

There were originally four shareholders, Kockums' Australian subsidiary Kockums Pacific, the Australian Industry Development Corp. (AIDC), Wormalds and U.S. group CBI.

Kockums had previously bought out CBI and it and AIDC have now acquired Wormald's stake, giving them each a 50 percent holding.

JAMMU, India (JUNE 4) - Pakistani troops Monday shot dead four Indian soldiers on the border in Kashmir as seven people died in renewed Moslem militant violence elsewhere in the region, Indian authorities said.

The Indian soldiers were killed when Pakistani troops without provocation fired from across the Line of Control at different places in Poonch border area of Kashmir Monday, defence officials said.

They gave no details of the incidents on the control line set up at the end of the third and last India-Pakistan war in late 1971.

Meanwhile, Moslem militants threw a powerful hand grenade in a raid on a paramilitary post in Srinagar on Monday, the officials said, adding that two troopers were killed in the attack in the summer capital of northern Jammu and Kashmir state.

Elsewhere in Srinagar, suspected militants shot dead an unidentified civilian and hanged two more on trees, the officials said.

In another incident in Srinagar, paramilitary troopers opened fire and shot dead two people and injured two more when suspected militants threw hand grenades at their post on Monday, they said.

Witnesses said a six-year-old child was among the dead.

Moslem militants, fighting for the secession of Kashmir from India, meanwhile telephoned journalists and claimed that they had killed a dozen people in a hand grenade attack on a van carrying personnel from the elite National Security Guards in Srinagar's Nogam area.

There was no official confirmation of the claim.

More than 600 people have died this year in violence linked to the militancy in Jammu and Kashmir, mostly in the state's Moslem-majority Kashmir valley.

Tel Aviv (JUNE 4) - A small oil find confirmed Monday off Israel's southern shore may indicate a huge underwater sea of oil running deep along the length of Israel's shore gepological experts stated Monday.

Scientists at the Energy Ministry in Jerusalem confirmed that oil had been struck at a rig a few kilometres of the Ashdod coast, which had drillled to the unprecedently deep level of 5,000 metres. Sources at the Energy Ministry late Monday pointed to detailed studies indicating sizeable amounts of oil at this level.

A column of red flame and thick black smoke rose above the Yam (Sea) 2 rig as oil men burnt the gushing jet of oil estimated at some 200 barrels a day. The experimental drilling site is operated by the Isramco company in which American oil magnate Armand Hammer is a major partner.

Preliminary findings indicated that the Yam 2 site could deliver some 10,000 barrels a day, approximately 7 percent of Israel's expected 1990 consumption, but industry sources stated that if studies prove accurate the overall level of reserves could have a dramatic and crucial impact on Israel's economy.

The news of the find came too late to influence the Tel Aviv stock exchange, but rumours of oil in the past week caused large rises in the entire stock market with oil company shares rising an averge of between 7 and 10 percent on Sunday alone.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) - Secretary of State James Baker Monday praised improvements in U.S.-Greek relations when he met with Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis Monday, the first Greek head of government to visit Washington in 26 years.

Mr. Baker, after meeting for an hour at the Greek Embassy with Mr. Mitsotakis, said bilateral relations had improved substantially since the new government took office in Athens two months ago.

"What we see is a prime minister and a government who is moving expeditiously, moving aggressively to cement and improve what have historically been good relations between the United States and Greece," he said.

Mr. Mitsotakis is the first Greek Government leader to visit Washington since 1964.

He was due to meet Wednesday with President George Bush at the White House.

Mr. Baker mentioned two specific reasons for the recent improvement in U.S.-Greek relations: the initialing of a new agreement extending the leases of U.S. bases in Greece, and the recent decision by Athens to establish diplomatic relations with Israel.

Formal signing of the bases agreement is expected next month.

U.S. talks with Greece on the bases were stonewalled during the premiership of the former socialist prime minister, Andreas Papandreau.

ANKARA (JUNE 4) - Turkey's foreign minister will ask CSCE countries to make a distinction on the question of respect for human rights and the battle against terrorism in Turkey.

Foreign Minister Ali Bozer said he was confident signatory countries of the 35-member Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) Helsinki Final Act on human rights will be able to make this distinction.

In an interview with AFP before leaving for Copenhagen and the June 5-6 CSCE meeting, Mr. Bozer said he will draw attention to the need to "distinguish between respect for the rights of man and terrorist acts."

There is "confusion" between measures for the "reestablishment of order to protect territorial integrity against terrorism" and human rights, he said.

Turkey's government introduced stiff security measures April 9 in Anatolia, in southeast Turkey, an area largely populated by Kurds and a hotbed of the Kurd separatist movement in Turkey.

The measures are "necessary against movements led by those who are against the rights of man" and to ensure the personal safety of the inhabitants in this region troubled by the armed struggle of Kurd separatists, the minister said.

The "limit is very fragile" between the violation of the rights of man and the battle against terrorism, he said.

Turkey has been under criticism from Amnesty International and other monitoring organizations for detaining political prisoners and for torture of prisoners.

In late May a hunger strike spread through prisons across Turkey protesting measures limiting freedom of the press and prison conditions. Most of the nearly 700 striking prisoners were imprisoned for political crimes, many of them journalists.

Expressing regret for Turkey's tarnished international reputation regarding human rights, he said it is "very difficult to pretend that all the (CSCE) countries have arrived at an ideal level."

The minister said Turkey was determined to abide by the CSCE human rights provisions, and offered as proof of Turkey's candidature for the EEC.

ANKARA (JUNE 4) - The United Communist Party of Turkey (Tbkp) became the country's first legal communist party here Monday with the submission of founding documents to the Interior Ministry.

Addressing a news conference after the ''historic step'', Nihat Sargin, the party's founding president, said the Turkish communists had ''irreversibly ended 70 years of illegality''.

He said, ''As the historic developments in Europe have shown, there can be no true democracy without communist parties.''

Sargin and fellow communist leader Haydar Kutlu were released from prison last month after a 30-month detention following their arrival from West Germany in November 1987 to set up the Tbkp.

They are still undergoing trial for ''striving to establish the supremacy of one class over the others''.

PRETORIA (JUNE 4) - The South African government will lift the four-year-old state of emergency on Friday despite continious bloody clashes between blacks in the Natal province, sources said Monday.

Government sources told the German Press Agency dpa that authorities believed they could control the situation country with the help of normal laws.

President Frederik de Klerk last February scrapped many rules related to the state of emergency, including a ban against 33 mainly black political organisations. He lifted almost all censorship regulations and freed many detainees and political prisoners.

Observers pointed out that normal laws allow police to carry out ''preventive'' arrests in regions or towns declared ''unrest areas''. The laws allow for a person to be detained for up to 180 days, but the detention must be confirmed by after 48 hours.

LONDON (JUNE 4) - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, in advance of her trip to Moscow, said here Sunday that a unified Germany must have a military role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

She said she was not prepared to compromise on her rejection of Moscow's call for political neutrality or a non-military role for unified Germany in Nato.

Speaking on a phone-in interview show in Bbc radio, Thatcher told a caller, ''No, Britain would not accept a neutral Germany as a satisfactory result of the difficulties which we are now experiencing.''

She called Germany a ''necessary'' part of Nato, and added, ''It is vital to Western security to have a unified Germany within Nato fully militarily.''

Thatcher vowed to bring up the issue of the breakaway Baltic republics in her talks this week with Kremlin leaders, but she said her admiration for Soviet President President Mikhail Gorbachev had not diminished, despite mounting domestic criticism of him in the Soviet Union. She called him a ''remarkable'' leader who was facing difficult problems with courage and foresight.

Speaking on the anniversary of the Tiananmen Square massacre in China, Thatcher said her concerns focus now on the future of Hong Kong and her hopes that China's leaders will review their opposition to democracy reforms.

HAIFA (JUNE 4) - Whistles tooting and flags waving the destroyer Bayern sailed into Haifa port Monday becoming the first ever warship of the Federal German Navy to visit the Jewish state.

The Bayern and its 270 crew members arrived for a four-day goodwill visit in Haifa straight from a Nato exercise in the Mediterranean.

The 3,600-ton ship, which has a top speed of 30 knots, bristled with armaments and dwarfed the Israeli navy boats as it sailed into port Monday afternoon.

ROME (JUNE 4) - Voter apathy dealt a blow to Italian ecologists Monday when less than 50 percent of registered voters turned out for referendums to end hunting, and limit the use of pesticides and chemical fertilizer.

Italian law stipulates that more than 50 percent of voters must take part in a referendum to make it valid.

Only 43 percent of Italy's 46.8 million registered electorate voted in the referendum to abolish hunting, while 42.4 percent voted in the referendum to repeal a law allowing hunters to track game on private property.

The referendum to set ceilings on the use of chemicals in pesticides and fertilizers drew only 42.8 percent of voters.

The third proposal would have repealed a law allowing the Health Ministry to set the ceilings, and required Parliament to replace it with a tougher law.

Voting took place Sunday, and on Monday until 1200 GMT.

Good weather and the Pentecost (Whitsun) weekend took part of the blame for voter apathy.

Faced with a poor turnout on the first day of voting, ecologist groups organized a drive on Monday morning but still fell short of the required 50 per- cent plus one.

Ecologists blamed the established political parties for failing to get involved in the referendum and leaving the choice up to individual voters.

But the disaffection of the Italian electorate for politics in general this time worked against the "direct democracy" of the public referendum.

Environment Minister Giorgio Ruffolo has announced that he will reintroduce legislation to regulate hunting, legislation that was earlier rejected by parliament.

KHARTOUM (JUNE 4) - Rebels of the Eritrea People's Liberation Front, who are fighting Ethiopian government forces in the north of the country, Monday issued a warning to aircraft to stop landing at the besieged airport in Asmara.

A statement released by the Front said any plane ignoring the warning would ''face the consequence,'' but did not elaborate. Observers said the warning meant the rebels would prbably try to shoot down the aircraft.

The Front appears to have issued the warning to undercut attempts by the Ethiopian government to reinforce Asmara in order to ward off the imminent attack by the rebels on the city.

The Front said the Ethiopian government was using the airport under the cover of transporting relief to the starving people in the province.

The statement allegged that the aircraft bring troops and military armaments into eritrea and evacuate wounded soldiers from Eritrea for treatment in the capital, Addis Ababa.

The Front, which is fighting for the seccession of Eritrea from Ethiopia, has rejected the idea of using Asmara - the capital of Eritrea - for ferrying relief food to the estimated four million starving people in Eritrea and in the neighbouring Tigray province.

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) - Glasnost may have reduced human rights violations in the Soviet Union, but the country "has a long way to go before it achieves perfection," the president of the International Federation of Helsinki for Human Rights said Monday.

At the end of the federation's four-day meeting in Moscow, Baron Karl Von Schwartzenberg told reporters that there had been "no pressure" from the Soviet authorities during the event. The four days of debate were opened by Yelena Bonner, widow of the late Soviet dissident and scientist Andrei Sakharov.

Some participants at the conference maintained, however, that human rights violations in the Soviet Union persisted.

The violations are a "continuation of the problems of pre-glasnost days, rather than newly created problems," David Matas, vice-president of the federation's Canadian branch said.

"There are 50 to 188 identified cases of allegedly political prisoners," he said. "But people are no longer emprisoned for anti-Soviet propaganda. They are convicted of crimes of hooliganism."

He also pointed out that a proposed Soviet law to ensure greater freedom of the press had still not been enacted, that Pamyat and other openly anti-semitic organizations and individuals continued to threaten Jews, and that there were hundreds of unexplained deaths in the Red Army every year.

The Helsinki federation also rejects the official Soviet explanation concerning the disappearance of Swedish diplomat Raoul Wallenberg, who was arrested in 1944 by the Red Army in Budapest. Soviet authorities claim he died in 1947, but the federation maintains there is evidence he was alive as late as the 1970s and 1980s.

PHUM DONG, CAMBODIA (JUNE 4) - As Cambodia's cease-fire talks stalled in Tokyo, soldiers on both sides of the war said Monday they were tired of fighting and expressed hope for peace.

"Nobody wants to fight any more," Chhep, a 35-year-old Khmer Rouge soldier, told reporters at this northwestern village near Thailand, some 20 kilometers (12 miles) southwest of the Thai border town of Aranyaprathet.

The Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, which ruled Cambodia until Vietnam invaded in 1978, now forms the military backbone of a guerrilla coalition fighting Phnom Penh's Hanoi-backed government.

Speaking in a separate interview, across barbed wire marking the border between the Cambodian town of Poipet and Bapai, a village in Thailand southeast of Aranyaprathet, a Phnom Penh government soldier who identified himself as Heng, said: "We're all hoping for peace."

But Chhep and a group of his Khmer Rouge comrades also said that, whether a cease-fire were declared or not, there would be no real peace in Cambodia as long as Vietnamese troops remained in the country.

Vietnam announced it had completely withdrawn its troops from Cambodia at the end of September last year.

But the Marxist Khmer Rouge and its two non-communist allies, the followers of Prince Norodom Sihanouk and former prime minister Son Sann, said tens of thousands of Hanoi soldiers have since been fighting in Cambodia.

They were serving either in Vietnamese units or as soldiers "disguised" in Phnom Penh uniforms.

Last month U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon became the first Washington official to publicly say Vietnam still had soldiers in Cambodia, but he estimated they were probably "in the low thousands."

The Khmer Rouge soldiers here -- saying they had seen action since the announced pullout in Pailin, Sisophon and Svay Chek, in northeast Cambodia and in central Kompong Thom province -- claimed that Vietnamese soldiers had been engaged on all fronts where they had fought.

ACCRA (JUNE 4) - Ghana's head of state, Jerry Rawlings on Monday celebrated the 11th anniversary of his rise to power on Monday with a call for tolerance of opposing views.

Flight-Lieutenant Rawlings said "people who hold opposing views should be tolerated" in efforts to achieve democracy, and that those holding divergent ideas should "exhibit a genuine desire at building a new social order in our motherland."

Flt.-Lt. Rawlings, now chairman of the ruling Provitional National Defence Council (PNDC), took power on June 4, 1979 when a group of junior officers released him from jail to lead an uprising against the military government of General F.W.K. Akuffo.

He was in prison on trial for leading an abortive mutiny on May 15, 1979 during which he sought to draw attention to official corruption and injustice.

He led the government of the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) which during its three months in power carried out a socio-economic purge of the society.

Several top-ranking army officers, including three former heads of state, were executed and many people were sentenced to long jail terms for various acts against the state.

The AFRC handed power to a civilian government after general and presidential elections, but Flt.-Lt. Rawlings ousted Hilla Limann, the man to whom he handed power on December 31, 1981.

Flt.-Lt. Rawlings said those who lost their lives during the uprising had enabled the country to achieve a degree of economic recovery and political stability that is the envy of many countries.

But he warned against complacency and called on professionals to work to improve the country.

MONROVIA (JUNE 4) - The last batch of American citizens declared ''non-essential'' residents of Liberia were flown out of rebel-beleaguered Monrovia Monday, a U.S. embassy spokesman said.

The move came in response to an evacuation warning from Washington in case rebels of the National Patriotic Front storm the capital of the war-torn West African country.

The spokesman said the evacuees were flown out from a small airport in Monrovia instead of Roberts International Airport, 55 kilometres from the capital, which is under threat of rebel attack.

The Americans, whose number was not disclosed, left for Freetown in neighbouring Sierra Leone. Only essential personnel remained in Liberia, the official said.

A U.S. navy fleet of six warships carrying 2,000 marines is anchored off the Liberian coast waiting to evacuate U.S. citizens if fighting between government troops and rebel forces worsens.

Two British Royal Navy vessels were also cruising in the in the same area.

The rebels, lead by Liberian economics expert Charles Taylor, have been fighting since December to topple the government of President Samuel Doe.

SOFIA (JUNE 4) - The Bulgarian foreign debt is now 300 million dollars less than it was at the end of last year, Prime Minister Andrei Lukanov said in an interview published Monday by Socialist Party newspaper Douma.

He also said that the country's trade balance for the year through May was 500 million dollars less than the shortfall for the year through the previous May, but did not say how much the deficit was.

Referring to the foreign debt, the premier said that Bulgaria could "normalize relations with its creditors in three to five years, if the government follows a competent economic policy".

He said the gross foreign debt was now 10.3 billion dollars. Bulgaria has imposed a moratorium on repayment of principal on its foreign debt, but is continuing to pay the interest.

Mr. Lukanov also indicated that during the 1985-89 period, Bulgaria spent 23 billion dollars in foreign exchange, and had foreign-exchange income of only 15.7 billion dollars. A large part of foreign loans was intended to cover this difference.

More than 80 percent of the credits went to buy industrial equipment, spare parts and consumer products. Less than a fifth was invested in machines and equipment to restructure production, he said.

Foreign exchange income, on the order of three billion dollars in 1984, dropped to two billion by 1989 due to unfavorable international market conditions and the priority given to consumer goods, he said.

Mr. Lukanov said the country should have tightened its belt five years earlier, but -- referring to former leader Todor Zhivkov, who was ousted last November -- he said that "Zhivkov borrowed money to buy himself a few more years in power".

MEDELLIN, COLOMBIA (JUNE 3) - Colombia is being torn apart by two civil wars - one between the state and guerrilla groups, and the other between the state and the drug mafia.

Among the hardest hit by these conflicts are the Andean country's original inhabitants, the Indios, who are caught between all fronts. Now, for the first time, there are signs that this group - numbering just over 800,000 - is organising some resistance.

The house on one of the busy avenues in Envigado, one of the better off neighbourhoods on the outskirts of Medellin, is covered in grey dust from the street. The paint is peeling off the walls, heavy iron bars ensure that burglars cannot enter through the windows. Placards remind one of protest marches and music festivals held in the past.

Inside, old car seats are used as chairs, tables discarded by richer households bear old typewriters better suited for a museum.

Up to ten men and women gather here daily to continue the struggle for their people, the Indios. One of them is Francisco Rojas, a lawyer working for the National Indio Organisation (Onic).

In the garden, squatting among stones, car tires, and old pipes, and with colourful attire hanging from the clothes line, the Onic representatives from the Antioquia region, the heartland of the drug barons in western Colombia, discuss their problems.

They have left their villages and given up their traditional way of living in order to take up the political struggle in the big city.

In Antioquia, whose capital is Medellin, there are still about 10,000 Indios from four tribal groups. Most of them inhabit remote areas, living from slash-and-burn farming, fishing and hunting. Some tribes are involved in smuggling, bringing cheap electrical equipment across the border from Venezuela.

Their representatives, who joined up within Onic in 1982, are carrying on a desperate struggle to improve their living conditions.

''We are fighting against the suppression of our culture, of our language, and of our medicine. We are fighting against the fact that the government ignores existing laws, that our land is being stolen from us. We are fighting for our own schools and teachers. And we are fighting although our leaders are murdered in cold blood or thrown into prison without trial because they have become troublesome.''

Gonzalo Carupio, the Onic president in Antioquia, has not a trace of hatred in his voice. The long battle makes people long-suffering.

PAMPLONA (JUNE 4) - Tibet's spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama, on Monday praised student demonstrators in China who are marking the first anniversary of the Tianamen Square massacre.

Speaking to reporters in Pamplona, northern Spain, where he is on an official visit, he expressed admiration for the students' "determination and will to succeed".

"The bamboo curtain will soon disappear, as did the Berlin Wall", he said. He decribed the Tianamen killings a year ago as "no more than a short-lived obstacle to freedom and democracy which will eventually be swept aside".

The Dali Lama delivered his message as students across China commemorated the deaths of several hundreds in pro-democracy demonstrations last June 4.

In Beijing, hundreds of students protested at Beida university campus. In Shanghai, others broke bottles, a symbolic gesture against Deng Xiaoping, whose name means "little bottle". At the university of Wuhan, the capital of central-southern Hubei province, students played loud music and also broke bottles.

The Dalai Lama talked about "unbelievable and grave violations of human rights" in his country. In recent years he had pushed the Chinese Government closer towards dialogue "but there has been no concrete response."

He said he was seeking to find a middle ground in negotiations with China "between total independence and the present submission (of Tibet)."

The Dalai Lama was invited to Spain by the autonomous regional government of Navarra. A Spanish child, Osel Ita, considered by Tibetan monks to be the reincarnation of one of their religious leaders, went to Pamplona on Saturday to join the visitor.

The Dalai Lama also met leaders of regional political parties who have signed an accord against terrorism by the Basque separatist group ETA.

Cairo (JUNE 4) - Early parliamentary elections are expected to be held in Egypt in Autumn in the wake of a Supreme Constitutional Court ruling that the April 1987 general elections were unconstitutional, party sources said Monday.

The court ruling, which was officially published on Sunday, said the current election law favours party lists and discriminates independent candidates, who are allowed to win not more than 48 seats in the 458-seat parliament.

However, the court said all laws passed by People's Assembly (parliament) over the past three years were valid.

Egyptian President Hosny Mubarak ordered the holding of a referendum in February 1987, which led to a majority supporting the dissolution of parliament prior to the holding of a general election on the basis of a new law.

This new law had been quickly adopted in December 1986 to preempt a ruling by the Supreme Constitutional Court that general elections in 1984 had been unconstitutional because independent candidates were not allowed to stand.

Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party currently holds 346 parliamentary seats, opposition parties 95 and independents seven. An alliance of three parties hold 60 seats, of which the Moslem Brotherhood has 37, thus making it the largest opposition group.

PARIS (JUNE 4) - France is maintaining its ban on imports of British beef due to fear of the "mad cow disease" in Britain, despite an ultimatum from the European Economic Community Commission to lift the ban before 1600 GMT Monday, sources said the same day at the Agriculture Ministry here.

They added that the ministry did not plan any reconsideration of the decision before a special meeting of EEC agriculture ministers on Wednesday that will discuss the problem.

Ministry sources said that since there is no scientific certainty about the disease and its possible effects on human beings, France was determined to get further information before deciding on reversing the ban, which West Germany has also imposed.

The British claim the ban is actually a protective measure, illegal under EEC rules, and the Commission agrees.

"Mad cow disease", more formally known as bovine spongiform encephalopathy is a degenerative disease of the brain in cows and bulls.

(In Brussels, the EEC Commission indicated Monday evening that it had not received any response from France or West Germany to its ultimatum to drop the ban.

(A Commission spokesman said the body is expected to decide on Wednesday at its weekly meeting to move to take the two countries to the European Court of Justice for violating Community rules. However, EEC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry said he "hoped and expected" that the agriculture ministers' special meeting on Wednesday would reach a "political agreement" on the issue.

(The spokesman added that the Commission had sent a telex to Italy on Friday warning it against following the French and West German lead in banning imports of British beef.)

BANGKOK (JUNE 4) - Thousands of Shia Moslems rioted over the weekend in southern Thailand before the first anniversary of the death of Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, television reported on Monday.

Police were attacked when they tried to disperse a crowd of 10,000 Moslems on Sunday at the Kru-ze Mosque outside Pattani city, army-run Channel 5 said in its evening newscast.

Groups of young people seized and beat local police officers after several young Moslem leaders reported to be local students made speeches to "whip up discontent" in the crowd, the report said.

Pattani's deputy superintendent Colonel Prasert Sasadeephan, a Moslem, was attacked and seriously injured when he tried to negotiate with the mob to free his officers, the television said.

According to the television, "tension was running high" in Pattani and the situation appeared to be "deteriorating" after young Moslem leaders told the mob to "capture dead" local officials who tried to break up the protest, and to "attack all Thai Buddhists" who came near the mosque.

The southern 4th Army called an urgent meeting in neighboring Yala province late Sunday to devise security measures in the wake of the riot.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 4) - The trial of 25 people accused of genocide or complicity to commit genocide during last December's revolution resumes Tuesday, the official Rompres news agency said on Monday.

On May 7, authorities decided to try four leaders of Romania's former communist regime on charges of genocide together with 21 other defendants accused of complicity to commit genocide. But after four days of hearings, the trial was adjourned until June 5 for new evidence to be gathered.

The charges are related to the repression of the demonstration in the western Romanian city of Timisoara, which triggered the overthrow of dictator Nicolae Ceaucescu.

The four members of the Ceaucescu regime on trial for "genocide" are Ion Coman, a former member of the executive political committee of the Communist Party; Ilie Matei, secretary of the party's central committee; Cornel Pacoste, vice prime minister; and Radu Balan, first secretary of the Communist Party for the region of Timis.

The 21 whose trial began on March 2 and has been adjourned twice, on March 16 and April 12, are all members of the old regime's secret police, the Securitate, and the militia.

Since the death penalty was abolished after the execution of Nicolae Ceasescu and his wife Elena, the accused face a maximum of life imprisonment.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) - The International Monetary Fund (IMF) announced Monday it approved a three-year 112.8 million dollar standby loan for Mozambique to help the African nation finance an economic growth program.

Despite difficulties created by the armed confllict with the National Mozambican Resistance, or RENAMO, the Mozambique Government's policies have boosted national incomes and consumption and laid the groundwork for improving the economy, the IMF reported.

The results of the Maputo government's efforts over the last few years have encouraged the government to press ahead with another program aimed at accelerating agricultural and manufacturing production and exports.

The IMF enhanced structural adjustment facility (ESAF) funding will go toward drawing more foreign investment to Mozambique and giving local business greater autonomy, the IMF said.

The first 12.1 million dollar ESAF installment in June will go toward raising the real rate of economic growth to six percent from an estimated 3.2 per cent in 1989 and to halve the 1989 18 percent inflation rate.

KUALA LUMPUR (JUNE 4) - Malaysia will set up a trade commissioner's office in Vietnam by the end of this year to enable the Malaysian private sector to exploit the Vietnamese market, a senior official said Monday.

The deputy secretary general of Trade and Industry, Asmat Kamaluddin, said that Malaysia was negotiating with the Vietnamese authorities to set up the office in Ho Chin Minh city.

He said that the construction industry sector was one of the areas with potential for Malaysian investors to exploit in Vietnam.

Mr. Asmat delivered a keynote address at a two-day conference on "Exploiting the potential of the Vietnam Market" on behalf of the trade and industry minister, Rafidah Aziz.

In the speech, Ms. Rafidah said that Malaysia imported more than 108.5 million Malaysian dollars (40.2 million U.S.) worth of natural rubber and latex, paper and paper products, ferrous waste scrap and crude vegetable material from Vietnam.

Exports totalled 29.2 million dollars (10.8 million U.S.), mainly sugar, molasses and honey, lime, cement, machinery and equipment and fertilisers.

She said that Taiwan and South Korea had already taken advantage of these opportunities by increasing commercial links in Vietnam.

The conference organised by the London-based Institute for International Research, is being attended by about 40 participants, mainly from financial institutions and the textile and tobacco industries.

EVREUX, FRANCE (JUNE 4) - Prince Charles visited the Claude Monet museum here Monday and painted watercolors, museum curator Gerald Van der Kemp said.

The Prince of Wales arrived late in the morning, accompanied by British painter Derek Hill and the British Ambassador to Paris, Sir Ewan Fergusson at the place where the famous French impressionist lived and died in 1926.

The museum was closed to the public Monday while the heir to the British throne and his guests dined on the original crockery of the renowned painter.

In the afternon Prince Charles installed himself in the famous garden of the residence, now in full bloom, and painted in watercolours.

After tea, the Prince left for London, "enchanted by his visit," the curator said, adding that he had found the Prince gifted "with a lot of artistic talent."

LAGOS (JUNE 4) - The review of cases of persons being held under a Nigerian law providing for the renewable detention without trial of people considered a national security risk officially started here Monday.

Although the exact number of those held under "Decree 2" has not been officially disclosed, unconfirmed sources put the figure at about 200.

A committee consisting of the justice minister, a retired judge, the director of the prison service, a top military officer, religious leaders and a representative of women started Monday a series of individual case reviews.

The committee, inaugurated by the government on March 13, will make recommendations to the government if it is satisfied that detention is no longer necessary.

Under the law, promulgated in 1984 by the previous military regime of Muhammadu Buhari, any person considered a security risk to the nation can be hled without trial for an initial renewable period of six weeks.

In its old form, before pressure from civil rights groups, religious leaders and other bodies forced an amendment, the law prvided for an initial renewable detention period of six months.

The government's decision to set up the panel was a demonstration of its intention not to use the statutory power of detention given by Decree 2 except in proven cases of threats to national security, Prince Bola Ajibola, the minister of justice, had said at the inauguration of the committee.

LAGOS (JUNE 4) - Nigeria Airways announced Monday that it had indefinitely suspended flights to Liberia, where rebels are fighting the overthrow of President Daniel Doe.

In view of the current situation in that West African country, it would be economically very unwise to continue to fly there, a Nigeria Airways spokesman said.

A Nigeria Airways scheduled flight to Monrovia on Sunday could not land at Robertsfield international airport, 35 miles (55 kilometres) from the capital, the spokesman added.

Adequate contingency plans were being made for the evacuation of Nigerians living in Liberia if the need arose, the Nigerian government said in an official statement here Saturday.

Mr. Doe paid a one-day visit to Nigeria last May 7 during which he requested President Ibrahim Babangida for assistance to solve "certain urgent problems", an official source said.

BEIRUT (JUNE 4) - Some 10,000 fundamentalist Shiites hailed Ayatollah

Ruhollah Khomeini and shouted hatred for Israel Monday as the Hezbollah militia marked the first anniversary of the death of Iran's spiritual leader.

Men in black shirts beat their chests in a traditional gesture of grief and shouted their allegiance to the imam's successor Ayatollah Ali Khamenei in an emotion-charged rally at Bir al-Abed square in the southern Shiite suburbs.

Several speakers, including the spiritual leader of Lebanon's fundamentalist Shiites Sheikh Mohammad Hussein Fadlallah, took to a podium under a giant portrait of Ayatollah Khomeini to pay tribute to him and denounce Israel.

"It is not by tears and sorrow that we must mark the imam's death but by intensifying the struggle against the Zionists and forces of world oppression," said Sheikh Fadlallah, whose arrival drew a fervent response from the crowd.

Hezbollah officials declined to estimate the attendance at the rally organised at the group's stronghold here, but correspondents said the crowd numbered some 10,000.

The pro-Iranian group also called a general strike in Syrian-controlled west Beirut that was reportedly only partially enforced.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 4) - Police fired birdshot at squatters who stoned council workmen bulldozing their shacks near Tokoza black township south-east of here Monday, police here said Monday.

Johan van der Merwe, chairman of the management committee of the nearby white town of Alberton, told the South African Press Association (SAPA): "We cannot allow people to squat on private land and just demand to stay on the land."

He said the squatters had been given notice to move on Friday but had refused to leave.

Squatter support committee leader Prince Mhlambi told SAPA around 80 policemen had taken part in the actual demolition, a charge Mr. Van Der Mwerwe denied.

Mr. Mhlambi said: "We don't know what will happen at the end of the day, but we are prepared to protect our people from forced removal."

PRAGUE (JUNE 4) - West German electronics and telecommunications group Siemens signed a preliminary contract here on Monday with Czechoslovak firm Tesla Karlin for supplying digitalized telephone exchanges, the two companies told a news conference.

Siemens officials said they had won the contract in competition with French group Alcatel and Ericsson of Sweden.

The contract, to be formalized in September following the June 8 elections and formation of a new government here, bears on joint production starting in 1991 of digitalized EWSD-type telecommunications systems, in an initial phase for 350,000 subscribers a year, and later for 500,000 a year.

It provides for creation of a joint venture. The officials said it had not yet been possible to sign the final contract because of the "absence of certain legal provisions".

West Germany is to sign an agreement with Czechoslovakia in the near future on protection of investments and transfer of profits.

In the joint venture, Siemens will contribute technological know-how, supply foreign currency in the form of loans, and train Czechoslovak engineers in modern techniques.

The Czechoslovak postal and telecommunications minister, Robert Martinko, said the agreement should serve as a model for future cooperation with other investors.

BEIJING (JUNE 4) - A first group of 210 Chinese Moslems left Beijing Monday for the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported.

The pilgrimage was organised by the Chinese Islamic Association, NCNA said, adding that this was the seventh group of pilgrims to visit the Islamic holy city since such trips were permitted to resume in 1979.

This year, a total of 1,500 Chinese Moslems are expected to travel to Mecca, most of them from the northwestern provinces and autonomous regions of Xinjiang, Gansu, Qinghai and Ningxia.

The official Chinese press has recently blamed the rise of "separatism" in Xinjiang partly on contacts between Chinese Moslems and those from other countries, particularly during such pilgrimages.

Riots blamed on "Moslem separatists" who want to found an independent "Republic of Turkestan" officially left 22 dead in April in Baren, south of the far northwestern city of Kashgar.

Issa Mahmud Kong Qingtang, secretary general of the Chinese Islamic Association, said there was an increasing number of requests by Moslems to visit Mecca, but added that the association would continue to organise the pilgrimages "in a planned way."

China says it has a total of 14 million Moslems, but scholars say the number could be as high as 20 million.

MONROVIA (JUNE 4) - Three commercial airline companies which were still operating in Liberia on Monday suspended flights to Roberts international airport, 35 miles (55 kilometres) from here, airline sources said.

(In Lagos, Nigeria Airways announced a similar decision on Monday.)

KLM, Sabena, British Airways and Air Guinea suspended flights to Robertsfield. Meanwhile only Air Guinea with a smaller aircraft, is making calls at the Spriggs Payne airport, in Monrovia.

Ghana Airways, Swissair, Air Afrique and Zambian Airways suspended flights to Monrovia last week. Spriggs Payne, normally used to accommodate domestic flights, does not have the capacity for bigger aircraft.

The sources said they took the decision in the wake of repeated rebel threats to take over the airport.

Unconfirmed sources said shooting was heard in a town 10 miles (16 kilometres) away from the airport on the highway to Buchanan which has been under rebel control in the last two weeks.

NAIROBI (JUNE 5) - The United Nations Environment Programme (Unep) bestowed Tuesday its prestigious annual Sasakawa International Environment Prize posthumously on Francisco Chico Mendes Filho, the Brazilian Amazon conservationist murdered in 1987.

The award ceremony was set to be held in Mexico City later Tuesday to mark annual World Environment Day, the Nairobi-based organisation said.

Chico Mendes, the secretary of a rubber tappers' union in Brazil, was killed in December 1987 at the bidding of groups opposed to his efforts to protect the Amazon rain forest from destruction by government-backed ranchers.

The prize money of 200,000 dollars will be equally divided between two foundations continuing Chico Mendes' work, the Conselho Nacional dos

HAVANA (JUNE 4) EFE - With a strong hint of economic hard times ahead for his country, Cuban leader Fidel Castro has said he is confident that the Soviet Union will continue to stand by its long-time Communist ally in the Caribbean.

"The USSR has maintained firm its links of solidarity," Castro emphasized Sunday, as Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev wound up a four-day summit in Washington with his U.S. counterpart George Bush.

In a speech to Cuban workers reported by the official AIN news agency, Castro acknowledged that despite their manifest good will, the Soviets' own economic difficulties have had a negative impact on trade ties between the two countries.

But the veteran Cuban leader reiterated his hard-line stance against political liberalization and free-market economic reforms such as those those undertaken in the Soviet Union under Gorbachev.

"There is no way of conceiving of our country's independence, our country's sovereignty, our country's future without socialism and socialism is the essence of our revolution," he said.

Castro blamed the United States, which has maintained a trade embargo against Cuba since 1961, for "depriving us of resources essential for development."

"We must be prepared for these and even greater difficulties ahead," the Cuban leader warned. "If exceptional circumstances require us to take exceptional measures, then we will apply the principle of the three musqueteers: one for all and all for one."

"If more difficult moments should come+ Cuba would prioritize agricultural self-sufficiency, food production and foreign currency-earning industries to ride out the crisis, Castro vowed."

Asuncion (JUNE 4) EFE - Top officials from the 32 member countries of the Organization of American States (OAS) were due to open their annual meeting Monday with the region's economic crisis likely to top the agenda.

Concern over the prospect of scare development funds being redirected towards East Europe as former communist states move towards a market economy comes on top of Latin America's long-standing dlrs 412 billion foreign debt that has placed a stranglehold on the region's economies.

But U.S. trade official Carla Hills is expected to direct her efforts during the meeting in the Paraguayan capital towards drumming up support for a U.S. attack on European Community agricultural subsidies in the next round of the Uruguay talks on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

During an informal meeting Sunday, delegation chiefs exchanged views on the possibility of welcoming Cuba back to the OAS following the expulsion of the Marxist Caribbean nation in 1962.

According to OAS Secretary-General Joao Clemente Baena Soares, the Rio Group, which includes Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela and Uruguay, favors moves to bring Cuba in from the cold.

But the United States reiterated its hardline stance on the communist government of Cuban President Fidel Castro.

U.S. ambassador to Paraguay Luigi Einaldi Sunday ruled out any immediate change of heart by Washington towards Cuba unless the government of Fidel Castro stopped +supporting armed elements in a hemisphere seeking peace and democracy+ and allowed Cubans +to elect their own government+.

Einaldi's remarks contrasted strongly with those of Colombian Foreign Affairs Minister Julio Londono who argued Sunday that the +OAS should unite all American states regardless of any class of discrimination+.

Although not on the official agenda, any proposal on Cuba's readmission is unlikely to prosper with former British colonies in the Caribbean likely to fall in line with the United States.

The Parguayan government rejected visa applications from Cuban journalists to cover the OAS' 20th general assembly.

The question of the OAS' own economic crisis was also uppermost in Sunday's informal talks.

The United States, which shoulders 66 percent of the OAS budget, has fallen behind in payments of its dlrs 75 million quota.

Washington offered a crumb recently by announcing it would pay dlrs 2 million into OAS coffers in the near future, but at the same time made known its intention to renegotiate a drop in the U.S. contribution to the regional organization's finances.

The Mexican delegation called for a restructuring of relations between the OAS economic giants, Canada and the United States, and the organization's poorer neighbors.

Meanwhile, Trinidad and Tobago spearheaded concern among the Caribbean states over Haiti's failure to organize democratic elections following the ouster of Gen. Prosper Avril earlier this year.

This year's OAS General Assembly already stands as a diplomatic triumph for Paraguay which was elected to host the meeting in recognition of its return to democracy after the ouster of the 35-year dictatorship of Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in a military coup in February 1989.

Paraguayan President Andres Rodriquez won his democratic kudos in free elections three months after Stroessner was deposed.

BEIJING (JUNE 4) EFE - Foreign journalists and photographers were in Beijing on Monday to present a complaint to the Chinese government after being beaten by security forces while covering the first anniversary of the Tiananmen Square massacre.

Several members of the foreign press were detained Monday near the square while at least six were beaten by police Sunday night during student pro-democracy protests at Beijing University.

Four other journalists and a television crew was detained for several hours Sunday night and police broke a television camera.

Students at Beijing University, the largest in the country, threw bottles at police from dormitory windows and chanted pro-democracy slogans Sunday night on the eve of the anniversary of the massacre.

The university was a coordinating center for last year's mass demonstrations and Sunday's incident was the first direct student challenge to the government since the pro-democracy movement was bloodily crushed by troops and tanks in Tiananmen Square last June 4.

Hundreds reportedly died in the crackdown.

At least two Dutch citizens were arrested as they left the campus on Sunday.

The university was quiet Monday as was Tiananmen Square which has been closed to the public since last week in a bid to prevent commemoration protests.

BUDAPEST (JUNE 4) EFE - Hungary's trade denominated in Soviet rubles dropped to 28.9 percent of its total trade in the first quarter of this year, compared to 43.7 percent in the same period last year, officials said Monday.

Ruble-denominated trade in the first quarter of 1990 was 2.2 billion rubles (dlrs 1.3 billion), a reduction of 836 million rubles from the period last year.

Western-currency trade rose from 56.3 percent to 71.1 percent of the total according to the International Economic Relations Ministry.

Hungary decided to reduce its ruble-denominated exports beginning in January this year.

Meanwhile, the process of privatization and the influx of Western capital has also contributed to the shift in trade patterns, the ministry said.

Hungary ran up a dlrs 208 million trade surplus in the first quarter of this year, compared to a dlrs 4 million surplus in the same period of 1989.

Trade increased with members of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development and with the European Community (EC).

Exports to the EC rose to dlrs 543.1 million in the first quarter this year, against dlrs 448.5 million in the period last year.

Imports from the EC were dlrs 482.8 million, against dlrs 447 million a year earlier.

LUANDA (JUNE 4) EFE - Zairean military planes circled Angolan skies non-stop Monday, particularly above UNITA rebel strongholds in the north of the country, a high-ranking Angolan military officer told the official Angop news agency.

The officer, Colonel Joao Lourenco, accused Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko of "partiality in the process of mediation for peace in Angola".

Lourenco charged Zaire with allowing UNITA guerrillas, led by Jonas Savimbi, to use a Congo river port in Zaire to unload military supplies from the United States, which sends the rebels millions of dollars worth of supplies each year.

He also claimed that the Ivory Coast and Morocco give "all types of aid" to the guerrillas as part of an international conspiracy to overthrow the Angolan government.

Mobutu until recently served as the official mediator between the Marxist Angolian government of President Jose Eduardo dos Santos and UNITA, which has waged a 15-year-long civil war against the government.

Military officials said Monday that they were increasingly worried over stepped-up UNITA attacks in the Lunda Norte province, rich in diamond mines, and on oil deposits north of the capital.

Angola depends on oil and diamonds for 90 per cent of its export earnings.

Civil war broke out in Angola as soon as it won independence from Portugal in 1975, and all attempts at peace talks have failed.

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) EFE - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher are to meet Thursday in Moscow to discuss the results of the superpower summit, Soviet officials said Monday.

The two leaders, as well as signing various cooperation agreements, are expected to discuss many of the issues raised between Gorbachev and U.S. President George Bush at last week's Washington summit, the Soviet Foreign Ministry announced.

The future role of a unified Germany in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the thorniest topic tackled at the summit, is likely to prompt wrangling between Thatcher and Gorbachev when they meet.

Thatcher is fiercely opposed to a united Germany remaining neutral in Europe or any deal whereby it is included in NATO's political structure but not its military command.

Bush, whose position is close to Thatcher's, admitted Sunday that he and Gorbachev could not agree on the Germany in NATO question.

Another bone of contention between Thatcher and Gorbachev is likely to be their rigid positions on South African apartheid.

London believes that South Africa is already taking positive steps to dismantle its system of racial segregation and Thatcher wants to lift some economic sanctions to encourage further reforms.

Moscow recommends a wait-and-see approach, maintaining all sanctions until it is clear that the changes implemented by South African President F.W. de Klerk are a sincere move toward social reform.

The two leaders will sign economic and industrial cooperation agreements which will remain in effect until the year 2000.

They will also sign an agreement aimed at having British experts prepare Soviet businessmen for an open market economy, as well as accords to open cultural centers in the two countries.

Thatcher is also to meet Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov on Friday and, at her own request, Defense Minister Mariscal Dmitri Yazov, Soviet officials said.

The British leader will make a less formal visit on Saturday to the Ukrainian city of Kiev, some 600 km southwest of Moscow, to take part in cultural events.

From there she will travel to the Armenian town of Leninakan, devastated by earthquakes in 1988, where she will open a British-built school.

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) EFE - Tens of thousands of people waving Ukrainian flags and shouting pro-independence chants protested outside the Ukrainian Supreme Soviet building in Kiev Monday after the election of Communist hardliner Vladimir Ivashko as president of the republic's Supreme Soviet.

The press service of the Ukrainian nationalist movement Rukh said that Ivashko, Ukrainian Communist Party chief and a member of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, was chosen by 278 votes to 52.

However, 100 opposition deputies boycotted the vote, saying that the republic's Communist Party boss should not be allowed to become Supreme Soviet president as well.

Ivashko said later Monday that he might resign from his post as the republic's party chief and keep the job to which he had just been elected.

The opposition deputies said that officials inside the Supreme Soviet building cut the power to their microphones when they tried to read out a statement against Ivashko and that live broadcast of the proceedings on Ukrainian television was also cut.

Rukh said that the opposition members then read out their statement with the help of loudspeakers.

Ivashko was chosen as Ukrainian Communist party chief last September and was elected to the Central Committee two months later.

He is bitterly opposed to the economic reforms proposed by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev last month which he has described as "a leap into the abyss".

ALGIERS (JUNE 4) EFE - A miner rescued from an Algerian mine which flooded at the weekend, leaving dozens of workers dead, said Monday that emergency exits were badly maintained and miners had noticed signs of earth tremors a full nine months before disaster struck.

Men working underground at the Jerzet Yusef lead and zinc mine had noticed cracks and fissures in the rock face, signs that the ground was unstable, at least nine months before the mine shaft flooded, said Said Bukalkuf, one of only three men to be rescued alive.

A mining company spokesman said that Saturday's disaster could have been caused by a slight seismic movement which was not noticed above ground.

At least 27 miners are believed to have drowned or been crushed to death, the spokesman said.

Foreign and Algerian rescue teams pushed ahead Monday with rescue efforts to save missing miners but the spokesman said there was little hope of finding anyone else alive.

The collapse came as water filled 270 meters of the 320-meter shaft at the mine in the region of Setif, 235 km east of the capital.

OTTOWA (JUNE 4) EFE - Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney Monday called an emergency meeting of the country's 10 provincial premiers in a bid to break the deadlock over the constitutional crisis that threatens to tear the country apart.

Three provinces -- Newfoundland, Manitoba and New Brunswick -- have refused to ratify a 1987 constitutional amendment which recognizes the French-speaking province of Quebec as a "distinct society" and gives it special powers.

But since the amendment, known as the Meech Lake accord, was signed three years ago, the three dissenting provinces have all changed governments and said they are now unwilling to approve the amendment.

Mulroney, who wants the Meech Lake accord ratified before June 23, warned Monday that if Quebec decides to secede and form an independent state, the rest of Canada could disintegrate with some provinces joining the United States.

Earlier Monday, Quebec's Prime Minister Robert Bourassa warned that the province would not accept any tampering with the accord, since it represented the minimum conditions for Quebec's acceptence of the constitution.

+What is at stake is not only the unity of the country but the credibility of the constitutional process,+ Bourassa said.

Quebec is the Canada's second-largest province and contains a quarter of the country's population.

TEGUCIGALPA (JUNE 4) - A Honduran labor leader Monday claimed the murder of two union activists last week was an attempt to intimidate the labor movement, and was the work of "the eternal enemies of union organizations".

The murdered activists were Francisco Javier Bonilla and Ramon Antonio Briceno.

Bonilla, a former president of the social security workers union, was shot dead Thursday.

MEXICO CITY (JUNE 4) EFE - Over 20,000 children die daily from eating contaminated food, and governments are to blame, the United Nations Children's Fund's (UNICEF) executive director, James P. Grant, said Monday.

Grant laid the blame for the child death toll on governments who "do not take sufficient measures to avoid food and water contamination."

The UNICEF boss was speaking at a meeting of United Nations organizations gathered in the Mexican capital to celebrate World Environment Day on Tuesday.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari will head Tuesday's conference entitled A Better Planet for the Children.

Organizers thought Mexico City was the ideal venue to discuss the theme as it is widely considered the most over-populated, contaminated city on the planet.

Mustafa K. Tolp, the director general of the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP), said he would Tuesday morning announce a permanent ecological defense program.

The annual destruction of millions of trees is a grave cause for concern, and it is essential that all nations promote "healthy industry" to avoid destroying the earth's ozone layer, Tolp added.

SANTIAGO (JUNE 4) EFE - The bodies of eight men, allegedly killed by Chilean security forces working for the then-military government in late 1973, have been found in a mass grave, Interior Minister Enrique Krauss said Monday.

Krauss said a search for more bodies was underway where the corpses were found, near the port of Pisagua, 1,909 km north of Santiago.

Pisagua was the site of a concentration camp for political prisoners following the coup led by Gen. Augusto Pinochet which toppled a Marxist president, Salvador Allende, in September 1973.

Judge Nelson Munoz ordered the search after the Roman Catholic human rights organization, the Vicariate of Solidarity, Friday reported the location of the grave to authorities based on information from an anonymous informant.

Vicariate lawyer Rosemarie Bornard said Monday that more bodies were expected to be recovered.

The eight bodies were found in a grave 15 meters long, two meters wide and two meters deep.

The corpses, with bullet holes in the thorax, were blindfolded and their hands were tied behind their backs.

Bornard said identifying the victims would be easy because the dryness of the desert where they were buried had preserved the bodies.

Ex-prisoners and human rights groups charge that between 27 and 30 people were executed at the concentration camp, most of them leftist party leaders or Allende government officials.

A lawyer for the Human Rights Committee of the northern city of Iquique said the case could lead to the prosecution of military officers for "illegal burial."

The lawyer, Carlos Vila, said that in late 1973 Army general Carlos Forestier, now retired, was in charge of the region where the concentration camp was located.

Lieut. Col. Manuel Larrain was head of the camp, Vila added.

Pinochet, who handed over power to elected civilian President Patricio Aylwin in March, has warned of "the end of the rule of law" if military officers are prosecuted on human rights charges.

Human rights groups charge that some 700 people disappeared after being arrested during Pinochet's 16-year rule.

Another 2,000 people were allegedly killed by security forces in mock shootouts, summary executions and other circumstances, according to human rights groups.

At least three other clandestine burial sites have been found since 1978.

Aylwin has named a special commission to investigate alleged human rights violations under the Pinochet government.

COLOMBO (JUNE 4) XINHUA -- SRI LANKAN MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE A.R. MUNSOOR HAS INITIATED ACTION TO REVIVE TRADE TIES WITH INDIA UNDER THE JOINT COMMISSION FOR ECONOMIC AND TECHNICAL COOPERATION, SRI LANKAN NATIONAL NEWS AGENCY LANKAPUVATH REPORTED TODAY.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE MINISTRY OF TRADE AND COMMERCE TOLD THE AGENCY THAT THE MINISTER HAD ALREADY EXTENDED INVITATIONS TO INDIAN AUTHORITIES FOR TALKS IN COLOMBO ON JUNE 14 AND 15.

THE JOINT COMMISSION HAS NOT MET FOR SEVERAL YEARS AND TRADE BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES IS AT A LOW EBB.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID THAT IT IS HOPED THAT THE TALKS WOULD HELP IRON OUT CONSTRAINTS IN THE EXCHANGE OF COMMODITIES BETWEEN SRI LANKA AND INDIA.

SRI LANKA HAD BEEN EXPORTING NON-TRADITIONAL PRODUCTS, SUCH AS CLOVES, CARDAMOMS AND PEPPER TO INDIA, BUT INDIA CURBED SUCH IMPORTS BY INTRODUCING ITS IMPORT LICENSING SCHEME.

HOWEVER, INDIAN GOODS FLOWED STEADILY INTO SRI LANKA IN THE ABSENCE OF RECIPROCAL RESTRICTIONS.

INDIA'S CLOSE PROXIMITY TO SRI LANKA AND THE COMPARATIVELY CHEAP PRICES OF THEIR PRODUCTS ARE THE TWO REASONS FOR SRI LANKAN TRADERS TO IMPORT AN INCREASING VOLUME OF INDIAN GOODS.

BANGKOK (JUNE 4) XINHUA - A SENIOR OFFICIAL OF THE U.N. ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COMMISSION FOR ASIA AND THE PACIFIC (ESCAP) TODAY URGED ITS 46TH ANNUAL SESSION TO SERIOUSLY DELIBERATE THE POSSIBILITIES OF GREATER REGIONAL COOPERATION AMONG ASIAN-PACIFIC DEVELOPING ECONOMIES.

ESCAP EXECUTIVE SECRETARY S.A.M.S. KIBRIA MADE THE CALL THIS AFTERNOON IN HIS POLICY STATEMENT AT THE ANNUAL SESSION, WHICH OPENED HERE THIS MORNING.

A COMPREHENSIVE FRAMEWORK IS NEEDED FOR THIS PURPOSE, HE SAID. HE FURTHER EXPLAINED THAT "A VIABLE OPTION AT THIS STAGE WOULD BE TO FORM AN ESCAP COUNCIL FOR REGIONAL ECONOMIC COOPERATION WITHIN THE COMMISSION'S EVOLVING ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE."

"SUCH A COUNCIL, CONVENING PERIODICALLY OR AS THE COMMISSION MAY PRESCRIBE COULD PERFORM NUMEROUS DELIBERATIVE AND DECISION-MAKING FUNCTIONS RELATED TO ITS PRIMARY OBJECTIVE OF FURTHERING ECONOMIC COOPERATION AND PROMOTING ADVANTAGEOUS RESTRUCTURING OF THE REGION'S DEVELOPING ECONOMIES," HE STATED.

"BESIDES SERVING AS THE SPECIFIC FORUM FOR THESE IMPORTANT MATTERS, THE COUNCIL COULD PLAY A VALUABLE CATALYTIC ROLE, RENDERING KNOWLEDGEABLE FINDINGS AND USEFUL, TIMELY SUGGESTIONS, FOR EXAMPLE, AND PINPOINTING RESEARCH NEEDS FOR SECRETARIAT FOLLOW-UP," HE ADDED.

KUWAIT (JUNE 4) XINHUA - THE PALESTINIAN PEOPLE ARE LIKELY TO TAKE UP ARMS AGAIN TO PROTECT THEIR NATIONAL RIGHTS IF THE U.S. STICKS TO ITS ATTITUDE OF HOSTILITY ON THE PALESTINIAN ISSUE, A TOP PALESTINIAN LEADER HAS WARNED.

ACCORDING TO SHEIKH ABDEL HAMID AL SAYEH, CHAIRMAN OF THE PALESTINIAN

NATIONAL COUNCIL (PNC), THE PNC WILL MEET SOON TO DISCUSS MATTERS IN THIS CONNECTION.

THE PNC AND OTHER PALESTINIAN INSTITUTIONS HAVE NEVER PLEDGED TO THE U.S. NOT TO FOLLOW THE ROAD OF ARMED STRUGGLE TO WIN SUCH RIGHTS, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO ESTABLISH AN INDEPENDENT STATE ON THE LAND OF PALESTINE, SAID SAYEH IN AN INTERVIEW PUBLISHED IN TODAY'S KUWAITI NEWSPAPER "AL-ANBAA."

IN THE POLITICAL STATEMENT OF AN EMERGENCY SESSION HELD IN ALGIERS IN NOVEMBER 1988, THE PNC, CONSIDERED AS PALESTINIAN PARLIAMENT-IN-EXILE, CALLED FOR A MIDDLE EAST PEACE CONFERENCE TO SOLVE THE PALESTINIAN PROBLEM.

IN HIS INTERVIEW WITH "AL-ANBAA," THE PNC CHAIRMAN SAID THAT THE PNC AND ALL OTHER PALESTINIAN INSTITUTIONS HAVE DECIDED TO TAKE THE POLITICAL ROAD, BUT THEY RETAIN THE RIGHT TO RESORT TO ARMED STRUGGLE TO SOLVE THE PALESTINIAN PROBLEM.

THIS IS ESPECIALLY BECAUSE ISRAEL AND THE U.S. HAVE FAILED TO RESPOND TO THE PALESTINIAN PEACE CALL AND THE U.S. IS YET TO ABANDON ITS PREJUDICE IN FAVOR OF ISRAEL AND DETRIMENTAL TO THE PALESTINIAN RIGHTS, SAYEH DECLARED.

UNLESS ISRAEL LISTENS TO THE PEACE CALL AND THE U.S. CASTS AWAY SUCH A PREJUDICE, HE SAID, THE PALESTINIAN PEOPLE MAY DECIDE TO EMBARK ON THE ROAD OF ARMED STRUGGLE AGAIN.

THE PALESTINIAN PEOPLE ARE JUSTIFIED TO TAKE THE ROAD OF ARMED STRUGGLE BY THE U.N. CHARTER, HE SAID, REAFFIRMING THE ALGIERS POLITICAL STATEMENT WHICH PLEDGED COMMITMENT TO THE U.N. CHARTER WHICH STANDS FOR THE PEOPLE'S RIGHT TO FIGHT OCCUPATION.

SAYEH'S STATEMENT CAME IN THE WAKE OF U.S. DEMAND THAT THE PLO DENOUNCE A SEA-BORNE PALESTINIAN GUERRILLA ATTACK ON BEACHES NEAR TEL AVIV, ISRAEL, ON MAY 30.

THE PALESTINE LIBERATION FRONT CLAIMED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ATTACK IN WHICH FOUR GUERRILLAS WERE KILLED AND 12 CAPTURED BY ISRAEL.

SAYEH'S STATEMENT WAS ALSO PRECEDED BY U.S. VETOING LAST WEEK OF A DRAFT U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION ON SENDING A FACT-FINDING MISSION TO THE ISRAELI-OCCUPIED TERRITORIES. PALESTINIAN PRESIDENT YASSER ARAFAT ACCUSED THE MOVE AS AN "ATTEMPT TO COVER UP ISRAELI CRIMES."

INFORMED PALESTINIAN SOURCES HERE SAY THAT THE POPULAR FRONT FOR THE LIBERATION OF PALESTINE (PFLP) AND THE DEMOCRATIC FRONT FOR THE LIBERATION OF PALESTINE (DFLP) HAVE BEEN BUSY CONTACTING OTHER PALESTINIAN FACTIONS.

THIS MIGHT SUGGEST THAT A PNC SESSION IS UNDER PREPARATION TO REASSESS THE PEACE PLAN LAUNCHED BY THE 1988 ALGIERS PNC SESSION, THE SOURCES SAID.

MONROVIA (JUNE 4) XINHUA - THE SITUATION IN THE LIBERIAN CAPITAL MONROVIA REMAINS TENSE AS MORE AND MORE LIBERIANS AND FOREIGNERS FLEE THE WEST AFRICAN COUNTRY FOR FEAR OF AN IMMINENT ATTACK ON THE BESIEGED CITY.

WASHINGTON HAS DISPATCHED SEVERAL NAVAL VESSELS TO INTER- NATIONAL WATERS OF THE COAST OF WEST AFRICA TO EVACUATE AMERICAN CITIZENS IN LIBERIA IN THE WAKE OF THE DETERIORATING SITUATION IN THE COUNTRY.

SHORTLY AFTER THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT 2,000 U.S. MARINES ARE EN ROUTE TO LIBERIA, THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ALSO ANNOUNCED THAT IT IS SENDING NAVAL BOATS TO ASSIST THE AMERICANS.

AS A RESULT, THERE'S SOME SPECULATION IN MONROVIA THAT THE UNITED STATES

WILL INTERVENE IN THE CURRENT CRISIS OF ITS TRADI- TIONAL FRIEND.

BUT A U.S. EMBASSY SPOKESMAN QUICKLY MADE IT CLEAR THAT THE U.S. MARINE FORCE, WHICH WILL ARRIVE ANY TIME, WILL NOT INTERVENE IN THE CURRENT FIGHTING BETWEEN LIBERIAN GOVERNMENT TROOPS AND REBEL FORCES.

LIBERIAN PRESIDENT SAMUEL DOE HAS SAID THAT HE WANTS TO NEGOTIATE WITH THE REBEL FORCES TO RESTORE PEACE IN THE COUNTRY, A STAND HE RESISTED MANY TIMES IN THE PAST. BUT DOE'S CONSESSION SEEMS TO HAVE FAILED TO STOP THE ANTI-GOVERNMENT FORCES FROM ADVANCING TO THE CAPITAL.

THE REBEL FORCES, THE NATIONAL PATRIOTIC FRONT OF LIBERIA (NPFL), THROUGH ITS SPOKESMAN IN WASHINGTON, INSISTED ON FRIDAY THAT DOE MUST RESGIN AND LEAVE THE COUNTRY OR SURRENDER TO THE FRONT. BUT DOE REACTED FIRMLY THAT HE WILL NOT RESIGN NOW.

THE SITUATION IN MONROVIA IS GETTING FROM BAD TO WORSE WITH EACH PASSING DAY AS AN INCREASING NUMBER OF DISPLACED PEOPLE POUR INTO THE CITY TO SEEK FOOD AND PROTECTION. AS MANY AS 9,000 NIMBA COUNTY CITIZENS HAVE SO FAR REGISTERED IN THE LIBERIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY FOR ASSISTANCE. EVEN SINOE COUNTY SENATOR LAWSON DRAPER HAS JOINED IN THOSE WHO SOUGHT REFUGE FOR FEAR OF HARASSMENT BY ARMED MEN.

AFTER ANTI-GOVERNMENT FORCES THREATENED TO ATTACK THE ROBERTS INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT IN MONROVIA, MANY FOREIGN AIRLINES INCLUDING AIRLINES SWISS, GHANA, ETHIOPIAN AND NETHERLANDS HAVE CANCELLED FLIGHTS TO MONROVIA.

MANY LIBERIAN SCHOOLS HAVE BEEN CLOSED DOWN AS A RESULT OF ESCALATING FIGHTING BETWEEN THE REBELS AND THE TROOPS STILL LOYAL TO PRESIDENT DOE.

LAST FRIDAY, THE PEOPLE'S BANK OF CHINA REPORTEDLY ORDERED CHINESE FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO STOP DEALING WITH THE BANK OF TOKYO IN PROTEST AT THE BANK'S PLAN TO OPEN A REPRESENTATIVE OFFICE IN TAIWAN.

THE OFFICIAL, WHO DECLINED TO BE NAMED, AVOIDED COMMENTING ON WHAT WOULD BE THE IMPACT OF THE POSSIBLE SANCTIONS ON RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO NATIONS.

OSAKA (JUNE 4) KYODO - AN OSAKA-BASED ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROMOTION BODY MONDAY PROPOSED THAT INDUSTRIES IN THE WESTERN JAPAN AREA SHIFT THEIR EMPHASIS TO MORE VALUE-ADDED PRODUCTION.

THE GROUP, LED BY KANSAI ECONOMIC FEDERATION CHAIRMAN OSAMU UNO, MADE THE PROPOSAL FOR INDUSTRIES IN SEVEN PREFECTURES SURROUNDING OSAKA TO ENABLE THEM TO SHARE IN LONG-TERM ECONOMIC GROWTH BY THE YEAR 2030, RESEARCHERS FROM THE ORGANIZATION SAID.

CENTERING ON ONGOING CONSTRUCTION OF KANSAI INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT, THERE ARE A TOTAL OF MORE THAN 28 TRILLION YEN IN REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS IN THE KANSAI AREA, THE RESEARCHERS SAID.

KANSAI INDUSTRIES SHOULD RESTRUCTURE TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF SUCH DRASTIC CHANGES IN THE AREA, THEY ADDED.

ECONOMIC STAGNATION IN THE KANSAI AREA IS DUE LARGELY TO THE PRESENCE OF INDUSTRIAL STRUCTURES STILL DEPENDENT ON MATERIALS PRODUCTION SUCH AS STEEL AND TEXTILES, THE PROPOSAL SAID.

HIGH TECHNOLOGY RELATED INDUSTRIES SUCH AS ELECTRONICS AND BIOTECHNOLOGY SHOULD BE DEVELOPED MORE, IT ADDED.

THE PROPOSAL SET AN IDEAL GROWTH RATE FOR EACH INDUSTRY FOR EACH DECADE UNTIL 2030.

IT SAID, FOR INSTANCE, THAT THE KANSAI ELECTRONICS INDUSTRY, WHICH CURRENTLY IS WORTH 3 TRILLION YEN IN PRODUCTION, CONTRIBUTING 18 PERCENT OF THE NATIONAL SHARE, SHOULD GROW TO 21 TRILLION YEN BY 2000 AND 21 PERCENT SHARE OF THE NATIONAL MARKET.

TO DEVELOP THE COMPUTER AND SEMICONDUCTOR INDUSTRIES, AN ESTIMATED 75.6 BILLION YEN SHOULD BE INVESTED IN RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT. IT IS A 22 PERCENT INCREASE FROM THE CURRENT INVESTMENT LEVEL IN THIS FIELD.

THE FASHION BUSINESS SHOULD ALSO BECOME THE CORE OF THE TEXTILE INDUSTRY WHICH AS A WHOLE SHOULD BECOME MORE INFORMATION-SENSITIVE.

THE STEEL AND MACHINERY INDUSTRIES SHOULD DIVERSIFY INTO HIGH TECHNOLOGY AREAS, IT SAID.

THE KANSAI AREA'S SHARE OF NATIONAL PRODUCTION WILL DECLINE TO 14 PERCENT BY 2000 FROM 18 PERCENT IN 1986 IF INDUSTRIES DO NOT RESTRUCTURE, THE PROPOSAL WARNED.

TOKYO (JUNE 4) KYODO - JAPANESE GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS CIRCLES SHOWED MIXED REACTIONS MONDAY TO THE TRADE AGREEMENT SIGNED AT A U.S.-SOVIET SUMMIT MEETING IN WASHINGTON, WHICH THEY EXPECT WILL BE BENEFICIAL TO JAPAN OVER THE LONG TERM.

"THE IMPROVED TRADE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO GIANTS WILL HELP INVIGORATE THE TROUBLED SOVIET ECONOMY AND IN THE LONG TERM WILL HAVE POSITIVE EFFECTS ON JAPAN-SOVIET TRADE," AN OFFICIAL AT THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) SAID.

THE TRADE ACCORD WAS AGREED BETWEEN U.S. PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH AND HIS SOVIET COUNTERPART MIKHAIL GORBACHEV AT THEIR FOUR-DAY MEETING WHICH ENDED ON SUNDAY.

DESPITE EXPECTATIONS OF THE LONG-TERM EFFECT OF THE PACT, HOWEVER, MANY EXPRESSED SKEPTICISM ABOUT ITS IMMEDIATE OR NEAR-TERM IMPACT ON THE ECONOMIC RELATIONS BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE SOVIET UNION, WHICH HAVE HARDLY IMPROVED DUE TO THE PENDING TERRITORIAL ISSUE.

"IN JAPAN-SOVIET RELATIONS, POLITICS AND ECONOMICS ARE UNSEPARABLE," A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL SAID. "WITH THE TERRITORIAL PROBLEM UNRESOLVED, WE CANNOT BE ACTIVE ON THE ECONOMIC FRONT."

JAPAN HAS DEMANDED THE SOVIETS RETURN THE FOUR ISLANDS NORTH OF HOKKAIDO WHICH THEY SEIZED AT THE END OF THE WORLD WAR II.

ANOTHER STUMBLING BLOCK TO BILATERAL TRADE IS THE LACK OF FOREIGN-CURRENCY RESERVES IN THE SOVIET UNION, WHICH OFTEN CAUSES DELAYS BY THE SOVIETS IN PAYING THEIR BILLS FOR CONTRACTS WITH FOREIGNERS.

SIMILAR PESSIMISM WAS VOICED BY THE BUSINESS CIRCLE, WHERE A VIEW WAS DOMINANT THAT THE TRADE PACT CAN DO LITTLE TO SALVAGE THE SOVIET ECONOMY,

WHICH IS IN TOO DESPERATE A SITUATION TO MANAGE A QUICK RECOVERY EVEN WITH U.S. ASSISTANCE.

"THE SOVIET FOREIGN-CURRENCY RESERVES ARE SO SCARCE THAT THEY CANNOT PAY EVEN FOR THE MOST IMPORTANT ITEMS THEY HAVE PURCHASED FROM JAPAN," AN OFFICIAL AT A MAJOR TRADING HOUSE SAID.

SOVIET FIRMS WERE BEHIND IN PAYMENTS TO JAPANESE COMPANIES BY ABOUT 250 MILLION DOLLARS AT THE END OF APRIL, A MAJOR FACTOR BEHIND DWINDLING TRADE CONTRACTS BETWEEN THE TWO NATIONS IN RECENT YEARS.

"IT IS A MAJOR STEP FORWARD THAT THE U.S. WILL STEP UP SUPPORT FOR ECONOMIC TRANSFORMATION IN THE SOVIET UNION," YOHEI MIMURA, CHAIRMAN OF MITSUBISHI CORP., SAID.

"BUT STILL, IT IS VERY RISKY FOR US JAPANESE BUSINESSMEN TO MAKE ANY COMMITMENT TO THE SOVIET UNION UNTIL WE ARE ASSURED OF THE SERIOUSNESS OF THEIR EFFORTS TOWARD A MARKET-ORIENTED ECONOMY," HE SAID.

BANGKOK (JUNE 4) KYODO - JAPAN MONDAY VOWED TO TAKE A LEADERSHIP ROLE IN THE PROTECTION OF THE EARTH'S ENVIRONMENT AND IN STAMPING OUT DRUG PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION BASES IN THE ASIAN-PACIFIC REGION.

THE VOW WAS MADE BY JAPAN'S CHIEF DELEGATE MONDAY WHEN THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COMMISSION FOR ASIA AND THE PACIFIC (ESCAP) STARTED A 10-DAY ANNUAL MINISTERIAL-LEVEL MEETING AT ITS HEADQUARTERS IN BANGKOK.

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE MEETING, MEMBERS ELECTED BERENADO VUNIBOBO, FIJI'S MINISTER FOR TRADE AND INDUSTRY, TO CHAIR THE SESSION. BUT VUNIBOBO WAS NOT ELECTED WITHOUT PROTEST. ONE INDIAN DELEGATE QUESTIONED VUNIBOBO'S QUALIFICATIONS.

IT WAS THE FIRST TIME IN THE 45 YEARS SINCE THE FOUNDING OF ESCAP THAT ANYONE HAD PROTESTED THE GROUP'S ORGANIZED CANDIDATE FOR CHAIRMAN, ONE SOURCE SAID.

THE INDIAN REPRESENTATIVE BACKED OFF HIS OPPOSITION LATER, HOWEVER, IN ORDER TO UPHOLD THE CONVENTION'S PRINCIPLE OF CONSENSUS, A PRESS STATEMENT LATER EXPLAINED.

INDIA ANNOUNCED LAST MONTH IT WOULD BEGIN AN INTERNATIONAL CAMPAIGN TO OPPOSE THE PRESENT FIJI GOVERNMENT BECAUSE OF WHAT IT CALLED DISCRIMINATORY POLICIES TOWARD ETHNIC INDIANS IN FIJI. INDIA CLOSED ITS EMBASSY IN THE FIJIAN CAPITAL OF SUVA ON MAY 25.

LATER IN THE DAY, HOWEVER, CONVENTION BUSINESS PROCEEDED AS SCHEDULED. THE CHIEF JAPANESE REPRESENTATIVE, ICHIJI ISHII, ANNOUNCED THAT JAPAN WOULD INCREASE ITS OFFICIAL DEVELOPMENT AID (ODA) FOR A FURTHER BUILDUP OF INTERDEPENDENT TIES IN THE REGION.

THE MEETING WAS ATTENDED BY ABOUT 300 MINISTER-LEVEL REPRESENTATIVES FROM 48 MEMBER COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES.

THAI PRIME MINISTER CHATICHAI CHOONHAVAN SAID AT THE OPENING CEREMONY THAT WORLD PEACE AND STABILITY ARE EXPECTED FOR THE FIRST DECADE IN THE 1990S. HE URGED INTERESTED COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES TO JOIN FORCES TO WORK TOWARD A BETTER FUTURE FOR THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION.

S.A.M.S. KIBRIA, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF THE ESCAP, SAID MORE ECONOMIC COOPERATION CAN BE EXPECTED IN THE REGION AS A RESULT OF IMPROVED GLOBAL POLITICS.

U.N. SECRETARY GENERAL JAVIER PEREZ DE CUELLAR SUGGESTED THAT AMID EASING TENSION BETWEEN THE EAST AND THE WEST, ESCAP SHOULD SET GUIDELINES FOR COOPERATION IN A STRUCTURAL ADJUSTMENT OF THE DEVELOPING COUNTRIES' ECONOMIES IN THE 1990S.

#90155m0001 06/04/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 4) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2)MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of PURCHASING MANAGEMENT index for May was up to 50.7% from 50.2% in April. A reading above 50% suggests expansion. ... Construction spending fell 0.7% in April for the second consecutive month, the COMMERCE DEPARTMENT reports. ... NCNB, the Southeast's leading banking company, has won a bidding contest to buy most of the operations of ailing NATIONAL BANCSHARES of TEXAS from government regulators. ... "The Wall Street Journal" reports this morning that DONALD TRUMP's cash shortage has become critical. The report says, "The developer is now in intense negotiations with his main bank creditors that could force him to give up big chunks of his empire."

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The LABOR DEPARTMENT issues first-quarter productivity and costs for the first quarter at 10 a.m. EDT. Other major economic data due out this week include May auto sales tomorrow, and consumer credit and capital spending on Thursday. ... MANPOWER temporary services says a survey of 15,000 companies shows 27% of them plan to add workers in the third-quarter, about the same as planned to add staff in the current quarter.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I think the momentum is upward," says ROBERT STOVALL of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. "June is a pretty important month. Seasonally, it's usually stronger than May, although I doubt we can match May's 200-plus points on the Dow. ... I think the Dow Jones and all the other averages will be higher a month from now than they are today. ... I think August-September will see a higher close than we'll have here in May-June." ("Wall Street Week", 6/1)

KIDDER, PEABODY's RALPH ACAMPORA is bullish on the market as he believes stocks are following bonds, which are benefiting from poor economic figures and talk of lower interest rates. "There's no resistance. We've never been here before. The sky is the limit. Most of the people I talk with are still scratching their heads in disbelief, and while there's cash and disbelief out there, I think it [the market] just goes higher." (CNBC "Business View", 6/1)

FROM THE BEARS:

DAVID BOSTIAN of JESUP & LAMONT is a short-term bear who believes this rally could end any day. "I have come to the conclusion that, at best, there's only a 10% chance that this is the real thing. So, I think it's a rally within the context of further downside action to come." (CNBC "Business View", 6/1)

STOCK MARKET:

HUGH JOHNSON of FIRST ALBANY CORP., says getting to 3000 on the Dow is "going to be a lot tougher than it seems." For one thing, he says hopes for lower interest rates are premature. A.C. MOORE, research chief at ARGUS RESEARCH, says another restraint on the Dow reaching 3000 is that stocks have moved beyond what would be their fair price based on anticipated earnings. On the other hand, JOHN MANLEY at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM says, "3000 certainly is possible. There are enough people sitting on the sidelines who are nervous about being out of the market. They could be enough to give us one last pop." ("USA Today", 6/4)

"This time next week, I think we'll generally be in the same area," says DENNIS JARRETT of KIDDER, PEABODY & CO. "I don't think we're going to go a lot further in the near term. Of course everyone has been looking for a pullback in the near term for the last couple of weeks and we haven't seen it. It looks like everyone is just waiting to buy on weakness." Jarrett expects more pullback in the next week, but his outlook is bullish through the summer. "The critical issue is where we're going to be a month from now or even 3 to 6 months from now, and that looks like the upside. ... I think we're going to see numbers that will blow our socks off." Jarrett predicts at least another 200 to 300 points on the Dow. (CNBC "Business View", 6/1)

"Something had to cause this eruption in stock prices (and) it wasn't just excess cash," says BENJAMIN ZACKS, executive vice president of Chicago-based ZACKS AND CO. "Analysts turned more optimistic on earnings. First-quarter earnings were not as disappointing as the prior several quarters. That provided some room for optimism for analysts looking at the remainder of the year and into 1991." On the same subject of earnings JOHN BOGLE, a vice president at STATE STREET BANK & TRUST CO. in Boston, says, "We are seeing more upward revisions than we did a few months ago." (WSJ, 6/4)

A new "Barron's" survey of 63 professionals finds just over half of them -- 53% -- in the bullish camp, although many of them expect some kind of near-term correction. The mean prediction is that the Dow will be at 2750 in three months, at 2625 in six months and 2825 in a year. The survey found that roughly four-in-five predict 1990 economic growth will be below 2%. ("Barron's", 6/4)

Money manager ROBERT WIBBLESMAN of KAYNE ANDERSON & CO. in Los Angeles says there is an emerging perception of a bull market that will put pressure on portfolio managers to buy and increase demand for some stocks. "My guess is the Dow will get to around 2950 -- the top of its trend line channel -- before it stalls out," he says. "The market has been in a mini-stampede and there has been an awakening of the sleeping greed of the speculative investors in the OTC market. I am a bit nervous about this market now and feel there could be a correction anytime." ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

"People are pretty bearish and it's hard to get excited about 3000 [on the Dow] when everyone's bearish," says money manager KEN FISHER of FISHER INVESTMENTS. "Enthusiasm is muted because of the panic of 1987," says ROBERT NUROCK of "Bob Nurock's Advisory" newsletter. Even if the Dow reaches 3000, he says "there probably won't be the enthusiasm of 2500 or even 2700." ("USA Today", 6/4)

ANTHONY LUDOVICI of TUCKER ANTHONY expects the Dow to break 3000. "At this stage in the game, now that the Dow is up to 2900, we can't rule out the possibility of 3000. But I'll say this much, before we get to 3000 we're going to see a correction in the market ... one of minor proportions." ("Nightly Business Report", 6/1)

HOWARD COLHOUN is sticking by his prediction of several weeks ago that the Dow may reach 3000, but likewise is sticking by his prediction that "I see a decline from there. ... The averages are going through the roof, but I'm worried about the foundation and the floor. ... People are focusing on the weaker economy and what that does to interest rates, but are not taking the double entry, which is what's going to happen to earnings. And I think we're in an earnings problem. I would be taking profits here." ("Wall Street Week", 6/1)

"We've been very bullish on the U.S. market all year long," says ANDREW RILEY, head of U.S. equity research for YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL, who believes a 10-month technical deterioration is ready to turnaround and that there is potential for the Fed to lower interest rates. "Looking out a few months, what I see is a slow economy, Fed funds beginning to decline again and perhaps money supply growing again. So (there is) a lot of money in the economy ready to go into financial assets." ("Wall Street Week", 6/1)

STOCK TIPS:

"I think there's a very high probability that tech stocks will continue to outperform the market," says ROGER McNAMEE, manager of the T. ROWE PRICE ASSOCIATES SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY FUND. He says that technology stocks still look cheap. On average, valuations of technology issues relative to the S&P 500 are the lowest in 20 years. Mr. McNamee's favorite technology stocks are leaders in their markets. His favorites: ORACLE SYSTEMS, SUN MICROSYSTEMS, CHIPS & TECHNOLOGIES, QUANTUM, VITALINK COMMUNICATIONS and MENTOR GRAPHICS. (WSJ, 6/4)

The survey of 63 money managers in today's "Barron's" "disclosed enthusiasm for banks and financial companies generally, followed by energy capital goods, newspapers and utilities. Still other sectors favored included brokerage houses, health care and cellular." Among the few stocks favored by more than one investor in the survey: AMR, ARCHER-DANIELS-MIDLAND, GENERAL ELECTRIC, HEWLETT-PACKARD, IBM, MCI, MERCK 3M, MOTOROLA and PHILIP MORRIS. The survey also turned up a diverse list of stocks the pros would like to short. The only name that showed up more than once on the "short" list was BLOCKBUSTER ENTERTAINMENT. ("Barron's", 6/4)

ELLIOTT SCHLANG, a vice president of PRESCOTT, BALL & TURBEN in Cleveland, says, "My guess is that the technology sector will be the bait" to lure fund managers back to the shares of smaller companies. He says that there is value to be found in the overlooked, smaller companies with steady earnings growth. Among his favorites: ARBOR DRUGS, BOB EVANS FARMS, CALGON CARBON, CHEMPOWER, DRUG EMPORIUM, GIBSON GREETINGS, JACOBSON STORES KIMBALL INTERNATIONAL, JUNO LIGHTING, LAWSON PRODUCTS, LDI CORP., LILLY INDUSTRIAL COATINGS, MEDSTAT SYSTEMS, OIL DRI AMERICAN, ROTO-ROOTER, RPM INC. SANFORD CORP., SCHULMAN, STRYKER and TUSCARORA PLASTICS. (WSJ, 6/4)

PENWEST LTD. is featured today in the "Leaders and Success" section of

"Investor's Daily." The company is optimistic about a new compound it has developed for coating paper used in high-quality reproduction such as annual reports and magazines. "I would describe them as being focused," analyst GEORGE HALOULAKOS of DAIN BOSWORTH INC. says of the company, which is about a third owned by board members, executives and employees. "I would describe them as being long-term in their thinking and shareholder-driven. They're a winner." Analyst GEORGE DAHLMAN of PIPER, JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD INC., says he believes the company could surpass its goal of 10% market share and approach 20%. The over-the-counter stock has been trading at about 30, up from about 16 a year ago, adjusted for a stock split. ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

ANTHONY LUDOVICI of TUCKER ANTHONY recommends SANTA FE, USX, AMOCO and WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC as stocks he favors in the current stock market environment. ("Nightly Business Report", 6/1)

"I think if you have money to invest, look for things that haven't moved yet -- utilities are among them," says ROBERT STOVALL of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. "Look for some great companies that are in trouble, such as AMERICAN EXPRESS or XEROX and put some money there. They'll probably eventually catch up with the rest of the market." ("Wall Street Week", 6/1)

U.S. SURGICAL CORP. is featured in today's "Barron's" in an article that notes the stock has more than doubled over the past year. While pointing out that many are bullish on the stock, reporter EDWARD WYATT highlights many uncertainties about the company and concludes that "at this point, anyway, the burden of proof is on the bulls." ("Barron's", 6/4)

Analyst CHARLES NEUHAUSER of LEGG MASON WOOD WALKER lists five companies in "A Bouquet of Small Stocks" for "Barron's." He likes COHU, GENLYTE GROUP, GEODYNAMICS, PARK ELECTROCHEMICAL and SCOTSMAN INDUSTRIES. ("Barron's", 6/4)

L.A. GEAR fell 8 3/8 Friday to 30 7/8 after reporting it expects a second-quarter earnings decline of as much as 45%. The stock was at 50 just the week before, when it announced signing singer-dancer PAULA ABDUL to a big promotion deal. "The trick is when they tell people [the bad news] and it's never soon enough," says retail analyst DONALD WAMPACH of ILLINOIS COMPANY INVESTMENTS. "This was a thunderbolt out of the blue." ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

"I thought the second quarter would be weak [for L.A. GEAR], but never in my wildest dreams did I think it would be anything of this magnitude," says KIDDER PEABODY analyst GARY JACOBSON. Would he buy the stock now? "I'd wait until the dust settles." ("USA Today", 6/4)

MET-PRO CORP., a maker of pumps and filters used to deal with the liquid that drains from garbage landfills, is the favorite stock of STEPHEN LIEBER of the EVERGREEN LIMITED MARKET FUND. Selling at about 20, he sees earnings of $1.45 a share this year and $1.60 next year. ("Barron's", 6/4)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 4) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

The dollar had slid as low as 1.68 marks and 150.70 yen after the employment report on Friday, but dealers took the losses as an opportunity to buy dollars. "People just waited to buy it at lower levels after the data came out," says CHRISTIANE MANDELL of SECURITY PACIFIC MERCHANT BANK. "The dollar was bid before the figures." (Reuters, 6/1)

"The dollar remains an undervalued currency," says ANDREW RILEY, head of U.S. equity research for YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL. "It probably got well ahead of itself in the first quarter when we were flirting with 160 yen to the dollar. It's pulled back some and could pull back some more, but I think over the next year we are going to see a stronger dollar. I think that is an opinion that is widely shared as well." ("Wall Street Week", 6/1)

"We see the mark weakening across the board, especially against the yen," says ALBERT SORIA of KANSALLIS-OSAKE-PANKKI." (Reuters, 6/1)

"The Fed ought to be concerned about the economy, but I don't think they will do anything about it yet," says ALAN SINAI, chief economist at BOSTON COMPANY, who believes that a souring economy may eventually lead to changes in Fed policy. (NYT, 6/4)

"I think the markets, and I would agree, are beginning to sniff out a Fed easing move," says LAWRENCE KUDLOW of BEAR, STEARNS. "With gold very weak money supply growth coming down, and slower economic statistics, I think the potential for a small Fed easing is in the cards." ("Nightly Business Report", 6/1)

MARILYN SCHAJA of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE expects the Fed to ease in response to Friday's employment figures. "Before we got this [employment] number, there was hesitation in the market [about] whether the next move by the Fed would be to ease or to tighten. This basically tells you the next move will be to ease, and even though it's not going to occur within the very near future -- not over the next week or two -- it will probably occur within the next two months." (CNN "Moneyline", 6/1)

"The Fed's just not going to be that aggressive" and lower rates based on current data, says MICHAEL ENGLUND, an economist at MMS INTERNATIONAL INC. ("USA Today", 6/4)

"I think the Fed was wise to hold off on tightening early in the year when people thought inflation was too strong," says EDWARD YARDENI, chief economist at PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. "Now that people are starting the other way, toward fear of recession, I think the Fed will probably take the cautious approach" and continue holding steady. ("Investor's Daily", 6/4).

"At a minimum, Fed officials are looking beyond the sluggish employment news to upcoming inflation readings," say SALOMON BROTHERS analysts. "Any chance of easing -- and further bond market improvement -- depends more on extending April's favorable news through May and June." ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

"Only two months ago, some of the Fed governors dissented from a vote of unchanged policy for tighter policy," says economist MARIA FIORINI RAMIREZ of RAMIREZ CAPITAL CONSULTANTS. "This new set of [employment] data may convince the hawks to at least swing back to middle ground while some of the other members who would have welcomed additional easing may now be wringing their hands with worry." JOSEPH LIRO, an economist at S.G. WARBURG SECURITIES., says it is likely the Fed will vote to ease credit conditions in July at the next Federal Open Market Committee meeting. (WSJ, 6/4)

COURTNEY SMITH of BANCA DELLA SVIZZERA ITALIANA says Friday's upside action in the bond market will continue. "As I have mentioned for sometime, I've felt the fundamentals [for bonds] are very, very bullish here, and I think that today was the confirmation that we have got the technicals going in the same direction as the fundamentals. So, that's my all out signal to mount a major bull campaign over the summer." As for the dollar Mr. Smith says, "The long-term fundamentals are generally bullish." He believes the dollar is in a trading range currently waiting for a big move up. (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/1)

"The (bond) rally has just begun," says PHILLIP BRAVERMAN, a longtime bond market bull who is senior vice president at DKB SECURITIES CORP., a subsidiary of DIA-ICHI KANGYO BANK LTD. He says recent economic data confirm that the economy is weak and inflation is losing momentum, a situation that often leads to lower interest rates. (WSJ, 6/4)

THE ECONOMY:

"Given our view that subsequent economic data to be released over the next several weeks will show that the economy remained exceedingly weak in May, we feel that an easing in Fed policy is imminent," says DONALD MAUDE, president of MAUDE CAPITAL MARKET CONSULTANTS INC. ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

"You've had two strong employment reports and two weak ones," says JOSEPH CARSON of CHEMICAL BANK. "This is the rubber game and it tells you the economy is weak." (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/1)

"The thing that has kept us out of recession for much of the last decade has been a strong service sector," says JOHN R. WILLIAMS, managing director at BANKERS TRUST. "For the first time, we are seeing that those demands are waning a bit." Williams points out that in the first two months of this year, the service sector added 275,000 jobs, but the most recent figures show that, excluding census workers, services added only about 65,000 jobs. (NYT, 6/4)

In SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM & COMPANY's weekly credit market commentary, DOUGLAS SCHINDEWOLF states that the slowdown in service sector jobs may be a "symptom of the recently tightened credit standards for smaller businesses, which would disproportionately impact the service sector." (NYT, 6/4)

BRIAN FABBRI, chief U.S. economist at MIDLAND MONTAGU BANK, predicts the weak economy "will become the No. 1 concern in Washington. Therefore, the Fed's next move will be to ease monetary policy. However, it likely will hesitate before making this change to wait for more collaborating information." ("Investor's Daily", 6/4)

IN WASHINGTON:

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The music industry breathed a collective sigh of relief when state legislators early this spring began dropping proposals that would have required the mandatory labeling of sound recordings containing sexually and otherwise explicit lyrics. But the industry barely had time to catch its breath before anti-obscenity attacks over music releases -- particularly rap -- increased at an alarming rate, The National Law Journal reported in its June 4 issue.

Now legal experts are debating the impact that rulings in what are believed to be the first two music obscenity trials ever will have on the increase in obscenity prosecutions in general, from video to visual art.

In February, an Alabama jury ruled in favor of a record retailer arrested for selling a rap album by the group 2 Live Crew. And a ruling is pending after a two-day trial before a federal judge in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., over whether a second 2 Live Crew album is obscene.

"We're definitely in the middle of an anti-obscenity boom," says First Amendment attorney Martin Garbus of New York. "And when you have a ratcheting up of obscenity prosecutions in one area of the arts, you have a ratcheting up in other areas, too."

At the national level, the use of restrictions on federally funded arts projects containing sexually explicit material have been the focus of heated congressional debates on budgeting for the National Endowment for the Arts.

In addition, obscenity prosecutions conducted by the Department of Justice increased to 120 in 1989 from 37 in 1988. This came as U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said he considers such prosecutions a department priority. (As a result, a department spokesman says, the National Obscenity Enforcement Unit is looking to increase its staff attorneys to 13 from nine.)

No comparable nationwide statistics are kept for local obscenity prosecutions. But many observers say the rise in such anti-obscenity activity has been fueled by politicians who want to benefit from conservative public sentiment.

For example, a national satellite network featuring hard and soft pornography recently closed down after its producer and distributors were indicted by an Alabama county district attorney who is running for state attorney general, the weekly newspaper about lawyers and the law reported.

BOSTON (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Environmentalist Robert Redford Saturday called for a surge in grassroots political action to force politicians to be more responsive to the public's interest in protecting the environment.

"Poll after poll indicates that the people are way ahead of the politicians. It is time to send a message to our elected officials -- that if they do not protect our environment, they will be voted out of office or never get elected in the first place," Redford said.

Redford made the call for increased environmental activism in remarks delivered at the University of Massachusetts commencement ceremonies, during which he received an honorary degree.

Citing the success of grassroots movement for women's suffrage, labor laws the civil rights movement and the end of the Vietnam War, Redford said Americans should not wait for the current generation of politicians and leaders to take the necessary actions to save the environment.

"I don't think we need to wait around anymore for something to come from the top... It ain't gonna happen. I don't want to be told to 'Read my lips' when the lips aren't saying anything," he said.

With the Boston Harbor as a backdrop for his remarks, Redford criticized President Bush for failing to follow up on campaign promises on the environment.

"President Bush made Boston Harbor a big campaign item, but after the election, when there were no more tv ads, he cut funding that would have cleaned it up by $400 million," he said.

Redford also criticized the slow pace of Bush administration actions on the Alaskan oil spill and global warming, and questioned the environmental commitment of White House Chief of Staff John Sununu. He cited the remarks of a former Sununu staff member who said the former New Hampshire governor's "idea of open space was a K-Mart parking lot."

Redford also took issue with assertions that responsible approaches on the environment must come at the expense of jobs, saying concern for the environment can actually generate jobs. He cited as an example the advances in commercial uses of solar power by Japan and Germany.

"Advances in environmentally safe products can open new economic horizons.

Whole industries can be created through energy conservation and alternative fuels," he said.

He also said consumers can drive more responsible environmental industrial processes.

"If you stop buying things that destroy the planet, companies will stop making them. If you buy organic food, they'll stop using pesticides. There is a more economic and healthier way for a fuller life," said Redford.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Redford encouraged the graduating UMass seniors to do a better job than his generation of environmental stewardship.

"This decade is the last of this millenium. For you, it is your first decade out of college, a critical one for setting in motion the paths of your lives. You have a lot of power. You have a real chance and the time is right. It's your earth -- it's your move."

Redford is the founder and president of the Institute for Resource Management, which sponsored a conference on global warming in Sundance, Utah, last August with the Soviet Academy of Sciences. He is also a board member of the Environmental Defense Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council.

ATLANTA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Caere Corp. (NASDAQ: CAER) announced today a price reduction for the 80286 version of its OmniPage(R) page recognition software package. Effective immediately, the suggested retail price for OmniPage '286 is changed to $1,295 from $1,995, a reduction of 35 percent. the product, which includes a high-performance 16MHz coprocessor board, runs on the IBM PC AT(TM) and other Microsoft Windows(TM)-compatible systems. New Price Standard

The suggested retail price of $1,295 makes it possible for dealers to offer OmniPage '286 at a discounted street price of less than $1,000. Given that the retail prices of OmniPage '386 and OmniPage Mac are $895 and $795, respectively, all selections within the high-perfomance OmniPage line are potentially available to consumers at less than $1,000.

"Caere expects this new price point to attract a larger percentage of the enormous installed base of 80286-based personal computer users, thereby further expanding the market for high-perfomance/low-cost page recognition capabilities," said Larry Miller, vice president of marketing and sales for Caere's Office Products Group.

Two factors allow Caere to provide the same OmniPage functionality and performance at a lower price: 1) significant cost savings in both the layout and the components of the OnmniPage '286 coprocessor board, and 2) increased sales of the product.

"Our dealers and customers have been anticipating a lower price point for a long time," said Miller. "This new price represents the achievement of a long-standing Caere goal." Performance Leadership

OmniPage '286 includes a 16MHZ Motorola 68020 coprocessor board, which makes its performance equal to that achieved by Caere's '386 software-only version of OmniPage. Like OmniPage '386, the 80286 version runs in full 32-bit mode and processes from 55 CPS to 150 CPS.

The standard page recognition features of OmniPage include Caere's AnyFont(TM) technology, which reads fonts from 6 points to 72 points in size and in either landscape or portrait orientation. It also reads any nonstyled font in any type of layout or mix of text and graphics. AnyFont technology supports 11 languages.

OmniPage '286 is available from personal computer dealers. Caere Corp., located in Los Gatos, Calif. designs, develops, manufactures and markets information recognition software and systems products.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Commodore International unveiled its Commodore Dynamic Total Vision (CDTV) interactive multimedia player at Summer CES. The new player, which is a synthesis of Compact Disc and advanced computer technologies, represents a revolutionary advance in the development of interactive consumer electronics products and home entertainment.

Commodore's CDTV player is the first consumer-oriented product to combine the massive storage capabilities of the compact disc with the multitasking capabilities, audio, graphics, sound and processing power of an advanced personal computer into a single, simple to use, affordable unit.

The player connects directly to a television set and home stereo unit to become an interactive entertainment, information and education center. A simple infrared remote device controls the player, allowing consumer access to a wide variety of programs. For example, CDTV technology makes it possible for consumers to access specific topics listed in reference materials such as encyclopedias, world atlases and almanacs at the touch of a button.

According to Bushnell, there is expected to be more than 100 titles available for the CDTV player at the time of product launch in the fall. In addition to various interactive resource materials, there is planned to be available a wide variety of instructional programs such as cooking, sports, foreign languages and special learning programs for children. Music, from rock to opera, will be enhanced with video graphics. Electronic games will be significantly more sophisticated in depth of play sound and graphics than on any currently available video game or personal computer format.

The majority of discs will carry a retail price ranging between $30 and $100.

Commodore will offer a wide range of dedicated peripheral products as well. Planned peripherals include an infrared computer keyboard, infrared joysticks, a 3-1/2 inch floppy disk drive, a printer and a video genlocking card, which allow users to mix computer graphics with live video. The CDTV player is also compatible with conventional CD-Audio discs at 8-times oversampling and CD-G discs (Compact Disc audio with graphics).

The CDTV system of players, accessories and program applications is scheduled for launch in early fall by Commodore subsidiary companies operating throughout the world. CDTV's suggested retail price is expected to be under $1,000 (U.S.).

SAN MATEO, CA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Electronic Arts (NASDAQ: ERTS) today announced the signing of an exclusive distribution agreement with Ocean Software Ltd., headquartered in Manchester, England. Ocean Software currently represents 30 percent of the European software market with sales revenues of $25 million in 1989. EA will introduce Ocean and its first six titles to be released in the United States at the summer Consumer Electronics Show in Chicago.

Ocean Software, founded in 1982, has long been a leader in the European entertainment industry with strong and on-going relationships with some of the major names of this industry, in both the United States and Japan, such as Nintendo, Data East, Taito and Konami. Ocean's licenses include such hits as the computer versions of Batman, Robocop, and Platoon. Robocop held the number one position on the UK Gallup chart for seven consecutive months and is still listed in the Top 10. And according to British publication Popular Computing Weekly, Ocean continues to dominate the European market, holding slots 1, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 15 for the week of May 17-23, 1990.

Under the terms of the agreement, Electronic Arts will manufacture Ocean Software products in the United States, and distribute them through the Electronic Arts Distribution channels in the United States and Canada. Electronic Arts will begin shipping Ocean Software in the June 1990 quarter.

"Ocean's hit ratio is extraordinarily high -- maintaining its superior ranking in the European market without importing American titles," said Steve Salyer, vice president of Business Development at Electronic Arts. "The company's titles are designed to be hits, and we're proud to be their marketing and manufacturing partner in the United States," concluded Salyer.

"Electronic Arts will help Ocean enter the United States market under our own label," said Ray Musci, president of Ocean of America. "With the strong emergence of 16-Bit computer platforms in the U.S. and with Ocean's product development capacity in that area, this alliance with Electronic Arts presents a strong opportunity for both companies," said Musci.

WAYNE, NJ (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Lederle Laboratories today introduced a new pelletized form of Minocin(R) (minocycline hydrochloride pellet-filled capsules), the tetracycline derivative widely prescribed for treatment of acne, respiratory infections, genitourinary infections and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Lederle scientists refer to the new pelletized dosage form as "state of the art drug delivery." The tiny pellets, about the size of a printed period or a grain of sand, are manufactured by a patented procedure known as Accumatrix(R) technology. Each pellet contains a matrix of cellulose, or plant fiber, embedded with molecules of minocycline hydrochloride.

Encased in a gelatin capsule, the pellets are released in the stomach. The pellets are designed to dissolve evenly in the acidic environment of the stomach as well as in the alkaline environment of the small intestine.

There is no substitute for new pelletized Minocin. While studies have shown significant reductions in the absorption of original oral minocycline powder-filled capsules and tablets when taken in the fed state compared to the fasting state, new pelletized Minocin offers virtually complete absorption when taken with or without dairy products and food.

The new Minocin is available in 100-mg and 50-mg capsules which are small and easy to swallow. The new formulation, with its additional benefits, will be available at the same price as the original Minocin tablets and capsules.

ORLANDO, FL (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Westinghouse Electric Corp. (NYSE: WX) has opened a sales office here to support the growth of its residential security systems business.

Westinghouse Security Systems, a Las Colinas, Texas-based unit of the firm's Commercial Systems Divisions, was established last month to meet the rising nationwide demand for residential and commercial security systems. The Orlando office is that operation's first expansion effort.

"The market for security systems and services has been growing steadily over the past several years," said Edward N. Silcott, vice president and general manager of Westinghouse's Commercial Systems Divisions. "When you consider that less than 4 percent of all the homes in this country have electronic security systems, the market is virtually limitless."

Through its Texas and Florida offices, Westinghouse is marketing residential security systems to homeowners throughout those two states. Other sales offices are expected to open later this year elsewhere around the United States, Silcott said. The company is also developing security systems and services for commercial and industrial applications.

A Westinghouse security system consists mainly of wireless radio frequency electronic sensors which are installed at strategic locations around a home. When activated, the sensors automatically turn on a warning siren and transmit a concurrent alarm signal to a central monitoring facility. The alarm is verified and the authorities are notified to dispatch the appropriate response to the home.

Among the initial services available from Westinghouse Security Systems are intrusion protection, emergency medical response, fire protection, 24-hour-a-day monitoring and a silent panic alarm.

ORLANDO, FL (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines (NYSE: DAL) Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer Ronald W. Allen challenged both industry and governments to create an aviation system that will nurture growth and harness the entrepreneurial spirit of the 1990s, as he made the keynote address at the Travel Industry Association of America's 22nd International Pow Wow at Walt Disney World in Orlando today.

Pow Wow brings together U.S. suppliers of travel services and tour operators from every corner of the world to negotiate tour and travel business.

"One of the greatest challenges facing U.S. decision makers in the coming years is the development of international aviation policies that eliminate or at least reduce, government regulation and permit a market-oriented system," he told the delegates from over 50 countries attending Pow Wow.

Delta wholeheartedly supports an aggressive attitude toward liberalization of bilateral agreements and the initiation of "open skies" proposals that would bring the benefits of U.S. style deregulation to the rest of the world, Allen said, as he pointed out that one need only to examine recently concluded agreements with Japan, Italy and Australia to recognize that the bilateral system perpetuates unnecessary, and oftentimes, irrational government control over air transportation services.

Allen said that in the long run a multilateral regime would facilitate expanded competition and a reduction in government regulation and control over airline services. "A multilateral approach is ideally suited to the dynamism in our industry and the economic and political changes occurring throughout the world," he said. "We fully recognize that the transition to multilateralism will be difficult and will not be achieved in a short period of time.

"We support worldwide aviation policies which encourage growth in international travel, rather than protecting individual interests. This invites the risk of competition, but competition can also provide more efficient and effective service to greater numbers of people," Allen emphasized. "Delta's market presence is not threatened by the possibility of increased competition at our gateway cities; in fact, we have encouraged various flag carriers of other countries to serve Atlanta, Delta's largest hub, because we know that new service stimulates the market."

PONTIAC, MI (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Perry Drug Stores, Inc. (NYSE: PDS) today reported a 23-percent increase in pre-tax earnings for its second quarter ended April 30, a quarter which also witnessed strategic initiatives, including divestitures, a major acquisition in Perry's major market, a return to opening of new stores and introduction of a new computer pharmacy system.

The quarter was Perry's seventh consecutive quarter in which earnings improved over the same period of the previous fiscal year.

Pre-tax earnings for the second quarter were $889,000, a 23-percent increase over the pre-tax earnings of $722,000 for the 1989 second quarter.

For financial statement purposes, the second quarter reflects a provision for income taxes of $285,000. Last year's second quarter did not include an income tax provision due to utilization of tax carryforwards.

Net earnings for the quarter were $604,000, or 6 cents a share. Had the 1989 second-quarter net earnings of $722,000, or 7 cents a share, included a tax provision at the statutory rate, net earnings on a pro forma basis would have been $477,000, or 5 cents a share.

Pre-tax earnings for the first six months of 1990 increased 10 percent from $4.9 million to $5.4 million in the first half of 1989.

Net earnings for the six months, which also, unlike last year, include a provision for taxes, were $3.6 million, or 36 cents per share. Had the 1989 net earnings of $4.9 million, 49 cents per share, reflected a provision for income taxes, net earnings on a pro forma basis would have been $3.2 million, or 32 cents per share.

The earnings were achieved on sales in the second quarter of $158 million compared to $159 million for the comparable period in 1989. Sales for the first six months were $338 million compared to $344 million for the same 1989 six-month period.

Stores in Michigan, Perry's major market, performed well, reporting comparable store sales increases of 4.2 percent.

Perry, a New York Stock Exchange company headquartered in Pontiac, operates 170 drugstores in Michigan and 23 in the Chicago area. It also operates several health-care businesses in Michigan under the name of ComfortCare.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - IDB Communications Group Inc. (NASDAQ: IDBX) today announced that Teleglobe International (U.S.) Inc. has exercised its option to purchase an additional 100,000 newly issued shares of IDB common stock for $11.165 per share. The option, which netted approximately $1 million for IDB, was granted when Teleglobe purchased a 20 percent interest in IDB last February (IDB press release: 2/13/90). IDB applied the proceeds from the purchase towards further debt reduction.

Edward R. Cheramy, president of IDB, explained, "Teleglobe's exercise of its option reflects the close working relationship between IDB and Teleglobe as we jointly launch IDB Aero-Nautical Communications Inc. This transaction was timed to coincide with our decision to market IDBA's mobile telecommunications services to the maritime industry in addition to the aviation industry. Unlike the airline communications services, which are brand new, the maritime communications industry is 10 years old, of substantial size, and hungry for the kinds of services IDBA will offer."

IDBA plans to market ship-to-shore satellite communications services to maritime users, including commercial shipping fleets, fishing vessels, oil rigs and tankers and leisure cruise lines. PITTSBURGH (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Dravo Corp. (NYSE: DRV) today announced that its shell dredging operations under leases from the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries have been suspended.

A decision by the Louisiana Supreme Court not to hear the company's appeal of a lower court ruling gave effect to an injunction requiring that dredging be suspended pending a determination the leases were properly granted pursuant to the public bid laws. A determination hearing has been scheduled for June 11, 1990.

Immediately upon being notified of the Louisiana Supreme Court's decison, the company applied to the Civil District Court, Parish of Orleans, seeking a stay of the injunction pending the determination hearing. Late in the afternoon on June 1, the Civil District Court denied Dravo's request to stay the injuction.

James J. Puhala, general counsel for Dravo Corp., said, "We remain confident that our leases are valid and that they were issued in compliance with the public bid laws of the State of Louisiana."

An article in the New Orleans Times-Picayune quoted Virginia Van Sickle, secretary of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, as saying that as far as the state is concerned, the leases with Dravo are legal.

H. Donovan Ross, president of Dravo Basic Materials Co. Inc., said that sufficient inventories are on hand to meet current needs, and that a temporary suspension would not have a material effect on performance.

Dravo has been engaged in shell dredging in Louisiana since the early 1950s. Shell is an important road building material in Louisiana because of its unique ability to stabilize that state's soft, marshy soils.

PALO ALTO, CA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Hewlett-Packard Co. and Hughes Aircraft Co. today signed a strategic agreement to develop and manufacture advanced workstations, personal computers (PCs) and other related equipment that meets new U.S. government, military and aerospace standards.

The U.S. military has established the Endorsed Tempest Product Program, which sets modification standards that prevent unauthorized tapping into computer equipment via electronic-eavesdropping devices.

The companies estimated the alliance's combined revenue at more than $200 million during the first years of the agreement.

The new alliance is designed to increase HP's presence in the military computer market and to help Hughes extend its military workstation into commercial environments.

Hughes will modify a wide range of HP standard commercial products for the Tempest market. Several HP 9000 Series 300 and Series 800 workstations, HP Vectra PCs and peripherals, including members of the HP LaserJet printer family, will be modified to meet strict Tempest standards required by many government, military and aerospace agencies.

In accordance with the agreement, HP has begun transfer of its current Tempest technology to enhance Hughes' existing Tempest technology base. Concurrently, Hughes officials are planning to create a special operating unit dedicated to the HP alliance. Development of the tactical display workstation and ruggedization of HP commercial workstations are scheduled to begin in the first quarter of 1991.

The new product lines will be designed and manufactured by Hughes from existing HP commercial workstations, PCs and peripheral products. HP will provide sales support and service.

Hughes now is responding to requests for bids on the new Tempest products. Hughes also expects to participate in the Endorsed Tempest Product Program with several HP products.

Hughes Aircraft Co. is one of the world's largest military electronic systems suppliers, as well as the world's largest producer of commercial communications satellites. The company produces more than 12,000 separate electronic systems and components. Hughes has delivered more than 6,000 militarized workstations to the U.S. Navy alone. CAMDEN, SC (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Builders Transport, Incorporated (NASDAQ: TRUK) announced today that it has set Sept. 18, 1990 as the date for its 1990 annual meeting and Aug. 10, 1990 as the record date for that meeting.

In connection with this action, Charles C. Gay, Jr., vice chairman and chief executive officer of the company, stated as follows: "The board of directors has been giving consideration for some time to the appropriate date for the company's 1990 annual meeting. The company has deferred setting a meeting date pending developments with respect to the previously announced proposals from Comcar Industries, Inc. and Trism, Inc. in order that any matters requiring consideration by shareholders could be considered at a single meeting. Trism is continuing to pursue a possible transaction and has completed its due diligence and is working with potential financing sources for the transaction. Comcar has indicated that it is not willing to proceed at this time with the transaction contemplated by its Letter of Intent, and although it is continuing to consider possible transactions involving Builders Transport, the company and Comcar have agreed that the Letter of Intent is no longer operative. The company is still hopeful that a transaction with Trism, Comcar or some other party may be forthcoming, but is also considering other alternatives including an internal restructuring. Accordingly, the board of Builders concluded that it was appropriate to set a date for the annual meeting which would allow for further developments with respect to these various activities. The board of directors is committed to taking whatever action may be appropriate to enhance shareholder values."

David C. Walentas, a dissident shareholder who controls approximately 6.8 percent of Builders' shares outstanding, has initiated litigation in the State of Delaware seeking to cause the company to hold its annual meeting of stockholders at a time earlier than Sept. 20, 1990. RIVERTON, WY (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Energy Corp. (NASDAQ: USEG) and its subsidiary Crested Corp. (NASDAQ: CBAG) announced today that they had signed definitive agreements with the Kennecott Corp. of Salt Lake City which completes their agreement to form a joint venture for the development and production of uranium from the Green Mountain Uranium Project located in south-central Wyoming. Kennecott paid $15 million to U.S. Energy and Crested ("USE Parties") in payments of $6 million prior to June 1, 1990 and $9 million on June 1 for a 50 percent interest in the mineral and other properties owned by U.S. Energy and a joint venture between U.S. Energy and Crested known as USE/CC. Kennecott is to fund the first $50 million of expenses on the project.

Initial development and production of uranium is currently being planned for the Round Park deposit through the proposed Jackpot underground mine. The Round Park deposit is located on the properties which were owned soley by U.S. Energy. The boards of directors of U.S. Energy and Crested adopted a method of apportioning the initial consideration of $15 million, on a ratio of 84 percent for U.S. Energy and 16 percent for Crested. Financial economic analyses were provided to the boards for their consideration to arrive at this ratio. The Round Park uranium deposit contains a drilled resource of more than 50 million pounds of uranium oxide which heavily weighed the ratio percentage in favor of U.S. Energy.

Kennecott also agreed to pay on behalf of the USE Parties $30 million of their operating costs out of 30 percent of its incremental operating margins for production from the individual properties, attributable to price realizations of uranium oxide over $24 per pound (1990 dollars) and an additional $15 million from 30 percent of its incremental operating margins, attributable to price realizations over $27 per pound (1990 dollars). The joint venture named the Green Mountain Mining Venture (the "Venture"), was formed and is owned 50 percent by a wholly owned subsidiary of Kennecott and 50 percent by the USE Parties. The Venture is controlled by a management committee consisting of three members appointed by Kennecott and two by the USE Parties. The USE Parties were appointed as the operator on the project for the initial program. The initial program will consist of conducting further environmental studies, mine permitting and planning, acquisition of milling facilities, property maintenance, implementing a market program and other related activities. The Venture assumed an option to acquire the contiguous properties of Pathfinder Mines Corp. on Green Mountain, which contain substantial uranium resources and the Big Eagle Mine complex. The consideration to acquire this property is the assumption by the Venture of all reclamation obligations currently reported at $7.6 million.

BASKING RIDGE, NJ (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T will mark the fifth anniversary of its USADirect(R) Service by restructuring prices and adding additional countries.

Effective June 18, AT&T will reduce the minimum billing period from three minutes to one minute, providing savings to people making short- duration calls.

At the same time, the company will expand USADirect Service's country list to 78 by adding Montserrat, Paraguay, and Saipan.

Also, USADirect Service calls terminating in Hawaii will be priced the same as USADirect Service calls terminating in the U.S. mainland.

"The new rate structure satisfies the needs of AT&T customers who demand flexibility," said Kathy Owens, USADirect Service product manager. "We've decreased prices to some countries, and the price structure is now easier to understand."

Travelers, expatriates and military personnel have found USADirect Service a convenient and economical way to keep in touch with their friends and relatives in the United States. USADirect Service is economical because calls are billed at AT&T rates and callers generally avoid hotel surcharges. CHICAGO (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - On the occasion of the Consumer Electronics Show, NovAtel Carcom Inc. is pleased to announce it is adding a variety of new accessories to its already well established cellular telephone line of products.

''NovAtel has expanded its accessory line to meet the needs of the cellular market,'' says Ira Tabankin, NovAtel Carcom Inc.'s vice president and general manager, ''We will continue to add items of high volume accessories that give our customers the flexibility they need to add extra profits to their cellular sales.''

Two new antennas have been brought into the line -- a clip-on window antenna and a 90-degree knuckle antenna. Both antennas are primarily used with transportable cellular telephones and can be taken from car to car providing optimal performance. Handset mounting options are also being introduced. The Universal Pedestal Mount, which allows for a 360-degree swivel, the Flex Mount system, which can be bent at any angle and the Clam Shell Mounts, which are low cost, easily installed and attractive.

Many other accessories such as a handset dust cover and antenna connectors are also available. ''NovAtel is able to provide its customers the ability to buy from one source that has a complete accessory program designed to fit their needs,'' says Tabankin.

All NovAtel's accessories are available in attractive retail packaging with universal product codes (UPC). NovAtel Carcom Inc. is also making available point-of-purchase support materials such as free-standing displays, posters and counter top cards.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - On the occasion of the June Consumer Electronics Show, NovAtel Carcom Inc. has unveiled its newest Digital Handsfree Cradle.

It is the first NovAtel handsfree product to use advanced digital signal processing (DSP) techniques with 100 percent full duplex operation. DSP, most commonly found in quality stereo systems, provides the user with the highest quality audio reception ever possible from a cellular telephone, while full duplex allows two people to talk at the same time without a 'cutting out' effect.

According to Tabankin, the digital handsfree has also been given an upgrade in its appearance. ''We've made it an all-in-one design by integrating the cradle for the handset into the base unit. It is sleek, compact and is compatible with NovAtel's premium slim-line 3000 series handsets.''

Other features include superior connector/cable management, a target light for night handset placement and an improved speaker for improved audio quality.

YORK, PA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - York Financial Corp. (NASDAQ: YFED) today announced amendments to its Dividend Reinvestment Plan.

Robert W. Pullo, president and chief executive officer, said, "The recent decline of our common stock price, reducing the market price to less than book value of the company, has effectively eliminated the advantage of issuing stock and raising additional capital in this manner." The plan was amended to eliminate the voluntary contribution discount of 10 percent although voluntary contributions will continue to be allowed to a quarterly maximum of $2,500 or $10,000 per year. The 10 percent discount to market price is continued for reinvestment of quarterly cash dividends.

Additionally, the plan was amended to authorize management to provide the stock, to accommodate the dividend reinvestment purchase by either aquiring such stock in the open market or issuing stock from its treasury stock account, or issuing new stock that is presently authorized but unissued. The plan also was amended to change the determination of the issuance price of the reinvestment of dividends by using the lowest trade on the determination day instead of the closing bid price. This amendment, said the company, is necessitated by the continuing wide spread between the bid and the ask price being quoted on the company stock. The company said it is believed that the actual trades are more representative of normal activity.

The company said it believes these amendments are necessary to protect the investments of its stockholders and to discourage any arbitrageurs or other investors who would have no continuing interest in the company from potentially manipulating the price or volume of its stock.

TRENTON, NJ (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Base Ten Systems, Inc.'s (NASDAQ: BASEA) President, M. M. Kranzler, today announced the company's six-month results.

Second quarter net operating earnings increased from $.08 to $.12 per share on revenues of $12,164,000 and the six-month net operating earnings increased from $.01 to $.28 per share on revenues of $24,576,000 as compared with 1989 operating performance.

The company today released the following letter: Our company is now in an exciting transition. We are working to become an important custom manufacturer of complex electronic devices and systems designed by others in addition to designing and manufacturing our own proprietary products. We now have a remarkable new platform for growth not previously available to us.

Because of changes in the defense market, large prime contractors are not only "downsizing" but "outsourcing." That is, they are developing a tier of custom subcontractors who have electronics and software engineering skills as well as manufacturing capacity and who are able to react quickly to new requirements. This tier of subcontractors is intended to be a manufacturing arm of the large prime contractors for short and long runs of complex electronic systems. These projects will require a manufacturer with a high level of engineering and program management support which could not be accommodated by the mass production, routine manufacturing, low labor cost facilities found in the Far East and Mexico.

This movement by the large prime contractors is impelled by the national need to innovate, to produce at lower cost, to be flexible and to minimize risk in the event of government spending variations. Base Ten is uniquely qualified to thrive in this environment. We have a wealth of design experience. We are of the right size to expand and contract quickly by the addition of contract personnel. We have a solid core of engineering, manufacturing and management professionals and we are not bound to any one product or market area. This business has an exciting growth potential. A 50-million dollar per year custom manufacturing business within the next five years would be a realistic target but much more can be achieved if we are quick enough to take advantage of this opportunity.

In addition to manufacturing for others, we intend to continue to design and build proprietary products for our customers in both government and industry. Our weapons control business, which has supported us so well in the past, is expected to contribute revenue in the tens of millions per year for the next several years and our new products in the "privacy of information" market are developing increased interest. In addition to orders announced in the first quarter report, because of our work in the "privacy" field, we have generated new orders valued at over $800,000 for related products. The total "privacy of information" market is estimated to be well over 100 million dollars in 1990. Our view is that this market will grow very rapidly and we intend to capture a meaningful share.

Our company is restructuring in preparation for the decade of the nineties. Combining custom manufacturing with our proprietary defense and "privacy of information" products gives us three separate paths for growth and earnings. The balance we achieve between these mutually compatible but independent businesses will change to suit the market.

1990 net operating earnings are expected to be about one-third higher than in 1989. Company performance for 1991 and beyond will be significantly influenced by the timing and outcome of new marketing situations currently developing. We expect to be able to better estimate the level of our participation in these programs later this year and will report to you as information becomes available.

GREENWICH, CT (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - United Parcel Service will expand its Southwest region air hub by building a $21 million, 250,000 square-foot package handling facility at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport, company officials said.

Construction of the building at D/FW will begin in fall of 1991 on 61 acres of leased land located on the west side of the airport. When the facility opens in June 1994, the hub will employ about 600 people, with a planned expansion to 1000 employees by 1997.

The selection of D/FW ends a three-year search in the Texas and Oklahoma areas for an airport site that could accommodate UPS's need to co-locate its regional air and local ground delivery operations.

D/FW was chosen because its location meets UPS's strategic needs for local ground and air sort capabilities, according to Mike Briggs, UPS's southwest region manager.

Initially, the new air hub will continue to handle the sorting of UPS Next Day Air packages with origin and destination points primarily in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Currently one of four facilities in the UPS air hub and spoke system, the D/FW air hub is expected to handle 28 flights daily. Initially, 50-70 drivers will be assigned to the facility. When fully operational, as many as 150 drivers will be serving local delivery needs from D/FW.

In addition to the major package sorting facility, UPS also will construct a separate, 15,000 square-foot building for air freight services.

UPS completed construction of an East Coast regional air hub in Philadelphia last September and operates a West Coast air hub in Ontario, Canada. Plans call for expansion of the Ontario hub in the early 1990s. Both facilities include co-located ground sort and delivery operations similar to those planned for the new D/FW building.

The company's national air hub, located in Louisville, Ky., will continue to be the main exchange point for UPS's daily air volume of more than 700,000 packages and documents.

UPS, based in Greenwich, Conn., is a worldwide company serving all 50 states and more than 180 countries and territories. With a volume of 2.8 billion packages and documents in 1989, and revenues of more than $12 billion, UPS is the world's largest package delivery company.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines today asked the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) for authority which would enable it to offer daily non-stop flights from its hubs in Chicago and Washington D.C. to both Moscow and Berlin.

United's application for Moscow service comes on the heels of a new air travel agreement signed at the recent U.S.-Soviet summit. The agreement expands the potential for new commercial air service between the two countries.

''We expect that air travel growth will keep pace with the development of improved relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union,'' said Stephen M. Wolf, United chairman and president. ''Our applications position us to take advantage of these opportunities as they emerge.''

United has proposed to start its Moscow service in April 1992 when flight-frequency limitations are eased under the terms of the new bilateral agreement. United proposes to offer daily non-stop flights to Moscow from Chicago O'Hare International Airport and Washington Dulles International Airport using Boeing 767-300ER aircraft.

The U.S.-Soviet agreement permits two U.S. carriers to operate between Chicago and Moscow. No U.S. carrier currently serves that market or holds authority to begin service. Between Washington D.C. and Moscow, two U.S. passenger carriers and one all-cargo carrier may receive authority for service. Only one carrier currently has authority to serve that market.

With regard to its Berlin application, United told the DOT that with changes occurring in the political situation surrounding jurisdiction over air service to Berlin, it wants its application for Chicago-Berlin and Washington D.C.-Berlin considered when the DOT decides to extend new route authority to U.S. carriers. In its filing, United said it would serve the route with Boeing 767-300ER aircraft.

The proposed Moscow and Berlin routes would expand United's new trans-Atlantic service, which started May 15. United inaugurated its first scheduled service to Europe with flights from Chicago and Washington D.C. to Frankfurt, West Germany. The carrier will add daily flights between Chicago and Paris on Aug. 1.

ENGLEWOOD, CO (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Jones Intercable Investors L.P. (AMEX: JTV), a publicly-traded master limited partnership for which Jones Intercable Inc. (NASDAQ: JOIN) serves as general partner, today announced financial results for its first quarter of 1990, which ended March 31.

Previously, the partnership declared a 35 cent per unit distribution for its second quarter ending June 30, 1990. The distribution will be paid on or about Aug. 15, 1990 to unitholders of record as of June 1, 1990.

Revenues for the three months ended March 31, 1990 increased 14 percent from $7,494,000 in 1989 to $8,542,000 in 1990. This increase is attributed to gains in subscribers and basic service rate increases implemented in both systems in February 1990. Basic subscribers in the two systems increased approximately 8,000, or 9 percent, from 88,000 at March 31, 1989 to 96,000 at March 31, 1990. This increase is due in part to the construction of 56 miles of plant which passes approximately 3,600 homes in the partnership's Independence, Mo. system, and marketing efforts in both the Independence and the Alexandria, Va. systems.

Operating, general and administrative expenses increased approximately $766,000, or 20 percent, for the three month period ended March 31, 1990, due largely to increases in programming costs and marketing expenses.

Operating loss decreased approximately 25 percent for the three month period ended March 31, 1990, down from $1,915,000 in the first quarter of 1989 to $1,426,000 in the first quarter of 1990 due mainly to the increase in revenues and a reduction in depreciation and amortization expense.

Interest expense for the first quarter increased approximately $260,000, or 24 percent, from $1,070,000 at March 31, 1989 to $1,330,000 at March 31 1990 due to increased borrowings related to the above-mentioned capital improvements and quarterly distributions to unitholders.

The partnership's net loss decreased approximately 8 percent, from $2,974,000 at March 31, 1989 to $2,748,000 at March 31, 1990. The net loss for the three month period was largely the result of depreciation and amortization expenses of approximately $4,507,000, and is expected to continue in the future.

Jones Intercable Investors, was formed for the purpose of acquiring, owning and operating cable television systems in the United States. It presently owns and operates cable television systems serving approximately 96,000 subscribers in Independence, and Alexandria. NEW YORK (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - General Instrument Corp.'s (NYSE: GRL) VideoCipher Division has applied to the Federal Communications Commission to enter its new, proprietary digital compression and transmission technology into the FCC's testing for a national high definition television (HDTV) standard for terrestrial television broadcasting.

The new technology, presently named DigiCipher(TM), uses proprietary techniques, for which patents have been applied, to digitize and compress television signals. If accepted for testing, DigiCipher will be the only all-digital technology under consideration.

The VideoCipher Division submitted its application to Richard Wiley, chairman of the FCC's Advisory Committee on Advanced Television Services, along with a testing fee. The Advisory Committee is overseeing testing of proposed HDTV systems. Testing is scheduled to begin as early as November and to conclude in December 1991. The advisory panel is to submit its standards recommendation to the FCC in September 1992.

The DigiCipher system proposed for terrestrial broadcasting is an all-digital simulcast system. The HDTV signal would be completely contained within a 6 MHz channel, consistent with current terrestrial and cable television channelization. The NTSC signal would continue to be transmitted on the currently assigned channel providing continuous service to all current NTSC sets. The DigiCipher HDTV signal would be transmitted on a second channel and could be received only by new HDTV sets.

The technology is the outgrowth of a two-year research and development effort initially directed toward cable television and satellite applications. As a result of this technological background, the DigiCipher technology will be applicable to all transmission media, including terrestrial broadcasting, cable television, and satellite.

HOUSTON (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - On May 31, 1990, Regal International Inc., (NYSE: RGL), the Houston-based maker of rubber products for the oil and gas industry, was advised by the New York Stock Exchange that it could rely upon the exception to the shareholder approval policy to issue 12 million shares of common stock without prior shareholder approval.

The approval came in response to a recent application filed by the company seeking an exception to the requirement that shareholder approval be obtained prior to the listing and issuance of additional shares of common stock. After 10 days advance notice to the current shareholders as required by the Exchange, the shares will be sold to Zurich Corp. upon exercise of an option previously granted to Zurich in connection with a refinancing arrangement negotiated earlier this year by the company. The audit committee of the board of directors expressly approved the sale of the shares without shareholder approval after concluding that the delay necessary to obtain shareholder approval would seriously jeopardize the financial viability of the company.

Zurich acquired the option in exchange for working capital loans made to the company, an agreement to refinance a major portion of the company's current debt, and an agreement to fund a major portion of the company's share of a pending settlement in a suit brought by the Environmental Protection Agency against a wholly-owned subsidiary of Regal. Upon payment of the option price of 25 cents per share and performance of Zurich's other obligations, the 12 million shares will be issued.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - A program is under way at McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) to help helicopter pilots avoid such obstacles as suspended wire/ cable systems so they can fly lower and faster during combat missions.

A $237,000 contract to McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. in Mesa, Ariz., is enabling the company to continue flight simulation work on the Obstacle Avoidance System (OASYS) being managed by the U.S. Army's Center for Night Vision and Electro-Optics. The company first received a one-year $470,000 OASYS contract in October 1988.

The Army's primary objective in developing an OASYS system is to improve pilots' combat mission effectiveness. Currently, pilots must fly higher when they know obstacles are present, thus increasing their exposure to the enemy.

"Our work is the first step toward production of an OASYS sensor," said McDonnell Douglas program manager Jim Wasson. "Using our advanced flight simulation capabilities, we're evaluating candidate sensor parameters and symbology needed in an OASYS system to detect objects such as power and telephone wires, antennas and communication towers while also alerting pilots early enough for corrective action."

Tests have been conducted in the company's Advanced Apache simulator using a pilot night vision system (PNVS) and Integrated Helmet and Display Sight System (IHADSS) for presentation of visual information, Wasson said. Eight obstacles, ranging in size from power poles to single wires, were created for the data base.

These tests allowed engineers to eliminate unworkable concepts and concentrate on optimizing pilot operational effectiveness in regard to OASYS detection ranges, field of view (FOV), frame time, skewing/stabilization mechanisms and avoidance cues, Wasson said.

"We measured items such as the maximum detection range and the effect of different detection ranges on a pilot's ability to properly maneuver the aircraft and avoid a wire strike," he said. "Our studies on the effectiveness of various sensor fields of view also yielded some interesting results."

A pilot's field of view through the PNVS is 30 degrees by 40 degrees. McDonnell Douglas found that a smaller FOV could be effective if the scanning frame time and detection ranges are adequate to ensure obstacles are detected.

The company will work through November to develop a set of visual and aural warning symbols to best aid pilots at different detection ranges.

SAN RAFAEL (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - William M. Henderson, just named executive vice president and a director of the First National Bank of Marin, says the bank's lending programs are quickly filling the banking needs of Marin County entrepreneurs and professionals.

"The big banks have cut back their allegiance to the local community," says Henderson, who returns to Marin County after having served as vice president of Security Pacific National Bank in Arizona.

Henderson, carrying forward the First National Bank of Marin's commitment to creative community banking, will be chief lending officer of the bank. The bank is fast winning recognition in the North Bay for innovative niche banking techniques that have put badly needed funds into the hands of many whose needs are not met by large banks.

"It is our intention to continue to develop specialized programs," says Henderson.

The bank's new services include full-service banking tailored to the needs of doctors, lawyers, accountants, consultants and other professionals. The bank is also aggressively seeking Small Business Administration-backed loans for small and mid-sized local business clients. And it is financing insurance premiums under an arrangement it has with more than a dozen insurance underwriters.

"The big banks have pulled decision-making away from the branch system," says Henderson. "In doing so they have in effect disfranchised much of the population. We feel this is an area where we can offer the personalized service that people want and deserve."

Henderson served as vice president and manager of the Security Pacific National Bank in San Rafael from 1980 to 1982 after holding managerial positions with the bank in San Francisco, Menlo Park and Palo Alto.

A community servant during his earlier period in Marin County, Henderson expects to resume his activities at the Marin County Chamber of Commerce, San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and other organizations.

"If you serve a community, you should live in and contribute to that community," says Henderson.

First National Bank of Marin Chairman A.C. Rice, in appointing Henderson, said, "Bill's overall banking knowledge, gained over a quarter century, and his commitment to Marin County will combine to make the kind of banker this bank and this community needs."

RICHMOND, VA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - American Papermaker magazine has selected Chesapeake Corporation (NYSE: CSK) as its best-managed company for 1989. The selection was made by the editor and editorial staff of American Papermaker. This is the second year that the magazine has cited a best-managed company. Chesapeake Corporation shares the recognition with last year's winner, Westvaco Corp.

Jerome A. Koncel, editor of American Papermaker, said, "We looked for a mature company that had made changes and had been able to manage those changes in the best possible way. We also looked for a company that over the years had the ability to manage its human and natural resources effectively. In addition, we looked for a company that utilized its natural assets and manufacturing operations in the most efficient and productive manner."

An article in the June issue of American Papermaker will feature interviews with Chesapeake Corporation's top executives: J. Carter Fox, president and chief executive officer; Paul A. Dresser Jr., executive vice president and chief financial officer; and Frederick V. Ernst, executive vice president and president, West Point Operations.

Fox commented on the contributing factors of Chesapeake's success over the years. "To be responsive to the initiatives and needs of our business, we pushed responsibility and authority down into the organization. We want people to be creative, to make decisions and act instead of waiting to be told what to do.

A strong focus, a well-ordered but flexible plan, good people, good working relationships with customers and suppliers, and sensitivity to changes in the marketplace are also important contributing factors.

Chesapeake was credited by American Papermaker as being a company with great resiliency; the ability to adjust to past and present forces affecting every pulp and paper company; and the ability to grow and prosper despite those external and internal pressures.

American Papermaker is a trade publication of the paper industry published by Allen-Abernathy Publishing Division of A/S/M/ Communications Inc.

Chesapeake Corporation is an integrated paper and forest products company that produces and markets kraft, tissue, packaging and treated wood products.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) reported that Unit 1 at the Limerick Generating Station, Montgomery County was manually removed from service today by plant operators at 2:25 p.m.

The unit, which has been operating for 378 consecutive days since returning from a refueling outage on May 22, 1989, developed a problem in a valve that regulates condenser vacuum in the non-nuclear part of the plant. While operators were reducing the unit's power level to repair the valve, a malfunction of one of the power supplies to the unit's electro hydraulic control system required operators to take the turbine generator completely out of service.

While the cause of the power supply loss is being investigated, plant operators also removed the Unit 1 reactor from operation in order to perform the maintenance needed prior to the summer peak period.

PE reported the manual shutdown of the unit to the appropriate state, county and regulatory agencies.

RICHMOND, CA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Chevron U.S.A. Inc. today announced that an application for certification for the possible modernization of the company's Richmond refinery has been submitted to the California Energy Commission (CEC).

The filing is another step by Chevron to determine the feasibility of a previously announced $1 billion modernization proposal at the Richmond refinery, which would include state-of-the-art technology to increase operating efficiency, improve environmental conditions and conserve water resources. The permit process, as conducted by the CEC, will include extensive participation by local agencies and interested parties, and take about 18 months. Other local and state permitting may begin while the permitting process continues with the CEC.

The project, if found to be viable, would afford operational and environmental benefits, including increasing the refinery's ability to convert heavy oil components to lighter transportation products, such as gasoline, jet fuel and diesel. Reductions in the amount of fuel oil produced by the refinery will be realized and the need for saltwater from the San Francisco Bay for cooling would be eliminated.

Other benefits from the proposed project include conserving natural gas through reduced refinery consumption and reducing total emissions from the refinery. The modernization of the refinery would include facilities to allow Chevron to produce methanol-derived methyl tertiary butyl ether, which may be used in emissions-reducing reformulated gasolines. In addition, new local jobs and taxes would be generated as part of the construction and ongoing operations of the proposed project.

A final decision by Chevron whether to proceed with the project is expected to be made after total costs are determined and all permits are acquired.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Diversified Energies Inc. (NYSE: DEI) said today that its meter reading system unit has expanded its multi-year Accu-Read(R) system contract with Atlanta Gas Light Co. to one million units and has extended the time period under which units will be sold.

In August of 1989, Atlanta Gas Light signed a contract to purchase a 500,000-unit package of the AccuRead system. That contract -- valued at about $26 million -- followed a 50,000-unit purchase in 1987. Financial terms for the additional 500,000 units were not disclosed.

The AccuRead system is being marketed in the United States and internationally by DEI's Minneapolis-based EnScan Inc., unit to natural gas, electric and water utilities.

Albert D. Etchelecu, chairman and chief executive officer of DEI, said the expanded contract reflects the strong business relationship and commitment that has developed between EnScan and Atlanta Gas Light since 1986 when the AccuRead system was introduced to the marketplace. Atlanta Gas Light was the first natural gas utility to purchase an evaluation package for testing on its gas meters.

Atlanta Gas Light is headquartered in Atlanta and serves more than one million customers in 223 communities including Atlanta, Augusta, Macon, Savannah and Rome, Ga. It is one of 18 investor-owned and public utilities that are either implementing large-scale installations of the AccuRead system, or that are testing the system on their gas, electric or water meters.

The AccuRead system, which operates through advanced radio frequency technologies and computer software applications that are proprietary to EnScan, enables utilities to read their customers' meters simply by driving by their homes at normal traffic speeds on specially equipped vehicles. One vehicle can read up to 24,000 meters in an eight-hour period, compared to 250-400 meters that can be read the traditional way of walking routes and manually reading meters.

While Metrobank failed to meet this requirement as of May 15, 1990, the NASD has granted a temporary exception from this standard, subject to Metrobank meeting certain conditions. While the company said it believes that it can meet the NASD conditions for conditional inclusion in the HUTCHINSON, KS (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Doskocil Companies Incorporated (NASDAQ: DOSKQ) announced the temporary closing of the slaughtering operations at its Marshall, Mo. facility effective Monday, June 11. Other operations at this plant, including further value-added products, will not be affected and will continue.

This action, which should effect approximately 500 people, is being taken as a result of current industry economic conditions which negatively impact margins in this area of operations. Live hog costs per hundred weight have increased significantly in comparison to the cost of hogs in any of the preceding three years. This in turn has made it difficult to maintain acceptable margins. Traditionally the summer season for the pork industry is one of reduced slaughter levels and demand for product. When these factors are combined with the current high livestock costs, it is expected that this negative impact will continue through the entire summer.

The company indicated it will continually monitor industry conditions and resume those operations at the Marshall facility as soon as the environment becomes more favorable. It is currently anticipated that would occur sometime within the next six months. In the meantime, the company is taking the necessary steps to meet the needs of its customers from production at other facilities.

SOUTHFIELD, MI (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Automotive has realigned two of its primary business groups which are major suppliers of the global heavy truck industry in order to enhance the abilities of each organization to more effectively serve their respective markets.

The Bendix Heavy Vehicle Systems Group (BHVSG) and the Garrett Automotive Group, which also supplies the global passenger car industry, will remain as separate entities, although some key top management functions will be consolidated to maximize the strengths and synergies of both organizations according to John W. Day, president of Allied-Signal Automotive.

George A. Jovan, vice president and group executive of BHVSG, will assume the additional responsibilities of group executive of Garrett, said Day. Key functions to be consolidated within the two operating groups include North American operations and production support, and the worldwide information systems and services, finance and employee relations activities.

The research, engineering and marketing activities of both groups will remain separate in order to continue to be responsive to the needs of their respective customer bases, added Day.

Richard M. Bourgerie, former president of Garrett Automotive, is resigning to return to the Detroit area and pursue other interests.

Day said the organizational changes will be particularly beneficial to the two business groups since their customer bases, manufacturing operations and product lines are essentially complementary, and they both serve global markets from bases in North America, Europe, Latin America and the Far East.

BHVSG is a leading supplier of air brake system components, anti- lock braking systems, electronics and engine accessories to heavy truck and engine manufacturers.

Garrett Automotive is the world's leading supplier of charge air systems (turbochargers and charge air coolers) for commercial diesels and passenger cars.

Each business also is a major player in the replacement parts market. Jovan's appointment and the alignment of key functions within his staff will further maximize the potential within each business unit, added Day.

Day said Jovan's 17 years of experience in the automotive industry and the solid reputation he has earned among vehicle builders, other industry and aftermarket leaders and government groups will be an asset to Garrett Automotive in further strengthening its global position.

DETROIT (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Michigan Bell has changed the name of its Directory Assistance service to "Information" to more accurately describe the service Bell operators now provide and hope to provide in the future.

"We do furnish more than telephone numbers from the directory. For example customers can call for area code information and emergency numbers," said Roger D'Hondt, Michigan Bell district manager of public market staff. "In the future, we hope our operators will be able to provide other kinds of information customers need."

The new name is one of a number of changes Michigan Bell has made to its directory assistance service. Michigan Bell recently discontinued reconnecting customers to Information operators after the automated system states their requested number. The reconnect was eliminated to speed handling of additional directory assistance calls.

"Eighty percent of the customers reconnected to operators were in the process of hanging up," D'Hondt said. "Each day our operators were answering thousands of calls which had no customer on the line. Ending the reconnect freed them up to answer additional incoming calls."

"Callers who need more than one number should tell the operator at the beginning of the call," D'Hondt said. "Our operators will be glad to provide multiple numbers to customers who need them."

Michigan Bell has made one more change to directory assistance. The automated system which states requested numbers now thanks customers "for calling Michigan Bell."

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - As a major force in municipal derivatives Citicorp (NYSE: CCI) will increase its resource commitment and focus primarily on derivative product development, origination and distribution. As a consequence, Citicorp will discontinue some of its more traditional municipal finance businesses: long-term competitive and negotiated underwriting, trading and distribution. Other long standing services to municipal entities such as investment agreements, short-term remarketing and distribution, and various credit and liquidity services are unaffected by this change.

Glen Sergeon, head of municipal finance, said, "This new emphasis will allow us to provide the kinds of innovative risk management opportunities to the municipal issuers and investors of America that are readily available now in the taxable arena."

"This move represents a deliberate strategy to leverage our strength as the number one worldwide provider of derivative products and to invest in an area where we can truly distinguish ourselves. Like most segments in financial services we see municipal finance becoming increasingly specialized, with more players focusing on their areas of strength as opposed to trying to be all things to all customers."

NBC revealed the details of the joint effort during the network's annual affiliate station convention this evening in Washington.

NBC will promote its new fall season with the theme, "NBC: The Place To Be." Stouffer's will "be there," taking advantage of the new-season hype with concentrated on-air advertising for Stouffer's Entrees, Lean Cuisine(R) and Pizza during the fall season premieres. The shows include, "Fresh Prince of Bel Air," "Ferris Bueller," "Law and Order," "The Fanelli Boys," "Parenthood," "Working It Out," "American Dreamer," "Hull St. High" and "Signs of Life."

The program, developed by Della Femina, McNamee-Pittsburgh, also includes print advertising and an extensive supermarket promotion to support Stouffer's on-air effort.

Jerry DeCroce, vice president of marketing for Stouffer's said, "We were looking for a unique way to optimize our fall advertising and NBC was searching for a way to reach the consumer in the supermarket. The promotional campaign that we'll embark upon is the result of a very natural partnership, one in which the two organizations involved recognize the very important role played by supermarkets today in transmitting information to millions of consumers.

"Everyone involved benefits -- NBC garners more attention for its fall season and we optimize our advertising dollars, spurring sales for us and the supermarkets as well. Additionally, supermarkets host 'the special event,' a national promotion that will provide consumers with scores of prizes tied to the fall season premiere."

During the NBC fall season premiere, Stouffer's commercials will air during prime time, particularly in the new programs. Stouffer's print advertising, supporting the television campaign, will appear in TV Guide, People, USA Today and Entertainment Weekly.

Stouffer's also will launch an aggressive sales promotion program to attract consumers and create excitement in thousands of supermarkets nationwide. Off-shelf displays, point-of-purchase materials and consumer promotion information have been designed to draw attention to the Stouffer's section of supermarket freezers, as well as entice viewers to tune in to NBC's fall premiere season. Promotional materials highlight a contest in which consumers will be asked to answer specific questions about NBC's new programs, and can qualify to win trips to Hollywood, tickets to NBC show tapings and other prizes.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The following was released by the government of Liberia:

The government of Liberia under the leadership of President Samuel Doe is working to restore peace in this troubled African country which remains besieged by a Libyan-sponsored rebel force headed by Liberian fugitive Charles Taylor. In an effort to ensure the safety of the populace and the security of the state, Doe is calling for a cease fire to be monitored by the United Nations. Furthermore, the president has requested that an international observer group consisting of representatives of the United Nations and the Carter Center oversee free and fair elections scheduled for next year.

Last week, Doe met with the Liberian National Assembly, the leadership of the Liberian Armed Forces, and the Foreign Diplomatic Corps in Monrovia in an effort to end the conflict in Liberia. President Doe has repeatedly stated his desire for a cessation of the escalating violence and ethnic clashes.

As a staunch ally of the United States, Doe has also requested that the United States assist in mediating a settlement that will expedite a return to peace. The close historical ties between the United States and Liberia have led many Liberian and American officials alike to claim that the United States has an obligation to assist the Liberians in resolving their conflict. Moreover, without the United States-suported mediation, Liberia appears destined to sink even deeper into ethnic turmoil, resulting in thousands of more deaths.

Despite the current state of war in this West African nation, the Liberian government is continuing to move forward in implementing political reform measures. In order to facilitate a national reconciliation, Doe recently announced that he will not run in the upcoming national elections. In addition, he called for elections to be held ahead of schedule in order to restore national unity more rapidly.

In September 1985, rebel leader Charles Taylor escaped from an American jail where he was awaiting to be extradited to Liberia to faces charges of embezzling $1 million while serving as the director general of the Liberian General Services Agency. Taylor's movement has gained support in light of the recent incident on May 30, 1990, when men posing as Liberian soldiers attacked unarmed civilians at the United Nations compound in Monrovia. President Doe has condemned this act and stated that the perpetrators of the crime will be brought to justice as soon as they are found.

The government of Liberia has retained van Kloberg & Associates Ltd., as its public relations and government affairs counsel in Washington D.C., as part of its effort to obtain U.S. assistance in resolving the Liberian conflict.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The United States Supreme Court issued a decision today that is expected to bring the interstate trucking industry an additional $100 million in refunds of unconstitutional taxes collected by Arkansas, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Kentucky.

"This is a major victory in the continuing battle to eliminate discriminatory state taxation of the trucking industry," said Thomas J. Donohue, president and chief executive officer of the American Trucking Associations (ATA).

In The American Trucking Association v. Smith (No. 88-325), the court unanimously held that truckers who paid an unconstitutional flat Arkansas tax for use of the state's highways after the court's landmark 1987 decision in American Trucking Associations Inc. v. Scheiner striking down such taxes were entitled to relief. The decision affects over $20 million in flat-tax payments in Arkansas, and sets a precedent for refunds in three other states: Pennsylvania (over $50 million), Kentucky (over $24 million), and New Jersey (over $9 million).

"While the court ruled 5-4 that Scheiner should not be applied retroactively to the Arkansas tax, ATA may still pursue the pre- Scheiner flat-tax payments in Pennsylvania, Kentucky and New Jersey if satisfactory arrangements cannot be made with the states," Donohue said. "After all, we've already won initial court decisions in Kentucky and New Jersey, and in the Pennsylvania case the state had agreed in writing at the outset to refund the taxes if they were later held unconstitutional." These pre-Scheiner payments total approximately $450 million in Pennsylvania, $19 million in Kentucky, and $25 million in New Jersey, Donohue said.

In an important related victory for truckers and other taxpayers, the Supreme Court ruled in the companion case of McKesson Corp. v. Florida (No. 88-192), in which ATA participated, that when states are found to have imposed unconstitutional taxes, they must provide refunds or other relief.

The court also ruled in McKesson that states may no longer escape paying refunds by attempting to claim that truckers and others pass along the cost of unconstitutional taxes to their customers in the form of higher prices, noting that this puts them at a competitive disadvantage by forcing them to charge more for their services.

Donohue said, with these decisions and earlier ATA victories, the interstate trucking industry has reaped the following major benefits:

-- The ATA Litigation Center's victories over flat truck taxes in 10 states have resulted in an average annual tax decrease of $452.60 per truck;

-- $26.3 million in the flat-tax refunds already awarded or agreed to in Maryland, Indiana, Vermont, Michigan and Maine;

-- Over $100 million in refunds of post-Scheiner flat-tax payments now due the industry as a result of the court's decision today;

-- A now-undisputed federal constitutional right to refunds or other relief when a state imposes an unconstitutional tax in the future. This will have a positive effect on ATA's pending cases challenging Arkansas' weight-distance tax and decal fee, New Hampshire's decal fee and hazardous materials transport fee, and Mississippi's decal fee and cab card fee; and

-- An end to states' claim that they do not have to pay refunds because the companies paying the taxes had passed along the cost of the taxes to their customers.

"These Supreme Court decisions represent a positive step for the trucking industry, and we look forward to working with the states to develop tax structures that will fund a modern, efficient, well- maintained highway system, with trucks paying their fair -- and non- discriminatory -- share of the cost," said Donohue.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (JUNE 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Fletcher Challenge Canada (Toronto, Montreal: FCC) President and Chief Executive Officer, Ian Donald, announced today that an agreement in principle has been reached between the company's wholly owned subsidiary Blandin Paper Company and Potlatch Corporation on the sale of the Blandin Wood Products Company oriented strand board (OSB) plant for an undisclosed amount, which will result in a gain for Blandin Paper Company.

The boards of directors of the two companies, in separate meetings, gave approval today to finalize details of the sale of the Grand Rapids, Minn. facility. The transaction is expected to close in late June.

''In spite of the excellent progress the company has made, it was determined that OSB did not fit into Blandin Paper Company's strategic long term plan,'' said Donald. ''We believe the employees and the plant will be better served through ownership by a company whose mission includes a stronger role for OSB. In the past few years the performance of Blandin Wood Products has improved steadily, and a great deal of that improvement is a result of the dedication of the employees.''

''This is a real opportunity for Potlatch to further expand its capabilities to offer additional products in the structural panel market

'' said Richard B. Madden, Potlatch chairman and chief executive officer, ''and we are excited about expanding Potlatch's operations into the Grand Rapids area.''

The Blandin plant began operations in 1972. An entire new production line was built, and the old line retired, in December 1981. The board-forming equipment was modified in 1986 to enable the manufacture of oriented strand board. The grand Rapids plant currently employs 167 employees and produces 340 million square feet of OSB annually.

Potlatch has operated OSB plants in Bemidji and Cook, Minn. since the early 1980's and is one of North America's leading wood products manufacturers.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev Sunday made the first visit to America's heartland by a Soviet leader in 31 years. But a heavy downpour caused Gorbachev to miss his chance to see Richard and Cecilia Brand's dairy farm. The couple say their disappointment was appeased somewhat by an invitation from Gorbachev to visit the Soviet Union.

Raisa Gorbachev did make her scheduled visit with a Minnesota family. In fact, the Soviet president's wife spent three times longer than planned with the Watson family. Mrs. Gorbachev asked the family questions about their family and home life- including whether they owned their home and if they recieve financial support from their family.

A-B-C News says its Beijing bureau chief and a camera operator were attacked by security guards at Beijing University... then detained and forced to sign an apology. The network protested the assault in a message to China's U-S ambassador. The attack came as the pair covered a protest marking the first anniversary of China's brutal crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

A brutal weekend for Indiana. Officials say the state suffered its worst outbreak of tornadoes since 1974, when 48 deaths were reported. A total of nine people died in weather-related deaths... with eight people killed as some 44 tornadoes moved through the state Saturday evening. High winds came again Sunday, downing a tree and killing a child in a park in Clinton County.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The process of picking a jury to hear Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial is scheduled to begin Monday morning in Washington, D-C. The mayor of the nation's capital has predicted the trial will end in acquittal. But, there have been persistent reports a plea bargain may avert a trial altogether.

Officials say a single-engine airplane crashed after takeoff and burst into flames at Otsego County Airport in northern Michigan, killing four people. Severe thunderstorms with wind gusts as strong as 30 miles an hour were reported in the area at the time of Sunday's crash.

KALAPANA, Hawaii (JUNE 4) UPI - Lava from Kilauea Volcano poured into the ocean Sunday, sending up billowing white clouds of steam containing hydrochloric acid and volcanic particles and adding to the coastline of the island of Hawaii.

''The volume of lava entering the ocean is high. It has created a delta of about 50-75 yards wide and 50-75 yards out into the sea,'' said Hawaii County Civil Defense Administrator Harry Kim.

The molten rock reached the ocean after destroying a pavilion located on the former site of the Star of the Sea Catholic Church in Kalapana Village. The church had been moved to safety last month.

''The laze factor is quite high,'' said Kim, referring to the potentially toxic clouds of steam created when hot lava hits ocean water.

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health has promised to send a team into the area to monitor the air quality and determine if the fumes posed a health risk, he said.

Strong tradewinds Sunday blew the clouds away from habitation and towards areas of Kalapana that had already been devastated by previous lava flows.

The Kalapana store, the Star of the Sea painted church, and the Mauna Kea Congregational Church had made up the center of what is now a ghost town on the southeast shore of the island, some 200 miles from Honolulu.

Only the store remained untouched at the site, although lava had covered its parking lot and approached to within five feet of the structure.

''Movement has stopped at the store, but the lava is still hot and there is some inflation, so it (can) move again at any time,'' said Kim.

The occupants of 16 homes in the Kaimu area, about a mile east of Kalapana Village, have been put on standby alert, Kim said.

Some seven miles up slope at the Kupaianaha vent, Kilauea was spewing out about 650,000 cubic yards of molten rock daily. The 2,000-degree lava runs into underground tubes until it surfaces near what is left of the rural settlement.

The eruption, which began in January 1983, has rolled over three rural housing areas and turned the region into a federal disaster area.

Lava has burned 160 homes and other structures, causing an estimated $61 million in damage.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - ''City of Angels,'' a musical comedy about Hollywood, nosed out ''Grand Hotel'' as top winner in Broadway's 44th annual Tony Awards, with ''The Grapes of Wrath'' taking Best Play honors.

The Larry Gelbart-Cy Coleman musical won six of the American Theatre Wings' Antoinette Perry Awards presented Sunday night, including Best Musical, and ''Grand Hotel'' took five.

But ''Grand Hotel'' director-choreographer Tommy Tune, garnered two Tonys for Best Direction of a Musical, and Best Choreographer, bringing the number of Tonys he has won in his career to seven.

''I'm proud to be a part of such a sparkling Broadway season,'' said Tune, referring to the record 1989-90 season, which had an audience of eight million and a box office gross of $285 million.

The dramatic version of John Steinbeck's Great Depression novel, ''The Grapes of Wrath,'' won two Tonys, winning over its closest contender, ''The Piano Lesson,'' an August Wilson play about blacks in the 1930s that won the 1990 Pulitzer Prize for drama.

A revival of the 1958 musical ''Gypsy'' won the Best Revival Tony, and its star, TV serial cop Tyne Daly, won for Best Actress in a Musical for her role of Mama Rose.

James Naughton, who played a private detective in ''City of Angels,'' won Best Actor in a Musical.

Best Actor and Best Actress in a Play awards went to Robert Morse for his recreation of novelist Truman Capote in the one-man show, ''Tru,'' and to English actress Maggie Smith for the title role in the British import comedy, ''Lettice and Lovage,'' the third Tony nomination of her career.

Frank Galati took the Tony for Best Direction of a Play, ''The Grapes of Wrath,'' which was brought to Broadway by the Steppenwolf Company of Chicago.

Kathleen Turner, who was nominated but did not win a Tony for her Maggie the Cat in a revival of ''Cat on a Hot Tin Roof,'' hosted the nationally televised (CBS) awards ceremony at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre. She performed smoothly and looked sexy in a black sheath split up the thigh, designed by Fabrice.

The presenters included 1990 Oscar Award winner Jessica Tandy, Michael Crawford, Linda Lavin, Broderick Crawford, Sandy Duncan, Ron Silver, Lilly Tomlin, Joan Rivers, Christopher Reeves, Dixie Carter and Dustin Hoffman.

Hoffman was nominated for ''Merchant of Venice'' but lost to Morse. Other big name losers were Charles Dutton, Tom Hulce, Bob Gunton, Georgia Brown, Lois Smith and Jonathan Hadary.

The only standing ovation of the evening was for musical comedy star Alfred Drake, who received a special Tony for excellence in the theatre. And only one winner wept, Michael Jeeter of ''Grand Hotel,'' who won for Best Performance by a Featured Actor in a Musical.

''If any of you are addicted to alcohol or drugs, I am living proof that you can stop,'' Jeeter said. ''Your dreams can come true.''

The theme of the show was ''The Year of the Actor,'' which was carried out by presenting Geraldine Fitzgerald, Kevin Kline, Len Cariou and Morgan Freeman in great scenes from plays by Shakespeare, O'Neill and George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber.

Other Tony Awards were:

-Best Book of a Musical: ''City of Angels,'' by Larry Gelbart.

-Best Original Score: ''City of Angels,'' by Cy Coleman, music, and David Zippel, lyrics.

-Best Performance by a Featured Actor in a Play: Charles Durning for ''Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.''

-Best Performance by a Featured Actress in a Play: Margaret Tyzack for ''Lettice and Lovage.''

-Best Performance by a Featured Actress in a Musical: Randy Graff for ''City of Angels.''

-Best Scenic Design: Robin Wagner for ''City of Angels.''

-Best Costume Design: Santo Loquasto for ''Grand Hotel.''

-Best Lighting Design: Jules Fisher for ''Grand Hotel.''

The Seattle Repertory Company was honored for outstanding regional theatre and received a $25,000 prize donated by American Express Co.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The St. Louis Cardinal's base stealers burned up the basepaths of Busch Stadium Sunday afternoon, lighting a fire under a struggling team.

The Cardinals pilfered eight bases, a single-game high since the team's World Series season of 1985, and Tom Pagnozzi and Milt Thompson each homered as the St. Louis raced to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Vince Coleman swiped four bases, Ozzie Smith three and Willie McGee one, and the trio sparked a five-run third inning.

''I like the heat,'' Coleman said, crediting the weather for his performance. ''I feel faster on the basepaths. I have an arrogance out there and I don't believe I can be thrown out.''

Coleman, Smith and McGee are no strangers to stealing. The three are Nos. 2, 3, and 4, respectively, on the Cardinals' all-time base stealing list, continuing the team's tradition for speed. Hall of Famer Lou Brock stole 888 of his major-league record 938 bases for the club.

Sunday's performance was evidence of a new attitude according to St. Louis skipper Whitey Herzog.

''We went into Houston last Monday with our heads down and we looked like we expected to lose,'' Herzog said. ''I called a meeting, and I told them that we aren't dead yet.

''We've played better since then, and we were aggressive today.''

Starter Bryn Smith benefitted from the offensive expolsion. Smith improved to 6-4 after pitching 6 1-3 innings and giving up four runs.

The Cardinals used a home run plus four stolen bases into five runs, and a 5-0 lead, in the third.

Reserve catcher Tom Pagnozzi led off the inning with his first home run of the year, and first since the 1987 season. With one out, Coleman, who has won five consecutive NL stolen base crowns, looped a single to center and stole second. After Ozzie Smith drew a walk, the two executed a double steal.

Kevin Blankenship, 0-2, uncorked a wild pitch that allowed Coleman to score and moved Smith to third. McGee then walked and stole second. With runners on second and third, Pedro Guerrero hit a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Smith and advancing McGee to third, who scored on Terry Pendleton's RBI single.

The Cardinals scored their final run of the third inning on Thompson's run-scoring triple.

Coleman, who leads the major leagues with 28 stolen bases, stole second and third in the fourth.

''It's going to be tough to get 100,'' said Coleman, who stole 100 or more bases his first three seasons. ''But if I'm getting on base four or five times a game, I'll try to steal four or five times a game.''

The Cubs scored their first run in the fourth on an RBI-single by Mark Grace. Thompson belted a two-run homer, his third of the year, extending St. Louis' lead to 7-1.

Chicago added three runs in the seventh to chase Smith.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia trounced New York 8-3, Montreal edged Pittsburgh 4-3, San Francisco slammed Houston 7-3, Atlanta dumped San Diego 4-2 in 10 innings and Cincinnati blanked Los Angeles 2-0.

In the AL, it was: Baltimore 4, New York 3; Toronto 7, Milwaukee 4; Boston 8, Cleveland 2; Kansas City 8, Oakland 2; Detroit 2, Seattle 0; California 7, Texas 4; and Chicago 5, Minnesota 2.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Phillies 8, Mets 3

At Philadelphia, Von Hayes homered and knocked in four runs and Pat Combs, 3-5, allowed only three hits in 7 1-3 innings to lead Philadelphia. Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra went 3-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to 16 games and improve his major league-leading batting average to .413.

Expos 4, Pirates 3

At Pittsburgh, Mike Fitzgerald singled in pinch runner Spike Owen with the go-ahead score during Montreal's three-run ninth inning, rallying the Expos to victory. Bill Sampen, 3-0, worked one inning for the victory. Tim Wallach singled to score Tim Raines with the tying run.

Giants 7, Astros 3

At San Francisco, Robby Thompson belted a three-run homer and Kevin Mitchell added a two-run blast to power San Francisco. Atlee Hammaker, 4-3 gained the victory and Jeff Brantley recorded his sixth save. Mike Scott, 2-6, took the loss. Glenn Davis hit his fifth homer in three games and drove in all three Houston runs.

Braves 4, Padres 2, 10 innings

At San Diego, Pinch-hitter Jeff Treadway doubled home the go-ahead run and Ron Gant delivered a run-scoring single in the 10th inning to lift Atlanta to a victory. Reliever Charley Kerfeld, 3-2, worked the eighth and ninth for the victory. Joe Boever worked the 10th for his sixth save.

Reds 2, Dodgers 0

At Los Angeles, Tom Browning, 5-4, and Randy Myers limited Los Angeles to four hits, lifting Cincinnati to victory. Myers earned his 11th save. Valenzuela, 4-5, took the loss. Joe Oliver and Barry Larkin each had RBI-singles for the Reds.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, winding up a five-day trip to the United States Monday, sought to attract an infusion of U.S. investment dollars for his country's creaking economy.

Gorbachev arrived in San Francisco late Sunday after spending a hectic seven hours in Minneapolis, where he changed from smooth-talking diplomat to tough-talking businessman.

In a major address to more than 140 U.S. business and industry leaders in Minnesota, Gorbachev denied the Soviet Union is on the verge of economic collapse and said his country is at a historic ''watershed'' in economic reform that offers untapped opportunities for foreign investment.

As the business leaders listened, Gorbachev ticked off numerous possibilities in aircraft manufacturing, transportation, communications, computers and joint space exploration.

''Those who are with us at this time have a good chance, a good prospect of cooperation in our great country, in our great market of great potential,'' Gorbachev said.

''But those who stand in the sidelines, who do not want to risk, who want to wait and see, who don't want to risk their dollars, well, they, I think will remain observers for years.''

And, to nervous laughter from the audience, Gorbachev warned: ''We will make sure that that is so.''

While in California, the Soviet leader's schedule kept with the business theme, with a little sightseeing thrown in. Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, planned a Monday breakfast meeting with former President Ronald Reagan at the Soviet Consul General's house before traveling to nearby Stanford University in Silicon Valley for a two-hour visit.

He also set aside time to speak to business leaders in the Fairmont Hotel on Nob Hill while Mrs. Gorbachev takes a sightseeing tour by motorcade.

Gorbachev was also expected to meet unofficially with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo, who wants his help in dealing with communist North Korea.

The South Korean leader, who called the meeting ''an event of extraordinary significance,'' hopes to establish diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union in hopes Moscow will then use its influence to get North Korea to ease its hostile stance and come to reunification terms with South Korea.

After a motorcade to view the famous Golden Gate Bridge, the Gorbachevs were scheduled to depart Monday evening for Moscow.

Gorbachev's seven-hour visit to Minnesota - the first to America's heartland by a Soviet leader in 31 years - came on the heels of four days of talks with President Bush that were marked by progress in arms control and trade.

Gorbachev's hectic Minnesota stopover included a luncheon with Gov. Rudy Perpich at the governor's mansion, a 42-car motorcade tour of the Twin Cities, a meeting with the business leaders, and an inspection of computers at Control Data Corp. headquarters.

Gorbachev had asked for a meeting with top business leaders during his trip to Minnesota, and what started out as a local gathering turned into a Who's Who of American business that included Lee Iacocca of Chrysler, Roger Smith of General Motors and James Robinson III of American Express, among others.

Praising his summit meeting with Bush, especially a trade agreement that hinges on the Soviet Union passing an emigration law, Gorbachev told the business leaders at a downtown hotel: ''We have an anchor for our relations.''

''We have recognized that it is necessary to move into a really important era of cooperation. This is a prospect that I think opens up great opportunities.''

Noting the economic problems in his country, Gorbachev said his last five years of reforms to move to a market-oriented economy ''has not been simple for us'' and that many of the difficulties stemmed from testing new programs.

''Things are moving so fast that it is only possible to change things generally for the better if we are successful in our economic reforms. Then people will not need (anti-government) rallies or demonstrations.

''We are now developing the basis for a really new phase in radical reform. We have made mistakes, this is true. We've had some problems. We are now at the watershed to ... move into the markets,'' he said.

''Some people in the West are pessimistic and believe the whole country is on the verge of collapse,'' he said. ''I think this is because it's been some time since you've seen a real (economic) crisis.''

One of the executives asked Gorbachev during a question session whether investment profits could be repatriated to the United States or would be frozen in the Soviet Union - a key factor for any U.S. investor.

''We are now preparing a document that will assure the protection of investments and provide for procedures to repatriate profits or reinvest profits in the Soviet Union,'' Gorbachev assured them. ''I think that will improve prospects.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Americans generally oppose increased immigration and tend to be more worried that the United States faces overpopulation problems than a shortage of skilled workers, a poll showed Monday.

The Roper Organization interviewed 1,000 adults nationwide from April 20 to May 2 for the study commissioned by the Federation for American Immigration Reform. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Many economists predict America will face labor shortages in the 1990s because of the low birthrate that followed the ''baby boom'' generation, and President Bush's Council of Economic Advisers has suggested the administration consider policies that would bring more skilled workers into the country.

However, the poll found that only 31 percent of Americans believed there currently is a labor shortage, compared with 58 percent who said there are enough qualified people to fill all jobs.

Of those who thought there was a labor shortage, just 27 percent favored importing foreign labor. Seventy-five percent favored tax breaks for training U.S. workers and 50 percent wanted greater investment in automation.

Fifty-five percent of those surveyed said the United States has major problems with population growth that need to be solved now. Thirty-two percent believe America is beginning to have population problems and 10 percent said it will be a long time before the country will have population problems.

Overall, 48 percent of those surveyed said the United States allows in too many immigrants, 29 percent said just enough are permitted, 9 percent said immigration is too limited and 14 percent had no opinion.

Seventy-three percent said illegal immigration is a serious enough problem to require ''a lot'' of government attention, and 62 percent said the United States has ''a serious problem with illegal immirgrants crossing our borders.''

The study said the findings are part of a continuing trend, noting that a 1986 Roper poll found that 75 percent of adults surveyed believed immigration ''threatened the American dream.''

Older Americans were more likely to oppose increased immigration and Westerners were more likely to favor changes in immigration policies.

A majority of those surveyed said the United States is accepting too many immirgrants from certain countries, compared with 30 percent who said the mix of immigrants is pretty good.

Respondents who said America accepts too many immigrants from certain countries were asked to give examples. Thirty-three percent said Mexico, 16 percent Cuba and 14 percent Orientals, without listing a specific country.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Cuba Monday told the owner of an $8 million Japanese yacht that Havana seized the craft and detained its crew for violating Cuba's territorial waters, said an official for the firm that owns the vessel.

The yacht's owners denied the charge and demanded the boat be returned.

A Cuban patrol ship approached the 145-foot yacht Belesbat Queen Saturday off the coast of Cuba, fired three shots without explanation and indicated the charter vessel should follow it to Cuba, the ship's captain, Ian McCombe, told United Press International before his detention by Cuban authorities.

''(Cuban authorities) insist the boat entered into Cuban territory without permission,'' said Bungo Shimada, managing director of Island Future Corp. of Kobe, Japan, the yacht's owner. ''We insist we did not have any intention to enter and actually we were out of the territory.''

Shimada said the diplomat added that the yacht's crew of at least 11 was safe. Cuba has made no direct comment on the seizure.

Shimada said the captain reported the vessel was 14 miles off the coast of Cuba at the time of the incident, beyond the 12-mile legal limit.

''The boat was to come to Japan after stopping in San Diego,'' Shimada said. ''We didn't have any intention to enter Cuba.''

He added the company had asked the Japanese Foreign Ministry to help free the ship and its crew.

A ministry official said the Japanese Embassy in Havana had been told by the Cuban Foreign Ministry that the crew was safe and being held for territorial violation.

''But it was late Sunday night and we were not able to get any clear information,'' said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Brian Rappaport, a lawyer for Island Future, said Sunday, ''We're concerned about the safety of the crew.''

Rappaport said the company had received a faxed message of the incident from McCombe, but had not spoken to him.

McCombe told UPI by ship-to-shore telephone Saturday night that the Cuban gunship had approached his boat in the afternoon and fired the cannon shots across the bow.

''They told us to stop. We did stop. Then they fired anyway,'' McCombe said. Several of the Cubans also fired automatic weapons into the air, apparently to scare the crew.

Along with McCombe, an Australian, the yacht's international crew included four Americans, three West Germans, two Britons and a Japanese. One crewman was identified as Guthrie Butler of Las Vegas, Nev.

The yacht was supposed to travel to Japan from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after several months of refitting.

The Cubans made no attempt to board the yacht when they fired the shots and made no direct communication beyond waving and shouting in Spanish that it should follow, McCombe said. The Cuban boat was a military craft flying the Cuban flag, with the number 579 displayed on each side.

The corporate yacht, elegantly decorated and equipped with a satellite navigation and communication system, was registered to Dragon Tree Ltd., which McCombe said was a subsidiary of Island Future Corp. on the English Channel island of Guernsey.

Island Future is a large diversified corporation whose interests include steel, real estate and international resorts, Rappaport said.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev have concluded a largely up-beat four-day summit conference. They established what Gorbachev called ''a new phase in strengthening mutual undertanding and trust.'' Bush indicated they developed a new rapport... saying they talked in the ''spirit of candor and openness'' that reflected a desire ''to build bridges.''

Soviet President Gorbachev and South Korean President Roh are in San Francisco for a meeting on neutral territory. It will be the first meeting ever held between the leaders of the two nations. Roh hopes to establish diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union in order to win its help in getting North Korea to ease its hostile position.

Secretary of State James Baker will leave Washington this evening for a European conference in Copenhagen, Denmark. At the conference, Baker will continue to try to settle with Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze the question of whether a united Germany should be in NATO.

Talks among Canadian leaders will resume today in an effort to end a crisis that threatens Canada's unity. Prime Minister Mulroney says a five-hour meeting with the provincial premiers last night was a good meeting, but failed to resolve the impasse over granting French-speaking Quebec special powers.

Jury selection is due to start today for the trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. The mayor says he's confident he'll be acquitted in his trial on drug and perjury charges. There have been persistent reports that a plea bargain may avert a trial altogether.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Thousands around the world and across the United States prayed and hoisted banners through the streets in commemoration of pro-democracy protesters killed by the Chinese army in and around Tiananmen Square a year ago.

In the United States, rallies occurred Sunday in major cities such as Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, Seattle and smaller towns such as Annville, Pa., to mark the first anniversary of the massacre.

Between 30,000 and 50,000 protesters marched 2 miles through Hong Kong's business district chanting slogans urging democracy in China. The demonstrators also waved banners in Chinese calling for the resignation of Chinese Premier Li Peng and for the release of protesters arrested in student roundups after the Tiananmen killings.

Many of the Hong Kong protesters wore white, the Chinese color for mourning, as they marched toward a mass rally beside the headquarters of China's Xinhua news agency, Beijing's unofficial embassy in the British colony.

Cheerful but earnest, the demonstrators also urged continued and wider moves to democracy for Hong Kong, which is to return to Chinese rule in 1997.

In Australia, thousands rallied in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Adelaide, reading poetry, giving theatrical performances, playing recordings from Tiananmen Square and holding all-night vigils outside Chinese diplomatic offices.

In Sydney, some 7,000 assembled in Town Hall Square Sunday to pray for the hundreds and perhaps thousands of Chinese students who died.

More than 10,000 mainland China students who were in Australia when the massacre took place are still on extended visas.

About 1,000 people rallied in London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported. The BBC said the demonstrators planned to hand the Chinese Embassy a petition calling on Beijing to release all political prisoners. A similiar rally was held in Manchester, 197 miles to the north, the BBC said.

About 30 people marched Sunday from Boston's City Hall to a memorial in the city's Chinatown section to honor Wang Weilin, the 19-year-old Beijing worker who stood up to Chinese army tanks as they rolled into the square last year.

Guo Xiao Bing, 23, of Beijing, read an elegy written by two men who survived the massacre, and urged the marchers to keep the Chinese students' efforts in support of democracy alive in mind and spirit.

''We give our hearts to you, to those who died, because we want you to revive in our bodies,'' Guo read.

In Seattle, dozens of demonstrators marched through the city's international district carrying poster-size photographs of Wang standing in front of a tank. Saturday night, a candlelight vigil honoring the students was held on the Seattle campus of the University of Washington.

In Atlanta, the Atlanta Association for Democracy in China, formed shortly after the Tiananmen Square crackdown, held a commemmoration in downtown Woodruff Park.

Local college students built a replica of the ''Goddess of Democracy'' statue that Chinese students displayed in Tiananmen Square a year ago.

''Although China has taken a hard-line position in foreign relations, it listens attentively to world opinion because the Chinese economy is in serious trouble,'' said Wan-Lee Yin, a civil engineering professor at the Georgia Institute of Technology and chief rally organizer.

Eighteen Fulbright scholars who were in China last year held a memorial service at Lebanon Valley College in Annville, Pa., at 2 p.m., the hour troops opened fire on Chinese demonstrators last year. The scholars and supporters pinned white flowers to bushes and trees at the college in memory of the Chinese students and read tributes to them.

Michael Berlin, who taught journalism at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing, described the letters he receives from former Chinese students.

''Now there is a silent defiance,'' he said. ''Everyone is silently refusing to knuckle under to the government, by ignoring orders or by not taking the (communist) ideology seriously. They are not turning one another in.''

In Los Angeles, Chinese expatriates and other supporters of the democracy movement protested outside the Chinese consulate.

In Chicago, hundreds of Chinese students marched by China's consulate and held an emotional memorial service at the University of Chicago.

''There are those of us in the Congress who will fight with all our strength against 'most-favored-nation' trade status for China,'' Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., told the crowd, referring to the preferred trade relationship that Beijing enjoys with the United States and is supported by President Bush.

In New York, about 1,000 activists rallied outside the Chinese consulate, chanting ''long live democracy.''

Chinese students who escaped from China were joined at the rally by poet Allen Ginsberg and Romanian and Lithuanian activists who called for democratic reforms throughout the world.

''Hundreds, perhaps even thousands of Chinese citizens and students were killed in the massacre. It is easy for one year to elapse, but it is hard for our grief to disappear,'' said Yi Ming Tang, a Columbia University student and former professor from Wuhan City in China.

A man called the mayor of Silicon Valley is dead. Robert Noyce died in Austin, Texas, yesterday from a heart attack. He was 62. Noyce was the co-inventor of the integrated circuit. He founded two of the world's best-known American computer chip companies and presided over the Sematech research consortium.

A hospital spokesman in Santa Monica, California says superstar Michael Jackson was hosptalized last night after complaining of chest discomfort. 31-year-old Jackson was admitted to St. John's Hospital- the same facility where actress Elizabeth Taylor is being treated for pneumonia. Jackson is undergoing tests.

Kilauea Volcano spewed lava into the Pacific Ocean yesterday, sending white clouds billowing into the sky above Hawaii. Civil Defense officials say the lava added to the big island's coastline by creating a delta 50 to 75 yards out into the sea.

The Children's Miracle Network Telethon raised more than 89-Million dollars for hospitalized children during the weekend. Organizers say it's the most money ever raised during such a broadcast. The 21-hour show, hosted by Marie Osmond and John Schneider, was carried by 180 television stations.

The award for Best Musical went to ''City of Angels'' last night during Broadway's 44th annual Tony Awards. ''The Grapes of Wrath'' took top honors for Best Play and Robert Morse received the Best Actor Award for his portrayal of novelist Truman Capote in the one-man show, ''Tru.'' PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 4) UPI - A Bahamian luxury liner that caught fire and ran aground in Delaware Bay was sailing Monday on a five-day cruise of Canada after U.S. Coast Guard-ordered repairs delayed its departure.

City and federal authorities, meanwhile, were investigating a second fire, apparently deliberately set, that occurred aboard the 24,000-ton ship M.V. Regent Star Friday while it was in port at Philadelphia's Penn's Landing.

''(The violations) were relatively minor but could make a major difference if anything happens (at sea),'' Coast Guard Petty Officer Gary Rives said prior to the ship's departure Sunday evening.

''They have to be strictly by the book ... We're not going to let them leave if there are any kind of safety violations, especially with fires.''

Rives said the faults found included a leaky generator, nine faulty fire hatches and a few missing survival kits.

The crew had worked around the clock to correct the defects, but when some were still outstanding at the ship's scheduled departure time Sunday afternoon, passengers were forced to wait until they were completed.

The ship was steaming toward Philadelphia on May 27 when an electrical fire knocked out its power and forced it to run aground off Fortescue, N.J. The ship's 900 passengers were evacuated and the vessel was refloated two days later.

Fire investigators in Philadelphia said a second fire that broke out Friday in a lower-deck storeroom was deliberately set. About half of the 500 members of the ship's crew were aboard at the time, but there were no injuries.

The apparent arson is being investigated by Philadelphia police and the federal bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. No suspects were in custody and no possible motives disclosed.

Initial reports by the Coast Guard had indicated a member of the crew may have been involved, but Rives said no evidence to prove it had yet been found.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Skies calmed across much of the nation early Monday as authorities in the Midwest and Southern Plains states assessed the damage caused by scores of weekend tornadoes that flattened buildings and caused at least 10 deaths.

The National Weather Service said skies were clear overnight across much of the nation's midsection, but isolated thunderstorms blew through eastern Texas and shook the mid-Atlantic states with gusty winds.

The weather service said 44 twisters slashed through Indiana Saturday night, with at least 50 reports of tornado touchdowns. Eight people were killed Saturday, another died Sunday and more than 200 others were injured.

Governor Evan Bayh declared an emergency and National Guardsmen were deployed in towns hardest hit by the twisters. The violent weather conditions were the worst the state had seen since 1974.

In Illinois, 22 tornadoes - 14 of them in one hour alone - ripped through 10 counties, killing one person, injuring eight and battering 160 homes,

A tornado caused extensive damage Sunday evening in the East Texas town of Jacksonville. The twister damaged buildings, uprooted trees and left most of the town's 12,000 residents without power, police said. Five people suffered minor injuries, said officials at Nan Travis Memorial Hospital.

''You'd have thought we'd have a lot more injuries than we did, considering the damage,'' said Jacksonville city manager Jim Dunaway. ''We have it comfirmed that winds reached as high as 80 mph.''

Thunderstorms lashed parts of eastern Texas early Monday, dumping heavy rain and light hail in some areas. In Austin, NWS forecasters reported overnight winds gusting to 65 mph and golfball-size hail.

Weather cleared overnight across most of the Midwest, with variably cloudy skies covering Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan.

In Michigan, repair crews from the state's two largest utilities were working Monday to restore power to some 71,000 who lost electricity when thunderstorms and winds of more than 50 mph whacked the state on Sunday. The storm left as many as 181,000 customers without power, officials said.

''Frankly, until the winds subside a bit, we're facing a losing battle,'' said Mark Roe, electric operations superintendent in charge of storm restoration for Consumers.

A line of fast-moving thunderstorms swept through the mid-Atlantic states early Monday, bringing gusty winds up to 40 mph and heavy downpours. The storms extended from Uniontown, Pa., to Clarksburg, W. Va., and were estimated to be pushing through the area at 35 to 40 mph, the NWS said.

Overnight temperatures across the region ranged from 59 in Pittsburgh to 70 in Washington, D.C.

Scattered showers, thunderstorms and fog dotted New England early Monday, with temperatures ranging mostly in the 60s. A cold front was expected to bring cool temperatures later Monday.

In the West, temperatures Sunday reached the high 80s and low 90s in the Los Angeles area. A weak Pacific front produced rain along the northern California coast, but skies were fair and sunny elsewhere in the state.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 4) UPI - Bereaved families of people killed in the 1983 Soviet downing of a Korean Air jetliner urged President Roh Tae-woo Monday to seek apologies and compensation for the incident during his talks in San Francisco with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

A group representing the bereaved families issued a statement saying, ''If the Soviet Union would return to the civilized society putting an end to a communist dictatorship, it should apologize and make amends to the victims of the incident and their familes.''

A KAL jumbo jet with 269 passengers and crew aboard strayed into Soviet air space and was shot down by Soviet fighters over Sakhalin Sept. 2, 1983 while en route to Seoul after a refueling stop at Anchorage, Alaska. All aboard were killed.

''The (Korean) government, instead of trampling on the souls and sorrows of the victims out of diplomacy of humility toward the Soviet Union, should force the Soviet Union to make apologies and sufficient compensations'' at the upcoming Roh-Gorbachev meeting.

Foreign news reports have quoted the South Korean Embassy in Washington as saying the KAL incident would not be raised at Monday's meeting because it occurred before Gorbachev came to power.

South Korea and the Soviet Union have no diplomatic relations.

Speculation has been rising that the Roh-Gorbachev meeting would result in normalization of relations between the two nations at an early date.

TOKYO (JUNE 4) UPI - The head of a U.S. delegation said Monday he was optimistic Japan would agree to participate in an $8 billion superconducting supercollider project.

At the end of a weeklong visit, W. Henson Moore, U.S. deputy secretary of energy who headed the delegation promoting the Texas-based high-energy project, told reporters: ''Japan has an understanding of the need for basic research and an appreciation for large projects.''

''And Japan, I believe, wants to give meaning to the agreement between President Bush and Prime Minister (Toshiki) Kaifu to enter into a global partnership. These things make me optimistic.''

But Moore leaves Tokyo with only a pledge from Japan that it would study the project.

The planned supercollider requires construction of a 54-mile oval tunnel. A site about 25 miles south of Dallas has been chosen and industries have been given information about some of the components.

Inside the tunnel, superconducting magnets would send subatomic particles racing through vacuum tubes in opposite directions until they smash into each other. The traces from the collision are expected to help scientists understand the basic components of matter and answer some of the remaining questions of physics.

Moore said he gave Japanese officials a list of ways the U.S. administration thought would be appropriate for Japan to participate. He refused to disclose what was on the list.

But he indicated the administration would welcome proposals from potential foreign partners for bearing one-third or even more of the project's expenses.

Moore said he hoped Japan would agree to participate ''as soon as possible '' but he acknowledged that the decision-making process was complex and could take some time.

A Japanese government spokesman earlier said the proposal would have to be discussed among various ministries, a process that often takes months or even years.

Moore's delegation next heads to South Korea and Europe to make formal requests for participation from governments there.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The Bush-Gorbachev summit ends with some major issues unresolved, but the two leaders say they have a better understanding of each other... the latest news from United Press International, around the world and across the nation.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev said farewell with feeling after their second summit conference.

For results at the Washington summit, the two leaders can list more than 15 substantial agreements. Among them- a trade accord, a chemical weapons treaty, a forward-looking statement on reduction of nuclear arms and several cultural and exchange pacts.

Bush and Gorbachev set their sights on completing a conventional forces agreement before the end of this year. They also aim to finish work on a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty before the new year.

They failed to resolve their differences over the issues of Baltic independence and the military role of a unified Germany.

But the Soviet leader stepped into a dispute between the Bush administration and Israel... saying the Kremlin might curtail the number of Jews allowed to emigrate to Israel if Israel continues building new settlements in the occupied territories. Bush repeatedly has appealed to Israel to halt the settlements. Palestinians say the settlements set the stage for a permanent occupation.

The two super-power leaders also agreed to hold regular- perhaps yearly-summit conferences. Gorbachev says he has invited Bush to make a state visit to the Soviet Union, although NO date was announced.

Bush won't say whether the two super-powers have made the transition from adversaries to allies. But Bush says the relationship has come- in his words- ''a long way from the depths of the Cold War.''

(JUNE 4) UPI - South Korean President Roh says a meeting he plans to have with Soviet President Gorbachev today is ''an event of extraordinary significance.''

Leaders of the two nations have never met before. Roh wants to establish diplomatic relations between South Korea and the Soviet Union- hoping, in part, that Moscow will persuade North Korea to come to reunification terms with South Korea.

Gorbachev and Roh will meet on neutral turf... in San Francisco. The site and time of the meeting this afternoon have NOT been revealed.

In a major address to more than 140 business and industry leaders in Minneapolis yesterday... Gorbachev denied the Soviet Union is on the verge of economic collapse. He said his country is at a historic point in economic reform that offers untapped opportunities for foreign investment.

The Soviet leader plans to speak to more business leaders today in San Francisco and visit Silicon Valley.

Gorbachev also will meet with former President Reagan today. Roh met with Reagan last night.

Canada's political leaders plan today to resume talks centered on a constitutional accord that would grant the French-speaking province of Quebec special powers. The Quebec government wants French to be recognized as its official language with its own unique culture.

Leaders of Canada's 10 provinces held a dinner meeting last night, but they were NOT able to reach an agreement over Quebec's demands. Prime Minister Mulroney has warned Canadian unity will be threatened if the Meech Lake Accord, as it's called, is NOT approved.

And Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa has warned his province will secede from Canada if the accord is NOT passed.

Three other provinces- Newfoundland, Manitoba, and New Brunswick- have refused to approve the accord, saying Quebec will abuse its new powers. There also is some concern the English-speaking minority will suffer discrimination in Quebec.

Quebec did NOT sign the 1982 Canadian constitution because the document did NOT recognize the province's distinct French society.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Chinese police have cordoned off Tiananmen Square for the fourth day today. The central square was the heart of last year's anti-government demonstrations and the site of a military crackdown that left hundreds dead.

The move comes one day after more than one-thousand students at Beijing University staged an anti-government protest in remembrance of the government crackdown. The students hurled bottles and rocks at security forces in a direct show of defiance. Many taunted security personnel, saying- ''Go ahead shoot us'' and ''Rise up, rise up.''

The police roughed up Western reporters and Chinese onlookers and ordered them at gunpoint to leave the area. And police detained several Western correspondents.

The demonstration was the first large rally since the military action last year.

Paramilitary troops armed with submachine guns later sealed roads leading into the northwest university district. But they withdrew early this morning.

The Chinese government acknowledges the one-year anniversary in an editorial in today's issue of the official Communist Party newspaper . The editorial warns- quote- ''stability is everything.''

BEIJING (JUNE 4) UPI - Police cordoned off Tiananmen Square again Monday and officials at Beijing University held an emergency meeting in an effort to avert renewed unrest after a defiant student protest on the first anniversary of China's bloody crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

The central square, the heart of last spring's six weeks of demonstrations for greater freedom, was closed for the fourth straight day, this time for an official traffic safety event, with drivers practicing their skills for the Beijing Asian Games in September.

Police were on guard through the square, keeping pedestrians out of its north plaza and away from the Monument to the People's Heroes, the obelisk that became the headquarters of the student demonstrators last spring.

An American television crew witnessed police hauling off a man from the square for an unknown offense but otherwise the capital was reported calm throughout the day as authorities maintained a heavier than usual security presence.

That calm was in sharp contrast to Sunday night's incident at Beijing University, in which more than 1,000 students staged a raucous demonstration and pelted paramilitary police with rocks and bottles from dormitory windows.

The throwing of glass bottles was a direct taunt at senior Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, whose name includes a homonym for the Chinese term for ''small bottle.''

Officials at Beijing University held an emergency meeting Monday to discuss Sunday's demonstration. Campus sources said they did not know the outcome of the meeting. There was no word on whether any students had been detained. Both the Beijing Public Security Bureau and the university foreign affairs office refused to answer inquiries.

Beijing's restive campuses, where the student-led protests for democracy erupted last spring until they were crushed by the army last June 3-4, were reported to be infiltrated by a number of undercover police.

In an editorial in Monday's People's Daily, the official Communist Party newspaper, the government acknowledged the anniversary and warned that ''stability is above everything.''

''This is a common understanding in China after experiencing last year's political disturbances,'' the editorial said. ''We should safeguard security just like safeguarding our own lives.''

Students at Beijing University, which had been a center of the 1989 student movement, expressed surprise at the apparently spontaneous outburst of dissent Sunday, which defied stern official warnings.

''I never dreamed anyone would protest,'' one student said.

Western diplomats said the brazen demonstration reflected the depth of outrage over the hundreds of people killed when the army quelled the protests last June, but perhaps even more strongly indicated the anger among students at their continued lack of opportunity.

They cited new restrictions the government has imposed during the past year on students, including ordering them to work for several years before continuing graduate studies, intensifying political indoctrination, tightening overseas study and sending Beijing University's entire freshman class to military training.

''Many of these kids feel like they have no future,'' one diplomat said.

Meanwhile, Beijing-based foreign journalists sent formal protests to the Foreign Ministry, accusing security forces of beating and detaining them as they covered Sunday night's heavy security throughout the city and the Beijing University protest.

United Press International correspondents witnessed several incidents in which police roughed up and detained American and British reporters for no apparent reason and refused to indicate why the journalists were being held.

During the university incident, troops of the paramilitary People's Armed Police waved pistols in the faces of reporters and ordered them away from the area at the point of assault rifles.

The president of the Beijing Foreign Correspondents' Club, Jim Munson of Canadian Television, said he was still gathering accounts of mistreatment and brutality and would file a formal protest on behalf of all the club's members.

The student protest was the first major disturbance since the crackdown, and came despite the biggest police show of force since martial law was lifted in Beijing in January.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Jury selection begins this morning in the federal trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. The mayor faces 10 misdemeanor drug possession counts, one misdemeanor conspiracy count and three felony perjury counts for allegedly lying to a grand jury about drug use.

Mayor Barry has expressed confidence he'll be acquitted, but there have been persistent reports that a plea bargain is in the works. One published report says Barry's defense team has been involved in negotiations with the office of U-S Attorney Jay Stephens. The report says the talks have reached a stalemate.

But even if a plea bargain is NOT reached, Barry remains optimistic he'll be vindicated. In his words- ''I think the prosecutors know that in this town all it takes is one juror saying, 'I'm NOT going to convict Marion Barry.''

Barry was arrested January 18th in a joint federal-city sting at the Vista International Hotel in Washington. He allegedly was videotaped smoking crack cocaine.

Barry has acknowledged smoking the crack, but accuses federal authorities of trying to ''kill'' him by allowing him to consume a potent dose of the drug.

Cuba and Japan are disputing the whereabouts of a Japanese yacht when it was seized by Cuba.

An official of the firm that owns the yacht says Cuba told the firm today that Havana seized the craft and detained its crew for violating Cuba's territorial waters. The yacht's owners deny the charge and demand that the boat be returned.

The yacht is owned by Japan's Island Future Corporation. The firm's managing director says the yacht was 14 miles off the coast of Cuba when it was seized. The legal limit is 12 miles.

The company has asked the Japanese Foreign Ministry to help free the ship and its 11-member crew.

The charter vessel's captain told U-P-I a Cuban patrol ship approached the eight-Million-dollar, 145-foot yacht Saturday off the coast of Cuba. The patrol ship fired three shots without explanation and indicated the yacht should follow it to Cuba.

The yacht was supposed to travel to Japan from Fort Lauderdale after several months of refitting.

AUSTIN, TX (JUNE 4) UPI - Robert Noyce, the co-inventor of the integrated circuit that revolutionized the electronics industry and helped father the high-tech age, died Sunday at 62. Noyce suffered a heart attack at his home and died at 10 a.m. at Seton Hospital. Plans for a memorial service were pending.

Noyce's work facilitated the invention of numerous products that make life easier for people at work, at home, and at play - the personal computer, the pocket calculator, programmable coffeemakers, microwave ovens and computerized flight plans for commercial and private aircraft.

He was known within the industry as "the mayor of Silicon Valley," the area of northern California populated by many high-tech companies. He and Jack Kilby of Texas Instruments share credit for the invention of the integrated circuit, the tiny device that rendered obsolete the slide rule, once the engineers' best friend and constant companion.

Since 1988, Noyce had been chief operating officer and president of Sematech, an Austin government-private industry consortium of 14 U.S. semiconductors manufacturers working to keep the nation's companies competitive in world markets.

Born in Burlington, Iowa, Noyce earned a doctorate in physical electronics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He began his career as a researcher at Philco Corp. In 1956 he went to the Shockley Semiconductor Laboratory.

A year later, he and other Shockley engineers struck out on their own, forming Fairchild Semiconductor Corp. in Mountain View, Calif., where he moved from research director to vice president and general manager.

Noyce was working on technology for the integrated circuit at the same time Jack Kilby was doing similar work as an engineer at Texas Instruments in Dallas. A race for the first patent on the device resulted in each claiming a part of the credit.

In 1968, Noyce and colleague Gordon Moore created Intel Corp., which grew to be a leader in the computer industry. His awards include the Ballantine Medal of the Franklin Institute, which he won with Kilby, as well as the National Medal of Technology and the National Medal of Science. He was a member of the National Inventors Hall of Fame. Noyce is survived by his wife and four children.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (JUNE 4) UPI - A Roman Catholic father of five was killed and two of his sons were wounded in a suspected Protestant gun attack in their County Armagh home early Monday, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said.

Patrick Boyle, 60, was playing cards with his two sons in a back room of their house in Annaghmore, a quiet rural district 45 miles west of Belfast when masked gunmen burst in at 1 a.m. and sprayed them with automatic gunfire.

Boyle died instantly. Both sons, in their 20s, were wounded and one was reported in serious condition with a bullet in his stomach.

Police, believing the motive for the killing was sectarian, said they suspect the gunmen were Protestants who favor the continued union of the Northern Ireland province with Britain.

Seamus Mallon, a member of Parliament for the area and a Catholic, condemned the attack as ''savage and sectarian.''

In a separate incident, a British army patrol escaped unharmed when a grenade was thrown at their Land Rover in Stewartstown, 40 miles west of Belfast at 1:30 a.m.

MIAMI (JUNE 4) UPI - The Cuban exiles who participated in the failed Bay of Pigs invasion are seeking recognition as veterans of the U.S. armed forces, noting that they carried U.S. weapons and fought with U.S. training.

"If you financed us and you trained and and you gave us this kind of help and this was recognized by the leader of the armed forces, then we believe we have a basis for recognition," said Rafael Cabezas, president of Brigade 2506, the Bay of Pigs Veterans Association.

Some 1,450 Cuban exiles participated in the failed 1961 attempt to overthrow Fidel Castro, either directly or as members of support battalions that never reached Cuba.

Veterans' status would make medical benefits available to between 700 and 800 Cuban-born fighters. More than 500 members of the invasion team eventually joined the U.S. military and thus are already eligible for veterans' benefits, but 700 to 800 did not.

For two years, they have lobbied Congress for recognition, concentrating on members of the Florida delegation. Last year, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., forwarded their request to the Air Force office assigned to review all requests for veteran status. In response, Brig. Gen. Ellwood P. Hinman III wrote that Assault Brigade 2506 "appears clearly ineligible."

"First, their service was not rendered during a period of armed conflict," the general wrote. "Secondly, their service was not rendered in direct support of the armed services."

Brigade members were undaunted and planned to keep pursuing their efforts. "I would say their chances are zero," The Miami Herald quoted an unidentified staff member of the House Veterans Affairs Committee as saying Monday. "Veterans they weren't. Everybody recognizes their service but who's going to provide the help for them?"

Fascell has asked his staff to determine what other avenues are open to the group, his press spokeswoman said. Many of the Bay of Pigs veterans continued working with the U.S. government after the invasion, joining infiltration teams sponsored and trained by the CIA.

Among them is Felix Aleman, who ferried anti-Castro fighters back to Cuba aboard 25-foot motorboats for several years after the invasion. "I feel that I am a Cuban veteran, not an American veteran," said Aleman, 55, a car mechanic who suffers from high blood pressure, diabetes and arthritis. "But the U.S. interests were defended when we defended the cause of Cuba. I think we have a right to some help. This way, our children will know that we were veterans of this country."

TOKYO (JUNE 4) UPI - Peace talks between the Vietnamese-backed government of Cambodia and a rebel alliance broke off quickly Monday when the Khmer Rouge, the largest of the three resistance factions, refused to show up.

The leader of the communist Khmer Rouge, known for its bloody reign of terror in Cambodia in the late 1970s, said in a statement he was boycotting the talks because he did not want to be represented by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, head of the rebel coalition and leader of one of the two smaller, non-communist rebel factions.

Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen, whose government is supported by communist Vietnam, was to have met with Sihanouk to sign a peace proposal that all sides initialed last month. Hun Sen and Sihanouk said they were ready to sign a cease-fire in the 11-year battle for control of the Indochinese nation.

Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, who arrived in Tokyo Sunday, was to have sat at the negotiating table, but only as a member of Sihanouk's delegation.

''The Democratic Kampuchea party deeply regrets that it has thus been prevented from participating in the Tokyo meeting,'' Khieu Samphan said in a written statement issued at his hotel.

The Cambodian government opposes the full participation of the Khmer Rouge saying it fears the rebel faction may resume the mass killings of the 1970s if it is allowed to return to power.

The talks had been scheduled to last two days but the Japanese hosts said late Monday they were not sure formal negotiations would resume.

''I am not optimistic. I am not pessimistic,'' said Masuharu Kono, director of the Japanese Foreign Ministry's Souteast Asia division.

''There will be no official meeting tonight but I cannot predict tomorrow '' he said. He said informal negotiations were continuing with the aid of the Japanese and Thai officials.

An aide to Sihanouk said, ''Japan and Thailand will do everthing possible to clear this atmosphere so tomorrow will be good.''

The peace talks were to be the first hosted by Japan since the end of World War II and were seen as an effort by Japan to bring its political influence in Asia more in line with its economic influence.

Khieu Samphan's failure to show up for the first session of the scheduled talks at the Akasaka Palace annoyed the Japanese, a Foreign Ministry official said.

Hun Sen and Sihanouk began the talks but decided to adjourn after about 20 minutes, apparently seeing no reason to continue without the Khmer Rouge.

''The problem is with the Khmer Rouge,'' Sihanouk said.

Khmer Rouge radio in Cambodia blamed Hun Sen's position for its boycott.

''This clearly proves,'' the radio station said, ''that the Hanoi authorities will never allow their puppets to sign any agreement which will lead to a solution for ending the Vietnamese aggression and occupation in Cambodia.''

Sihanouk had said upon his arrival in Tokyo Saturday that he expected to sign a peace agreement, including a cease-fire, but added it would be meaningless if the Khmer Rouge refused to honor it.

''I am not a Khmer Rouge fan,'' Sihanouk said in an interview Saturday, adding that five of his children were executed by the Khmer Rouge.

But Sihanouk said the Khmer Rouge must be included in the peace process or they would remain as a guerrilla force attacking the government.

''Pushing the Khmer Rouge into the hills, so to speak, as are the guerrillas in the Philippines, Myanmar, et cetera, would only strengthen them, make martyrs of them,'' Sihanouk said.

''To isolate and weaken the Khmer Rouge now, who comprise the most effective, disciplined and well-trained military force, and create of them our enemy, would only assist those foreign forces seeking to control us,'' he said.

As the leaders gathered for the Tokyo peace talks, reports of fighting in Cambodia itself accelerated.

Resistance radio claimed that the Khmer Rouge guerrilla group captured two district capitals Monday in the central area of the country. The towns, Stoung and Sandan, both about 100 miles north of Phnom Penh, reportedly were captured after simultaneous dawn attacks that lasted for about 90 minutes. No details of casualties were immediately available.

Two non-communist Cambodian rebel factions led by Sihanouk and Son Sann are supported by the United States and other Western nations. The United States is withholding support for the Khmer Rouge because of its post-1975 genocide that left more than 1 million people dead.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in 1978, ousting the Khmer Rouge. Vietnam announced the withdraw of its troops in September and has said only advisers, technicians and intelligence officers remain. But U.S. officials and the Cambodian resistance charge there are 40,000 Vietnamese combat troops - many dressed in Cambodian army uniforms - still active in Cambodia.

The Hun Sen government retains control of nearly 90 percent of Cambodia despite the reported troop withdrawal and a major offensive by the rebels.

Sihanouk has proposed an immediate cease-fire and a greater peace-keeping role by the United Nations in a Cambodian settlement.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Vice President Dan Quayle said Monday he urged Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to use Soviet aid to Cuba as leverage to change Fidel Castro's foreign policy.

Quayle, who has visited several Latin American nations as vice president, met with Gorbachev last week when the Soviet leader was in Washington for a summit with President Bush.

''We talked about the support that the Soviet Union has given to Cuba and I encouraged him to do his very best to work to change the behavior of Fidel Castro,'' Quayle said on the NBC ''Today'' program.

Castro has been in power in Cuba since Jan. 1, 1959, and his island nation just 90 miles from Florida is the only communist country in the Western Hemisphere. Of great concern to the United States is Cuba's support with troops, training and materiel of revolutionary movements in Latin America and Africa.

Cuba's government-controlled economy is largely subsidized by the Soviet Union, which buys Cuban sugar at well above market prices and supplies oil at below world prices.

''I am convinced that the Soviet Union can change the behavior of Fidel Castro,'' Quayle said. ''They subsidized Cuba to the tune of $5 billion a year. Too bad they couldn't take that $5 billion and put it for housing in the Soviet Union or perhaps get better food service for the people in the Soviet Union. If they would take that leverage on Castro, they could make a difference, and I implored him to do that.''

NAGOYA, JAPAN (JUNE 4) UPI - Toyota Motor Corp. said Monday it has begun construction of a passenger car plant at Burnaston, Derbyshire, Britain.

The Nagoya-based company said construction of an would soon begin in North Wales.

The company said a ground-breaking ceremony was held at the site of the plant Monday in the presence of about 250 guests, including Britain's Secretary of State for Trade and Industry Nicholas Ridley.

A time capsule containing photographs and other memorabilia of the company and the local community was buried at the site, the company said.

The plant will provide stamping, body welding, painting, plastic molding and final assembly facilities.

The plant will start operations in late 1992, producing 100,000 passenger cars annually in the initial stages with volume eventually increasing to about 200,000 units, Toyota indicated.

TOKYO (JUNE 4) UPI - Mitsubishi Paper Mills Ltd. said Monday it will launch a joint venture with Mitsubishi Corp. to plant eucalyptus trees in Chile to secure stable supplies of chip board for paper production in Japan.

The company said the $33 million (5 billion yen) project would be a trial venture aimed at securing stable supplies for paper production.

Mitsubishi Paper Mills and Mitsubishi Corp. belong to Japan's giant Mitsubishi group of companies.

The company said the project calls for plantation of over 10,000 hectares of land in Conception in central Chile over a 10-year period, starting next year.

After plantation is completed, 300,000 tons of chip board can be exported to Japan annually for 30 years starting in 2003, the company said.

Mitsubishi Paper currently imports about half of the two million tons of chip board it needs for annual production, the company said.

It indicated a new company, Forestal Tierra Chilena Ltda., would be organized in Santiago later this month to start operation July 1.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed slightly higher Monday boosted in part by a slight rally in the construction sector.

The blue-chip Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues, which eased 239.68 points Friday, added 34.25 points to 32,925.37.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index weathered a late bout of selling to gain 0.69 points to 2,427.24.

Volume was moderate as an estimated 650 million shares changed hands, compared with the 709 million shares on Friday.

Advances outpaced declines 521 to 417, while 188 issues remained unchanged.

Dealers said the market was boosted by indications that the U.S. economy was softening, leading to hopes of lower interest rates.

Flat U.S. unemployment figures released last Friday suggest that interest rates could come down, and that could help lower Japanese rates as well, said a broker with Nikko Securities.

Lower interest rates tend to make stock investments more attractive.

Analysts said news of a ''fairly good summit'' between President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev also contributed to the rise.

Chris Schreiber, a broker at New Japan Securities Co., said encouraging technical factors also boosted the market.

''There's a mini golden cross coming up,'' he said, explaining that the market's 25-day moving average was about to exceed the 75-day moving average.

''Its meaning is limited, but technically it's a positive factor,'' Schreiber said.

Schreiber said market laggards, such as large-capital stocks, fared well in the day's trading.

Among these were shipbuilding, steel and construction issues.

Elsewhere on the trading floor, Mitsubishi Heavy Industries paced the actives followed by Nippon Oil, NKK, Nippon Mining and Mitsui Engineering and Shipbuilding.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices closed mixed in heavy trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange amid a bout of profit-taking.

The closely-watched Hang Seng Index, which gained 26.85 points Friday, lost 5.95 points to 3,153.22.

Among the narrower indexes, utilities gained 55.32 points, financials climbed 10.34, industrials lost 43.21 and properties shed 22.64 points.

Market watchers said the Hang Seng Index climbed more 40 points in early trading, but eased in a late bout of profit-taking of blue chips.

An estimated 2.13 billion shares chnaged hands, compared with 2.25 billion shares on Friday.

''The surprise was the 40-point jump in the morning rather than the small loss at the market's close,'' said David Harman, an analyst with Morgan Grenfell.

''The market has gone through a stage of quick growth, now it has gotten to the stage where it gives a bit back.

''A slight downturn should continue for the next few sessions as traders consolidate and take profits,'' Harman said.

Monday's loss came on the first anniversary of China's brutal crackdown on democracy advocates in Beijing, but analysts said the politically sensitive date had little effect on the market.

''June 4 may have made some investors back off and see what will happen during the next few days, but the date didn't really affect the market,'' Harman said.

Many people in Hong Kong, which returns to Chinese rule in 1997, supported the mainland's pro-democracy movement, and the Hang Seng Index plunged in the wake of last year's military-led crackdown.

In Singapore, stocks closed lower on the Singapore Stock Exchange in featureless trading as investors remained sidelined throughout the day.

The blue-chip Straits Times Industrial Index, which gained 2.17 points Friday, dipped 3.36 points to 1,552.45. The narrower All Singapore Index eased 0.99 points to 433.70.

An estimated 44.4 million shares changed hands, compared with 53.6 million shares on Friday.

Brokers said there was no buying support from local and institutional buyers. Analysts said the market could remain featureless the next few days unless good market effecting news becomes available.

On the trading floor, Singapore Land warrants paced the decliniong issues followed by Singapore Land, Singapore Airlines, Far East Shipping and United Overseas Bank (foreign) shares.

Yamaichi (U.S.) led the advancing issues followed by Jurong Shipyard, Isetan Co., Shell, Singapore Fodder and Singapore Press (foreign) shares.

In Australia, stock prices closed higher in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The key All Ordinaries Index, which gained 2.8 points Friday, gained 11.2 points to 1,525.0.

An estimated 98.4 million shares chnaged hands, compared with 75.3 million shares on Friday.

Analysts said prices were boosted in part by last Friday's performance on Wall Street.

On the corporate news front, Bond Media shareholders enthusiastically endorsed Kerry Packer's deal, restoring him to control of the Channel Nine television network.

Bond Media jumped 5 cents to 19 cents a share on the news.

Elsewhere, Adelaide Steam gained 10 cents to $5.20, Amatil gained 30 cents to $11.50, Brambles added 5 cents to $13.75 and News Corp. gained 5 cents to $10.20.

Among the mining stocks, CRA Mining rose 5 cents to $12.35, MIM Mining added 2 cents to $2.26 and North Broken Hill gained 3 cents to $2.37.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev will meet with South Korean President Roh in San Francisco today. The Soviet Union and South Korea have never had formal relations since North Korea was formed after World War two. Before leaving his native country, Roh expressed optimism the meeting would open a new era in relations between Seoul and Moscow.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela is in the central African nation of Botswana today as he starts 45-day overseas trip. Mandela says he looks forward to ''informing the world about South Africa.'' His journey will bring him to the United States later this month for a six-city tour- including New York, where he'll be welcomed with a ticker-tape parade, and Washington, where he'll meet with President Bush.

Officials at Beijing University held an emergency meeting today to try to avoid more protests similar to yesterday's demonstrations. Students hurled bottles and rocks at security forces in a brazen show of defiance as they commemorated last year's military crackdown on pro-democracy activists. Police sealed off Tiananmen Square for a fourth day today.

Jury selection begins today in the trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. The mayor faces a total of 14 drug and perjury charges, but Barry has expressed confidence he'll be acquitted of any crime. A published report says Barry's attorneys tried to work out a plea bargain agreement with prosecutors this weekend in an effort to avert a trial.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Irish officials in Belfast, Northern Ireland, say a Catholic father of five was killed and two of his sons were wounded in a suspected Protestant attack in their home. The man was playing cards with his sons when masked gunmen burst into their home and opened fire with automatic weapons. Police say they believe the motive for the killing was sectarian and NOT political.

Lebanese Moslems are observing a general strike today as part of a three-day mourning period marking the first anniversary of the Ayatollah Khomeini's death. Witnesses say pro-Iranian Hezbollah members staged an emotional rally in the mostly Shiite suburbs of southern Beirut. Many cried and pounded their chests to show their grief.

The Cuban exiles who participated in the failed Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 want to be recognized as veterans of the U-S armed forces. The exiles say they carried U-S weapons and fought with U-S training. Veterans' status would give about 700 Cuban-born fighters medical benefits. More than 500 members of the invasion team joined the military and already are eligible for various veterans'benefits.

Alecia Griffith went driving for the first time this weekend and it was a ride she'll probably never forget. Authorities in Fort Lauderdale, Florida say nine-year-old Alecia, barely able to see over the dashboard, took her grandmother's car for a 90-second ride down a sidewalk. The car smacked into a carport after leaving a trail of felled bushes and trees in its path. Alecia said her grandmother told her to move the car, but Eldora Ashley says that's NOT true. Police cited the grandmother for letting an unauthorized minor drive.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 4) UPI - After months of political negotiations, acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Monday he would present his new government next week, but left open the possibility of another partnership with the Labor Party.

Shamir also rejected Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's threats on Soviet Jewish immigration, saying Israel cannot accept or impose limitations on where newcomers live. Israeli officials maintain the government does not have a policy of sending Soviet immigrants to the Israeli-occupied territories for settlement.

Shamir's presidential mandate to form a government expires Thursday. But as long as the Likud Party leader informs President Chaim Herzog before the deadline that he can establish a government, Shamir can delay seeking immediate approval of his coalition from Israel's Parliament.

''I cannot stipulate the exact day, but it will certainly be at the beginning of next week,'' Shamir told Army Radio when asked when he would present his government.

Shamir has come under pressure from Likud hard-liner Ariel Sharon to reject attempts at another Likud-Labor ''national unity'' government. Likud ministers also decided Sunday to intensify their efforts to form a narrow Likud-led government.

Despite the pressures, Shamir kept the door open for another partnership with Labor.

''I do not totally rule out any option until I bring the government before the Knesset,'' Shamir said. ''Today I am working to establish a government based on a majority of between 61 and 65 votes.''

Before it is installed, Shamir's government must win a vote of confidence by a majority in Israel's 120-member Parliament, the Knesset. The Knesset is split down the middle in support for Likud and Labor, but Shamir may receive a boost from the Agudat Israel Party, which has said it supports Labor, if the ultra-Orthodox religious party refrains from voting.

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres was first chosen to try to form a new government after Shamir's government fell in a vote of no confidence March 15. Peres failed in his efforts when religious party members in his camp decided at the last minute against supporting a Labor-led coalition.

''If a government is formed (by Shamir), it will be a radical right-wing government,'' said Yosef Harish, Labor's secretary general.

''One must say 'if' because this is the type of negotiating when you have 61. According to our experience, until you reach the Knesset and until there is a vote, there are always question marks.''

Israel's political crisis intensified March 13 when Shamir fired Peres from the Cabinet as finance minister, triggering the resignation of the other Labor Party ministers and the collapse of the country's second ''national unity'' government. Shamir's rejection of a U.S. proposal on how to start talks between Israelis and Palestinians sparked the political fight.

Likud and Labor formed the coalition after the 1988 elections because neither party had a majority in the Knesset.

In the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip Monday, an Israeli soldier shot and wounded a masked Palestinian who tried to attack him, an army spokesman said. The Arab, who received light to moderate wounds, was taken to an Israeli hospital for treatment.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) UPI - NEC Corp., using the summer Consumer Electronics Show to establish a new battleground in the video game war with Nintendo and Sega, has unveiled a new, color hand-held unit to challenge Nintendo's popular Game Boy.

And, Sony headed a list of Japanese manufacturers announcing plans to begin shipping Digital Audio Tape recorders - the latest stage in the evolution of home audio - to the United States.

NEC's TurboExpress portable video game system was among dozens of new products making their debuts at the summer Consumer Electronics Show, which runs through Tuesday at McCormick Place.

The three-way war for domination of the $5 billion video game industry broke out at last summer's CES. Sega and NEC rolled out 16-bit systems - Genesis and TurboGrafx - featuring faster action, better graphics and a more arcade-like feel than Nintendo's eight-bit system, which dominates the market.

Nintendo countered by rolling out Game Boy - the first portable video game system.

NEC's TurboExpress, however, is a full color portable system that can double as a portable TV for camcorder monitor with a special adapter. Game Boy is a monochrome system.

And, TurboExpress will play games made for the TurboGraphx home system, while Game Boy is limited to specially designed games and will not handle game cartridges made for the Nintendo home system.

Sega and Genesis, meanwhile, focused on expanding their game offerings.

Sega hitched its wagon to the stars - with a new Genesis football game bearing Joe Montana's name. Other new Genesis offerings include a boxing game with heavyweight champ James ''Buster'' Douglas's endorsement, and basketball a la Los Angeles Lakers Coach Pat Riley.

Sega also has announced Moonwalker - a dance simulation featuring Michael Jackson and designed in part by the star singer.

Sega, which has established the dominant role in the 16-bit market with its Genesis system, also introduced an improved edition of its 8-bit Master system. The company also unveiled a converter that will allow the Master system to play Genesis system cartridges and let the Genesis system play Master system cartridges.

Sony and other Japanese manufacturers showcased their plans to bring digital audio tape recorders to the United States, though Congress is still considering legislation regulating DAT technology.

The music recording industry had expressed concern that DAT technology could lead to extensive pirating of copyrighted recordings. The DAT recorders are capable of copying compact discs.

A recent Japanese government ruling, however, requires that all DAT recorders made for the consumer market be equipped with a system that prevents unauthorized copying.

The system - somewhat similar to copy protection on computer software - allows only one copy of a disk to be made by a DAT recorder.

''With the advent of CD, people have come to expect digital quality in all forms of entertainment,'' Sony Chairman Akio Morita said in the keynote address that began the four-day show Saturday.

''Digital audio tape, or DAT, was the natural step forward for our industry and for consumers,'' he said.

''The digitalization of home recording became a source of grave concern to the music industry - the concern that each digital copy made from copyrighted music could serve as a perfect master for further copying,'' Morita added.

But Morita said the two industries were able to work together to establish the copy protection system.

''Thanks to this cooperative spirit, I believe we will soon be opening another door to the world of digital quality audio entertainment,'' Morita told the assembled industry leaders.

Sunday, Sony announced it would begin shipping DAT recorders to the United States later this month, as will JVC, Aiwa, Hitachi and others.

The units will be priced from around $1,200 for full featured systems to as little as $600 for a portable unit still on the drawing board.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Prices opened mixed Monday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues as the blue chips extended Friday's rally but the broad market was little changed.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.31 Friday, was up 5.58 to 2906.55 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 483-478 among the 1,462 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 12,583,000 shares.

Stocks closed sharply higher Friday in active trading as the Dow industrials extended their gains late in the day to top the 2900 level and post a new record high.

Expectations of lower interest rates fueled the gains in stocks Friday.

The market opened sharply higher, with the Dow industrials up more than 20 points, after the government issued an unexpectedly weak report on May employment.

The jobless rate dipped to 5.3 percent but job growth of 164,000 was almost entirely due to the hiring of legions of temporary workers to canvass the country for the government's 1990 census.

Many economists predicted a jobless rate of 5.4 percent for the month but the economy was expected to have created 135,000 new jobs, excluding census workers.

The news sent the bond market on a tear, sparking speculation the Fed might loosen the reins on credit. In late trading, the 30-year bond was up 1 1/2 points, sending the yield down sharply.

While stocks followed bonds in the early going, more profit taking after the market's sharp gain Tuesday soon set in and prices fell from their highs.

But the Dow industrials recovered their lost ground in late trading as a surge of buying near the close sent the blue chip index above 2900. It had retreated from that level a few times Friday.

Other analysts were slightly disappointed with the market's performance in the face of such a powerful rally in the bond market. Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y., said he felt there was some concern in the market about weakness in the economy and its possible effect on corporate earnings which held the market back somewhat.

#90155u0994 06/04/1990 ~United Press International

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) UPI - The head of Soviet economic reforms conceded Monday living standards may decline next year but challenged anyone with an alternative economic plan to ''come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin, in a combative defense of the government's strategy for overhauling the battered Soviet economy and introducing a market orientation, accused its critics of trying to incite crisis for political gain.

Abalkin, who is in charge of economic reforms, also said the controversial proposal to increase prices is a ''thankless, dirty job'' necessary for moving the country toward free enterprise.

The publication of Abalkin's comments in Pravda, the Communist Party's official newspaper, coincided with debate in the Soviet Parliament on a law to give cooperative and individual businesses the same legal status as state-owned companies, to make all enterprises profit-based and to impose a uniform tax.

''Yes, real volume of consumption will not increase all at once,'' Abalkin said in defending the economic program Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov introduced in Parliament May 24. ''Starting from Jan. 1, 1991, the standard of living will not rise and may even decrease.''

But, noting that there is no alternative proposal to save the Soviet economy on the table, Abalkin said: ''If somebody has such a variant, let him not hide in dark corners but come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Under the strategy to create a ''modified market economy,'' which must be approved by the legislature, the now-subsidized consumer price of bread and other grain products would triple July 1, with other prices rising Jan. 1.

Abalkin said the plan has three main elements: ''free price formation'' and competition between producers, ''economic regulators'' including new tax, financial and credit systems, and a welfare network of social protection.

Announcement of the program last month set off a wave of panic buying across the Soviet Union, forcing authorities in Moscow and other cities to introduce a passport system limiting purchases to local residents.

Radical lawmakers have sharply criticized the econonic-reform strategy, saying it is too cautious and has few concrete provisions beyond burdensome price hikes.

''There remain forces interested in the worsening of the economic situation because any improvement would lead to an increase of confidence in the government and mean the collapse of their political ambitions,'' Abalkin said in an uncharacteristically bitter counterattack.

Important regions of the vast country have indicated they may implement their own economic plans regardless of what the central government does.

Renegade Communist Boris Yeltsin, the popular newly elected Russian federation president, has criticized the Kremlin's program and said his giant republic should puruse a separate strategy.

The local parliaments in the Ukraine and Byelorussia, the largest of the Soviet Union's 15 republics after Russia, have formally rejected the central plan.

The city of Moscow on Saturday established the country's first commodities exchange in a bid to lure people away from the black market and provide them with badly needed goods.

''As a human being, I can understand thinking there is an easy and quick way'' to solve the nation's economic crisis, Abalkin said. ''But as an expert and a member of the government, I have no right to indulge in harebrained schemes or to just smooth things over.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Flamboyant dealmaker Donald Trump, currently promoting his new book called ''Trump: Surviving at the Top,'' may have spoken too soon.

The Wall Street Journal reported Monday that the acquisitive-minded real estate and casino mogul is facing a cash crunch that may force him to give up big chunks of his empire.

A spokesman for Trump did not immediately return phone calls seeking comment.

At the very least, the Journal indicated in a front-page article, Trump's cash shortage is likely to result in a humbling change of lifestyle for the man who has everything from casinos, condos, a board game and a bicycle race named after him.

Fat that could be trimmed includes yachts, mansions, helicopters and private jets, the paper said.

Bankers owed some $2 billion by Trump are currently pressing for the sale of some assets, management changes at Trump's principal holding company and for a much more conservative operating sytle, the paper said.

Trump's creditors are concerned that many of his properties, including his new Taj Majal casino in Atlantic City, N.J., and the Trump Shuttle airline aren't generating enough cash flow to allow Trump to meet interest and principal payments due in the next few months, the Journal said.

In April, Trump said he would like to sell the shuttle, which he bought from Eastern Airlines for $365 million last year, and would consider the sale of other assets because he needed to be flush with cash in order to make new acquisitions.

Trump has been stung by a continuing weak real estate market in the East as well as a slow start for his Taj Majal casino, which opened in April.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - South Korean President Roh Tae-woo hoped Monday a historic meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev could open a new era of trade and diplomacy between the two nations.

Roh arrived Sunday for a first-ever meeting between the leaders of the two nations, calling it "an event of extraordinary significance." The South Korean leader sought to establish diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union with the hope Moscow would use its influence to get North Korea to ease its hostility and reach reunification terms with South Korea.

Roh was to fly to Washington to brief President Bush on his meeting with Gorbachev and to urge him to maintain the U.S. military presence in Korea. The U.S. plans to recall 7,000 of its 43,000 troops there within three years and Roh hopes to persuade Bush not to further reduce the force without correspnding moves from North Korea to reduce tension.

Meanwhile, news reports Monday from Seoul said the government was also pushing a summit meeting with China in hopes of normalizing bilateral relations this year.

The Joongang Ilbo, a nationally circulated newspaper, said Roh may visit Beijing, taking advantage of the 1990 Asian Games opening in the Chinese capital in September.

"The government will step up formal and informal contacts with Beijing in July and August hoping to have a summit meeting take place between (South) Korea and China within this year, it was learned," the paper said without identifying sources. "The government was said to be negotiating with Beijing the possibility of President Roh visiting China for the Asian Games, which provides an opportunity for the top leaders of the two nations to get together in a natural atmosphere."

Roh went straight to the Fairmont Hotel to prepare with his top aides for his meeting with Gorbachev at an undisclosed site in San Francisco. He was greeted outside the hotel by about 100 noisy demonstrators. Some yelled messages of welcome but others angrily waved banners that read, "Stop Conspiracy to Divide Korea Permanently."

The Soviets did not put Roh on Gorbachev's official agenda but his aides indicated the meeting would take place Monday afternoon during a 90-minute break in Gorbachev's schedule.

Roh met for 20 minutes Sunday night with former President Ronald Reagan, who was at the Fairmont Hotel for a brief visit with Gorbachev. The South Korean Embassy in Washington said the unscheduled meeting was held to allow the former president to wish Roh success with Gorbachev.

"This meeting will be an important step towards bringing peace to Northeast Asia and on the Korean peninsula, thereby ending the Cold War in that part of the world," Reagan said in a statement released by the Korean delegation. "This is why I have come to meet Mr. Gorbachev," Roh said.

South Korea and the Soviet Union have never had diplomatic relations and have been on opposite sides since Korea was divided following World War II.

The meeting, to be conducted as Gorbachev stops in San Francisco en route home to Moscow from his summit with President Bush, was announced last Thursday as talks opened in Washington.

"I intend to exchange with President Gorbachev extensive views on how to spread to northeast Asia, especially to the Korean peninsula, the waves of openness and cooperation now sweeping the world," Roh said as he left South Korea. He did not make a statement upon his U.S. arrival.

"In that connection, I will discuss with him not only bilateral relations, but will also discuss in particular depth how to pave the way for the peace and unification of the Korean peninsula," he said.

The Soviet Union has remained a close ally of North Korea, which invaded South Korea in June 1950 with the tacit support of Soviet leader Josef Stalin.

Relations between the two nations date to 1884 when czarist Russia concluded a treaty of amity and trade with the Yi dynasty that was ruling Korea. Russia withdrew from Korea after the Japanese conquest of the peninsula in 1910.

Under a wartime agreement, the Soviet Union occupied North Korea at the end of World War II in 1945. North Korea became a communist satellite state with the installation in 1948 of a government headed by Kim Il-sung, formerly a North Korean army officer.

Relations between Moscow and Seoul remained chilly following the three-year Korean War. A turning point came 35 years later when the Soviets took part in the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics.

Trade had been conducted through third countries but came into the open with direct deals soon after the Olympics. The nations established trade offices in April 1989 and later established consular departments in their respective trade offices in Seoul and Moscow.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The Gorbachevs face a hectic schedule in San Francisco, including breakfast with President Reagan and spending the morning at Stanford University. Soviet President Gorbachev arrived in California last night, after a stop in Minneapolis where he sought to attract U-S investment dollars for his nation's ailing economy.

The man heading up Soviet economic reforms admits that living standards may decline next year, but he challenges anyone with a better idea to make it public. The Soviet deputy premier accused critics of a government strategy to overhaul the Soviet economy of trying to incite crisis for political gain.

Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry smiled and waved at reporters as he entered a federal court for trial on drug and perjury charges today. Prospective jurors lined up in the courtroom of Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to officially begin the trial. Barry faces 14 counts of perjury, cocaine possession and conspiracy to possess cocaine dating back six years.

The Wall Street Journal reports that Donald Trump faces severe cash flow problems that may force the real estate and casino tycoon to sell off parts of his empire. Sources told the paper that Trump and bank creditors have been meeting at Trump Tower during the past two weeks to discuss his financial situation.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry began Monday with attorneys trying to select a jury to hear charges that could sink Barry's political career.

Barry, whose trial begins nearly five months after he was arrested for allegedly smoking crack cocaine during an FBI sting operation at a downtown hotel, faces 14 counts of perjury, cocaine possession and conspiracy to possess cocaine dating back six years. He smiled and waved but did not talk to reporters as he entered the courtroom, accompanied by his wife, Effi, and mother, Mattie Cummings.

Reporters were barred from the courtroom for the opening proceedings, which included a statement from Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to the first of two panels of potential jurors.

Barry, who for years had denied persistent rumors about his alleged drug use, was jeered by about 25 members of the crime-fighting group the Guardian Angels as he entered the courthouse.

Clad in their traditional red berets and white patrol T-shirts, the group held signs reading: "Barry don't delay, resign today," and "Barry smoked crack, we don't want him back."

The scene outside the courthouse was sedate, however, compared to the mob of onlookers, protesters, and supporters for his arraignment the day after his Jan. 18 arrest.

The trial began after talks between prosecutors and Barry's defense team failed to reach a plea bargain. The Barry camp reportedly had agreed to plead guilty only to misdemeanor charges but the prosecution wanted a felony conviction, which would make Barry ineligible to be mayor of Washington, where the soaring murder rate has been linked to crack traffic.

Prospective jurors filed in at 10:15 a.m., and Jackson entered the courtroom to officially start the trial shortly after. Jury selection from a pool of about 250 potential panelists was to begin with the men and women answering, in writing, a questionnaire of about 100 questions.

The selection of 12 jurors and two alternates was expected to last at least a week, during which potential jurors will be asked a series of questions about their views on legalizing drugs, their political affiliations and whether they have ever supported Barry politically. The trial was expected to last a month.

LeeAnn Flynn Hall, administrative assistant to Chief Judge Aubrey Robinson, said a copy of Jackson's statement and a questionnaire would be available to the media in the afternoon. Verbal questioning of the potential jurors was scheduled to begin Tuesday morning.

If a plea agreement is not reached, Barry has said he feels he will be acquitted by a jury of his peers. "I think the prosecutors know that in this town all it takes is one juror saying, 'I'm not going to convict Marion Barry. I don't care what you say,"' the 54-year-old three-term mayor said in an interview published May 30 in the Post.

If convicted on all charges, Barry could be sentenced to 26 years in prison and fined more than $1.8 million. Only the three perjury charges are felonies. A felony conviction would mean some prison time under federal guidelines, meaning that he would no longer be eligible to serve as mayor. Barry has not said whether he will seek a fourth term as mayor in the Nov. 6 general election.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts, in a status hearing Friday, asked Jackson to allow prospective jurors to express their personal feelings about law enforcement agencies, sting operations and undercover investigations.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 in a joint federal-city sting at the downtown Vista International Hotel and allegedly was videotaped smoking crack cocaine. Barry has acknowledged smoking the crack, but accused federal authorities of trying to "kill" him by allowing him to consume a potent dose of the drug.

Defense lawyer R. Kenneth Mundy is expected to try to deflect the charges with an entrapment defense, in effect putting the government on trial. Prosecutors, then, would have to prove that Barry was not entrapped, that the mayor had a predisposition to break the law.

Barry was indicted Feb. 15 on three felony perjury charges and five misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession. The perjury charges allege he lied to a federal grand jury questioning him about drug use in January 1989. Six more misdemeanor counts were added to the indictment last month, charging Barry used or conspired to use cocaine dating back to 1984.

Barry spent seven weeks at in-patient substance abuse treatment facilities in South Carolina and Florida after his arrest, receiving treatment for what he called alcoholism and addiction to prescription drugs. Mundy has stated that he will not try to use alcoholism as a defense in the trial.

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) UPI - The head of Soviet economic reforms conceded Monday that living standards may decline next year but challenged anyone with an alternative economic plan to ''come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin, in a combative defense of the government's strategy for overhauling the battered Soviet economy and introducing a market orientation, accused its critics of trying to incite crisis for political gain.

Abalkin, who is in charge of economic reforms, also said the controversial proposal to increase prices is a ''thankless, dirty job'' necessary for moving the country toward free enterprise.

The publication of Abalkin's comments in Pravda, the Communist Party's official newspaper, coincided with debate in the Soviet Parliament on a law to give cooperative and individual businesses the same legal status as state-owned companies, to make all enterprises profit-based and to impose a uniform tax.

''Yes, real volume of consumption will not increase all at once,'' Abalkin said in defending the economic program Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov introduced in Parliament May 24. ''Starting from Jan. 1, 1991, the standard of living will not rise and may even decrease.''

But, noting that there is no alternative proposal to save the Soviet economy on the table, Abalkin said: ''If somebody has such a variant, let him not hide in dark corners but come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Under the strategy to create a ''modified market economy,'' which must be approved by the legislature, the now-subsidized consumer price of bread and other grain products would triple July 1, with other prices rising Jan. 1.

Abalkin said the plan has three main elements: ''free price formation'' and competition between producers, ''economic regulators'' including new tax, financial and credit systems, and a welfare network of social protection.

Announcement of the program last month set off a wave of panic buying across the Soviet Union, forcing authorities in Moscow and other cities to introduce a passport system limiting purchases to local residents.

Radical lawmakers have sharply criticized the econonic-reform strategy, saying it is too cautious and has few concrete provisions beyond burdensome price hikes.

''There remain forces interested in the worsening of the economic situation because any improvement would lead to an increase of confidence in the government and mean the collapse of their political ambitions,'' Abalkin said in an uncharacteristically bitter counterattack.

Important regions of the vast country have indicated they may implement their own economic plans regardless of what the central government does.

Renegade Communist Boris Yeltsin, the popular newly elected Russian federation president, has criticized the Kremlin's program and said his giant republic should puruse a separate strategy.

The parliaments in the Ukraine and Byelorussia, two of the Soviet Union's most productive republics, have formally rejected the central plan.

The city of Moscow on Saturday established the country's first commodities exchange in a bid to lure people away from the black market and provide them with badly needed goods.

''As a human being, I can understand thinking there is an easy and quick way'' to solve the nation's economic crisis, Abalkin said. ''But as an expert and a member of the government, I have no right to indulge in harebrained schemes or to just smooth things over.''

(JUNE 4) UPI - Thousands of people prayed and hoisted banners through the streets around the world in commemoration of pro-democracy protesters killed by the Chinese army in and around Tiananmen Square a year ago.

In the United States, rallies were held Sunday in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago Los Angeles, New York, Seattle and even smaller towns such as Annville, Pa., to mark the first anniversary of the massacre.

In Hong Kong, more than 20,000 people gathered Monday in the British colony's largest park for a peaceful candlelight vigil, marking the first anniversary of the military-led crackdown.

Most of the demonstrators wore white, a symbol of mourning in much of Asia and many carried signs reading, ''Wildflowers never die.''

Led by prominent Hong Kong dissidents, protesters carried lighted candles, sang songs and waved banners calling for the release of political prisoners in Beijing and greater democracy in Hong Kong, which reverts to Chinese rule in 1997.

''Today, June 4, marks the one-year anniversary of the violent suppression of China's democracy movement,'' liberal lawmaker and political activist Martin Lee told the crowd.

''We come here together to light candles and in the flickering light to mourn those Chinese students and citizens who sacrificed their lives in the pursuit of democracy.

''The light emanating from these candles bears witness to the fact that the people of Hong Kong and of the world have not forgotten June Fourth and that we are still determined to achieve the ideals of the students.

''It is our abiding hope that democracy one day will come to China,'' Lee said.

In Australia, thousands rallied in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Adelaide, reading poetry, giving theatrical performances, playing recordings from Tiananmen Square and holding all-night vigils outside Chinese diplomatic offices.

In Sydney, some 7,000 assembled in Town Hall Square Sunday to pray for the hundreds and perhaps thousands of Chinese students who died.

More than 10,000 mainland China students who were in Australia when the massacre took place are still on extended visas.

About 1,000 people rallied in London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported. The BBC said the demonstrators planned to hand the Chinese Embassy a petition calling on Beijing to release all political prisoners. A similiar rally was held in Manchester, 197 miles to the north, the BBC said.

About 30 people marched Sunday from Boston's City Hall to a memorial in the city's Chinatown section to honor Wang Weilin, the 19-year-old Beijing worker who stood up to Chinese army tanks as they rolled into the square last year.

Guo Xiao Bing, 23, of Beijing read an elegy written by two men who survived the massacre and urged the marchers to keep the Chinese students' efforts in support of democracy alive in mind and spirit.

''We give our hearts to you, to those who died, because we want you to revive in our bodies,'' Guo read.

In Seattle, dozens of demonstrators marched through the city's international district carrying poster-size photographs of Wang standing in front of a tank. Saturday night, a candlelight vigil honoring the students was held on the Seattle campus of the University of Washington.

In Atlanta, the Atlanta Association for Democracy in China, formed shortly after the Tiananmen Square crackdown, held a commemmoration in downtown Woodruff Park. College students built a replica of the ''Goddess of Democracy'' statue that Chinese students displayed in Tiananmen Square a year ago.

Eighteen Fulbright scholars who were in China last year held a memorial service at Lebanon Valley College in Annville, Pa., at 2 p.m., the hour troops opened fire on Chinese demonstrators last year. The scholars and supporters pinned white flowers to bushes and trees at the college in memory of the Chinese students and read tributes to them.

Michael Berlin, who taught journalism at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing, described the letters he receives from former Chinese students.

''Now there is a silent defiance,'' he said. ''Everyone is silently refusing to knuckle under to the government, by ignoring orders or by not taking the (communist) ideology seriously. They are not turning one another in.''

In Los Angeles, Chinese expatriates and other supporters of the democracy movement protested outside the Chinese consulate.

In Chicago, hundreds of Chinese students marched by China's consulate and held an emotional memorial service at the University of Chicago.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Stock prices were narrowly mixed in moderate trading early Monday, drifting as the market consolidated gains from Friday's rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.31 Friday, was down 0.97 to 2900.00 at 11 a.m. EDT.

Advances led declines 650-593 among the 1,747 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Volume amounted to about 47,000,000 shares at 11 a.m., compared with 70,100,000 in the same period Friday.

The market paused after its record high close on Friday when the Dow industrials topped 2900 for the first time ever. It drifted on either side of that level in early trading Monday.

Analysts said investors were slightly cautious after the runup of the past couple of weeks and took a breather from their aggressive buying.

Another factor keeping prices in check, they said, was the absence of European activity because of a holiday in most countries there. U.S. stocks did not trade in Europe overnight.

Slight gains in Treasury issues kept stocks from posting any substantial losses, however. Prices were up as much as 1/4 point after surging Friday after the weak job data for May sparked speculation that lower interest rates were on the horizon.

On the trading floor, BCE was the most active issue, up 1/8 to 34 1/8.

L.A. Gear followed, down 1 3/8 to 29 1/2, extending Friday's plunge. The company said Friday it expected earnings for its quarter ending May 31 of 50 to 60 cents a share, sharply below the 91 cents earned a year ago.

J.P. Morgan was third, up 3/8 to 39 1/4. Philip Morris was also active, up 7/8 to 44 1/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 1/4 to 43 1/8, IBM was up 5/8 to 120 1/8, General Electric was down 3/8 to 69 1/4, and American Express was up 1/2 to 30 1/4.

Prices were lower in light trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Bayou Steel Class A led the Amex issues, up 1/4 to 3 1/4.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 4) UPI - Several hundred thousand emotional faithful gathered at the tomb of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Monday's first anniversary of the death of the Islamic spiritual leader of the revolution that ousted the shah of Iran.

Dozens of mourners clambered over the railing around the glass-encased inner chamber that holds the tomb, despite efforts by revolutionary guards to hold them back and keep order.

In a scene reminiscent of Khomeini's burial a year ago at the Behesht

Zahra cemetery 10 miles south of Tehran, a mass of people thronged toward the 62-acre shrine built at the site and about 70,000 managed to squeeze inside the inner perimeters.

A United Press International reporter who flew over the shrine in a helicopter provided by the government for the media estimated that at least 400,000 people, dressed predominantly in black, were assembled around the tomb.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, quoting an officer of the revolutionary guards, estimated the size of the crowd in the millions.

Iran set June 4 for the official observance of the anniversary of the ayatollah's death. Khomeini died the night of June 3-4, 1989, more than 10 years after leading a revolution that toppled Shah Mohammad Pahlavi.

In November 1979, radicals seized the U.S. Embassy and held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days, and Iranian-U.S. relations have been seriously strained since.

Washington believes Tehran has played a major role in the hostage-taking in Lebanon. There are at least 16 Westerners held captive by pro-Iranian Moslem extremists in Lebanon, six of them Americans.

In Lebanon Monday, Moslem areas observed a general strike as part of a three-day mourning period to mark the anniversary. The strike was called by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah group, or Party of God. Businesses, schools, universities and shops were shut in Moslem west Beirut and in southern and eastern Lebanon.

Rallies and marches of mourning in Lebanon attracted thousands of people, many of whom cried and pounded their chests or chanted pro-Iranian slogans.

The ayatollah's tomb at Behesht Zahra cemetery, with a gold-plated dome that gleams in the sun, was built only days after he was buried last year. The shrine has since been expanded.

Crowds of people devoted to the imam, or spiritual leader, began assembling at Behesht Zahra last week. Many camped in the grounds around the tomb days before the official ceremonies began.

Medics and ambulances stood by Monday to care for the dozens who fainted in the crowd, particularly during the hottest part of the day when temperatures soared to 100 degrees. No serious injuries were reported.

Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who succeeded Khomeini as Iran's spiritual leader last year, called on Iranians to support the government in reconstructing the country after eight years of war with Iraq.

''All the people, and those whose responsibilities are defined, have a duty to take part in the development of the country,'' Khamenei told mourners at the tomb. ''This is the meaning of true devotion to Imam Khomeini.

''This day is the most bitter and heartbreaking day for the Iranian nation '' Khamenei said.

Helicopters, shuttling between Tehran and the tomb, carried more than 2,000 foreign guests invited for the ceremonies along with about 300 foreign and local reporters and hundreds of officials, IRNA reported.

The shrine consists of a structure surrounding a glass-encased tombstone draped in green, covered by a huge golden dome, some 90 feet high. The design also calls for two 303-foot minarets but only one has been completed.

The interior walls are partly covered with marble, along with the floor, while the ceiling is decorated with intricate mirror-work in the traditional Iranian style.

The grounds surrounding the tomb cover almost 62 acres and include streets sidewalks and fountains, with an adjacent parking lot spread over more than 120 acres.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 4) UPI - Egypt, which has severe penalties for drug trafficking, called Monday for closer cooperation among other African countries to stop the use of Africans as drug couriers to developed countries.

Interior Minister Maj. Gen. Abdel-Halim Moussa, addressing delegates from 40 African countries gathered in Cairo for a four-day conference on drugs, also praised his country's cooperation with the United States and West Germany in the fight against drugs.

''Foreign (criminal) organizations are using an increasing number of Africans to carry their drugs to developed countries,'' he said. ''African countries should cooperate more closely to combat this menace.

''We appreciate the role of the United States and West Germany and the positive help they have given us to combat the drug problem.''

Egypt last year enacted a tough new law on drug trafficking, leading to the execution of a Pakistani man convicted of bringing heroin into the country through Cairo airport.

Last month, the country's supreme Islamic religious authorities approved death sentences against 12 persons, including Egyptians, Lebanese, Sudanese and a Turkish-Cypriot, on similar charges.

Egyptian police last week arrested 14 Nigerians, including a number of women, after discovering that they were carrying hard drugs concealed in condoms they had swallowed. Cairo newspapers said the police acted on a tip.

The Cairo anti-drug conference is the third since 1985. Representatives from the United States, Britain, France and the United Nations are attending.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court ruled Monday that state bar associations may not spend compulsory dues on political activity against members' wishes.

The court's unanimous ruling by Chief Justice William Rehnquist extends a series of cases dealing with labor unions to the ''integrated bar,'' state bars that require membership for lawyers to practice. Thirty-three jurisdictions have integrated bars.

In the union cases, the Supreme Court held that dues could not be used for political activities against the will of individual union members and, in later rulings, approved of systems to segregate dues needed for union business and dues needed for lobbying, which would be refunded to objecting members.

In his decision Monday, Rehnquist noted that the State Bar of California was using mandatory dues to lobby for and against legislation, to endorse a gun control initiative and to endorse a nuclear weapons freeze.

He wrote that it may not always be clear where the line is to be drawn on the use of dues for legitimate purposes such as regulation of the legal profession and political or ideological activities.

''But the extreme ends of the spectrum are clear: Compulsory dues may not be expended to endorse or advance a gun control or nuclear weapons freeze initiative; at the other end of the spectrum petitioners have no valid constitutional objection to their compulsory dues being spent for activities connected with disciplining members of the bar or proposing ethical codes for the profession.''

The role of bar associations was called into question in a case challenging a variety of activities by the State Bar of California such as lobbying, adopting resolutions and filing friend-of-court briefs.

The case, begun in 1982, was brought to the Supreme Court by a number of lawyers who objected to the use of their dues for such items as ''adopting resolutions in favor of ballot initiatives concerning handgun control and a nuclear weapons freeze, lobbying on legislation concerning comparable worth, criminal penalities, and environmental issues, and filing friend-of-court briefs in support of an attack on the constitutionality of California's Victims' Bill of Rights Initiative and supporting prisoners arguing that California prison conditions violated their constitutional rights.''

They sought a court order that would prohibit the bar from using mandatory dues revenues or the name of the State Bar to promote political or ideological causes.

The trial court issued summary judgment for the bar, ruling that because the bar was a state agency, the First Amendment did not restrict the bar's activities. The state appeals court reversed, but the California Supreme Court reversed the appeals court.

The case has drawn a number of briefs from diverse groups. Among those supporting the lawyers fighting the dues are the conservative Washington Legal Foundation, the liberal ACLU and the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation. The American Bar Association, various state bars and the AFL-CIO supported the state bar.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 4) UPI - The pro-democracy National League party's jubilation over its May election victory is turning to frustration over the military junta's refusal to give up power until a new constitution is written and ratified.

Some members of the National League worry that the military's decision could delay transfer of power for months, even years.

The development is also deepening divisions within the NLD itself, with younger supporters of Aung San Suu Kyi pressing for rapid change and older backers of Tin U, many of them former military officers, more sensitive to the power of the junta.

A spokesman for the junta, the State Law and Order Restoration Council, said Friday a new legislature must pass a constitution before power is transferred. He said the constitution should also be approved by the nation in a referendum.

Previous referenda, such as the one that approved the 1974 constitution, have taken more than a year to carry out.

Kyi Maung, who has managed NLD affairs while Suu Kyi and Tin U are in prison, said the party could produce a constitution in 2 1/2 months but that quick approval by the nation's ethnic minorities would be difficult.

''For instance, to have the consensus of the minorities we would need to open a dialogue with minority leaders, including those now in open revolt against the government, but would that be possible in the present situation?'' Kyi Maung said.

Burma has seen numerous ethnic insurgencies since it became independent in 1948.

Drafters of the country's first constitution aimed to calm the fears of ethnic minority groups by giving them their own states with separate state councils.

But prospects for additional minority powers in 1962 negotiations eventually helped prompt a military takeover.

The 1974 constitution drafted by the military-dominated one-party government reduced the powers of the states.

The NLD itself has proposed convening a conference of all ethnic groups to lay down guidelines for promoting durable national unity and peace.

But that plan is based on the assumption that the party would acquire political power soon after the elections and then convene the conference.

In Mandalay, the All Burma Federation of Students Unions and the All Burma Federation of Youths Unions told reporters Sunday they would urge the military to summon the new Parliament and transfer power as quickly as possible.

By its own compilation of results of the May 27 election, the NLD captured 396 of the 486 seats in the Parliament.

The huge majority in a race that included 92 other parties appeared to be a massive mandate for change, but the military appeared unmoved.

MAPUTO, MOZAMBIQUE (JUNE 4) UPI - An overloaded motor launch carrying Mozambicans home from a visit to a witch doctor capsized in northern Pemba bay, killing at least 31 people, it was reported Monday.

It was the worst maritime accident in the bay since Mozambican independence in 1975.

The newspaper Noticias reported that 30 people survived the mishap Saturday, but quoted officials as saying it was impossible to determine how many others could be missing because no passenger manifest was kept.

The helsman was arrested, Noticias said.

Owned by a local official of the ruling Frelimo Party and designed to carry a maximum of 30 passengers, the boat began taking on water and capsized on its return trip from the town of Pemba to Messanje, on the opposite side of the bay.

The passengers included a group that had visited a well-known area witch doctor in northern Cabo Delgado province, Noticias reported. The man claims to have the power to vaccinate people against evil spirits.

The witchdoctor has raised the ire of local authorities for using unsterilized knives during the alleged vaccinations, risking the transmission of the AIDS virus. He is presently under investigation by Health Ministry officials.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - Former Secretary of State George Shultz was a prominent peripheral figure Monday in the unprecedented Soviet-Korean summit. The Reagan administration Cabinet officer was in the U.S. delegation greeting South Korean President Roh Tae-woo when he arrived Sunday in San Francisco, and he met again with Roh later in the day.

Shultz also was scheduled to meet Monday with Mikhail Gorbachev during the Soviet president's visit to Stanford University, where Shultz is a professor and senior fellow of the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution, and Peace.

Although details were not release, Roh and Gorbachev had announced they would meet during the Soviet leader's visit to San Francisco. Roh plans to go to Washington to meet with President Bush later in the week.

When Gorbachev's trip to San Francisco was announced, Shultz was in South Korea. He returned home a few days later. "You have to keep working," Schultz, who has met with Roh several times over the past three years, told reporters before Roh's plane arrived. He did not elaborate.

Shultz said he was "just delighted" by the San Francisco summit and said the session, bringing together the Soviet and South Korean leaders for the first time, had the potential to be a "great event."

Shultz has supported Roh's plan for interim steps toward reunification with communist North Korea since Roh first proposed it in 1988. Hong Choo Hyun, South Korea's ambassador to the United Nations, said Shultz and Roh are "personal friends" and their meeting was "of a personal nature."

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 4) UPI - South Korean President Roh Tae-woo, who will meet with President Bush after unprecedented talks with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, will press the United States to maintain what he sees as a war-deterring presence in Korea.

Roh was to see Bush in Washington Wednesday following talks with Gorbachev Monday in San Francisco.

The Roh-Gorbachev meeting - the first between South Korean and Soviet leaders - is widely expected in Korea to lead to formal diplomatic ties between Seoul and Moscow.

But Roh is said to believe maintaining South Korea's ties with the United States is even more important than enhancing its already warming relationship with the Soviet Union.

Roh, departing for San Francisco on Sunday, said South Korea believes efforts to maintain peace with communist North Korea can be successful only when backed by a firm security tie to the United States.

''I intend to discuss (with Bush) how our two nations, which are staunch allies, should cope together with the current world upheavals. In particular, I desire to take the occasion to further strengthen the (South) Korea-U.S. security cooperation arrangements,'' Roh said.

The United States plans to reduce its military presence in Korea, currently standing at 43,000 troops, by 7,000 by the end of 1993. About 5,000 of the troops withdrawn will be from the Army and the rest from the Air Force.

Seoul accepts the plan, but opposes any further immediate cutbacks in the absence of corresponding moves from North Korea to reduce tension.

Trade frictions that strained U.S-Korean relations in recent years have largely been resolved. In 1989, bilateral traded totalled $36.55 billion, including South Korean exports of $20.64 billion to the United States and imports of $15.91 billion from the United States.

South Korea, with normalization of relations with the Soviet Union in the offing, is pushing for a high-level meeting with China hoping to establish formal ties with Beijing within this year, news reports said.

The Joongang Ilbo, a nationally circulated South Korean daily, said Roh may visit Beijing, taking advantage of the 1990 Asian Games opening in the Chinese capital in September.

''The government will step up formal and informal contacts with Beijing in July and August, hoping to have a summit meeting take place between (South) Korea and China within this year,'' the paper said without identifying its sources.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court today upheld the consitutionality of a law designed to let religious groups meet in public schools. The court, in an opinion by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, rejected arguments by Westside Community Schools in Omaha, Nebraska, that the Equal Access Act violates the First Amendment. The law says if schools allow such groups as a chess club to meet on school property, they must also allow such groups as a Bible study club.

President Bush won applause from members of his Cabinet today and says he's ''very pleased'' with results of four days of talks with Soviet leader Gorbachev. Bush also says he talked by phone with West German Chancellor Kohl and British Prime Minister Thatcher in a post-summit briefing. Bush says he was pleased with their response.

South Korean President Roh Tae Woo is in San Francisco, hoping that a brief, but historic meeting with Soviet President Gorbachev may open a new era of trade and diplomacy between the two nations. Roh hopes that Moscow will use its influence to get North Korea to ease hostility and reach unification terms with South Korea. News reports from Seoul also indicate the government wants a summit meeting with China aimed at normalizing bilateral relations.

The trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry began in federal court today, nearly five months after his arrest on charges of smoking crack cocaine. Reporters were barred from the courtroom for the opening proceedings. Jury selection is expected to last at least one week. Barry is charged with 14 counts of perjury, cocaine possession and conspiracy to possess cocaine.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - The stock market edged higher at midday Monday in moderate trading as the market paused after Friday's rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.31 Friday, was up 1.94 to 2902.91 at noon EDT.

Advances led declines 677-656 among the 1,861 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Volume amounted to about 72,000,000 shares at noon, compared with 94,060,000 in the same period Friday.

The market paused after its record high close on Friday when the Dow industrials topped 2900 for the first time ever, drifting on either side of that level.

Analysts said investors were slightly cautious after the runup of the past couple of weeks and took a breather from their aggressive buying.

Another factor keeping prices in check, they said, was the absence of European activity because of a holiday in most countries. U.S. stocks did not trade in Europe overnight.

Slight gains in Treasury issues kept stocks from posting any substantial losses, however. Notes and bonds were up as much as 1/4 point in early trading after surging Friday. The weak job data for May sparked speculation that lower interest rates were on the horizon.

On the trading floor, L.A. Gear was most active, down 7/8 to 30, extending Friday's plunge. The company said Friday it expected earnings for its quarter ending May 31 of 50 to 60 cents a share, sharply below the 91 cents earned a year ago.

BCE followed, up 1/8 to 34 1/8. Philip Morris was third, up 7/8 to 44 1/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 3/8 to 43, IBM was up 5/8 to 120 1/8, General Electric was down 1/4 to 69 3/8, and American Express was up 1/2 to 30 1/4.

Prices were lower in light trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Amdahl led the Amex issues, off 1/4 to 15 5/8.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme upheld 8-1 Monday the constitutionality of the federal Equal Access Act that allows religious groups to meet in public schools.

The court, in an opinion by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, upheld the 1984 law in a case brought by Westside Community Schools in Omaha, Neb. O'Connor rejected arguments that the act violated the First Amendment ban against government endorsement of religion.

The school had maintained that allowing a religious club to meet at school would ''effectively incorporate religious activities into the school's official program, endorse participation in the religious club, and provide the club with an official platform to proselytize other students.

''We disagree. ... Because the act on its face grants equal access to both secular and religious speech, we think it clear that the act's purpose was not to 'endorse or disapprove of religion,'' O'Connor wrote.

O'Connor was joined in her ruling by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Byron White and Harry Blackmun. Four other justices agreed with the court's decision to uphold the law, but not the reasoning behind it, and wrote separately.

Justice Anthony Kennedy, joined by Justice Antonin Scalia, wrote a concurring opinion as did Justice Thurgood Marshall, joined by Justice William Brennan.

Marshall warned that schools must be careful to avoid appearing to sponsor religious groups and must ''fully disassociate'' themselves from the ''religious speech'' of the clubs.

Only Justice John Paul Stevens dissented. He said the ''act, as construed by the majority, comes perilously close to an outright command to allow organized prayer ... on school premises.''

Noted atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair attacked the ruling and said it heralds the ''end for secular school.''

''This is going to be permit religion to be intruded into the public schools,'' she said. ''That negates everything about the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. ...

''This is saying that intellectually immature youngsters may be indoctrinated with religion and this is perfectly acceptable and must be paid for by tax dollars. This is shocking.''

In other action, the court:

-Ruled unanimously that state bar associations may not spend compulsory dues on political activity against members' wishes. The court's ruling by Chief Justice William Rehnquist extends a series of cases dealing with labor unions to ''integrated bar,'' state bars that require membership for lawyers to practice. Thirty-three jurisdictions have integrated bars.

-Ruled that an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a prisoner need not give warnings to a fellow prisoner that information the prisoner gives may be used against him.

-Ruled taxpayers are entitled to a refund of taxes that are found to be unconstitutional, saying a state must provide ''safeguards'' for unlawful taxation.

The federal Equal Access Act, which applies to any public high school receiving money from the federal government, states that if schools allow such groups as a chess club to meet on school property they are an ''open forum'' and they must also open their doors to such groups as a Bible study club.

The law maintains that if schools have an ''open forum'' system, one that allows groups that are not directly related to the school curriculum to meet on school property, the school cannot deny access to school premises during non-instructional time on the basis of the content of the club's speech.

The law, which also protects those who wish to hold political or philosophical meetings, was somewhat controversial when passed. Some groups warned that the law would not only open up the schoolhouse to Bible study groups, but also extremist groups such as the Ku Klux Klan.

Monday's case began when Bridget Mergens and Andrea Simmonds attempted to form a Christian Bible Study group in the school in January 1985. School officials refused the request and the students brought suit in April 1985, claiming the refusal violated a number of constitutional rights such as freedom of religion and the Equal Access Act.

In February 1988, however, the district court, disagreed and said the school system maintains a ''closed forum'' and therefore did not have to open up the school to non-curriculum related clubs.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court ruled Monday that taxpayers are entitled to a refund of taxes that are found to be unconstitutional.

The high court, in a unanimous ruling, said a state must provide ''safeguards'' for unlawful taxation by providing refunds or by authorizing taxpayers to withhold payment until a state hearing on the matter.

The case was brought by the McKesson Corp., seeking a refund of excise taxes paid on alcoholic beverages it distributed. McKesson successfully challenged Florida's alcoholic beverage tax scheme as unconstitutional after the high court struck down a similar law in a 1984 Hawaii case.

After the state legislature amended its tax laws, taxpayers subsequently sought refunds.

The Florida law granted an excise tax exemption to beverages manufactured and bottled in Florida from Florida products.

''The state's interest in financial stability does not justify a refusal to provide relief,'' the high court said in an opinion delivered by Justice William Brennan.

''Because exaction of a tax constitutes a deprivation of property, the state must provide ... safeguards against unlawful exactions,'' the court said.

In a related case involving retroactive refunds for taxes found to be unconstitutional, the high court said providing back refunds would burden the state treasury and may be unjust.

The case involved an appeal by the American Trucking Association representing truckers trying to recover highway use taxes paid in Arkansas. The tax, which has since been amended by Arkansas lawmakers, was similar to a Pennsylvania flat tax struck down by the Supreme Court in 1987.

The high court ruled it would be unjust to force states to provide retroactive refunds on taxes later found to be unconstitutional when the state relied on valid existing precedent in enacting its tax laws.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) UPI - The Chicago Bears reportedly have agreed to sign a 30-year lease to play in a proposed domed stadium.

The agreement was announced Monday by Metro Pier and Exposition Authority, which administers the McCormick Place convention center. The stadium is part of a planned expansion for the facility.

The agreement calls for the Bears to pay $10 million annually to lease the dome for its home games, compared with the $4.2 million they pay per year to play in aging Soldier Field. Other NFL franchises pay an average $3 million to $4 million for use of their facilities.

''We have a proposed agreement which the Bears are prepared to sign,'' said John Schmidt, authority chairman.

''Compared to the deal that the White Sox got or what Oakland is offering to try to get the Raiders, it's not fair,'' Schmidt conceded. ''But the basic point is that it is still a good deal for the Bears since they would make more money, even after paying the rent.''

Bears owner Mike McCaskey has expressed reservations about the high rent and intimated a new stadium linked to Arlington International Racecourse in Arlington Heights was a possibility. Schmidt presented the plan to the authority board.

Despite the agreement, the proposed stadium may face rough sledding. Illinois Senate President Phil Rock, D-Oak Park, last week said it would be difficult for the General Assembly to come up with a funding mechanism for the proposal before the Legislature adjourns this session.

''This is a good project for the entire state,'' Schmidt said. ''It should go forward. The tax revenues would go straight to the state treasury.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court upheld Monday a court order forcing the government to pay fees to lawyers arguing against the Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention of Haitian refugees.

The high court rejected arguments by the federal government, which contended it should not have to pick up the tab automatically for opposition lawyers when those lawyers are attempting to convince a judge that their fees in a case should be paid by the government.

The court ruled that eligibility for fees must be met by four conditions set out in the statute, but said district courts ''will always retain substantial discretion in fixing the amount'' of an award.

''The specific purpose of the (Equal Access to Justice Act) is to eliminate for the average person the financial disincentive to challenge unreasonable governmental actions,'' the court said in an opinion delivered by Justice John Paul Stevens.

The court cited a 1980 House and Senate report that stated it was ''unfair'' to ask petitioners to ''finance through their tax dollars unreasonable government action and also bear the cost of vindicting their rights.''

The case before the court stemmed from a nearly 10-year legal battle involving an INS policy of detaining without parole Haitian refugees who came to the country primarily through Miami. The policy also included accelerated hearings, held in the absence of lawyers for the refugees, to determine whether the refugees were ''excludable.''

Lawyers for the refugees successfully stopped the mass exclusion hearings and were able to get the detainees released pending determination of their political asylum applications.

According to the Equal Access to Justice Act, victorious parties in a civil lawsuit involving the government will be awarded attorney's fees and expenses unless a court finds the government's position on the award to be ''substantially justified.''

The trial court found that because lawyers for the Haitians prevailed in the case, the government should pay the Haitians' attorney's fees and that it should pay the $100,000 in fees for litigating the fees.

The 11th U.S. District Court of Appeals affirmed that ruling, holding that the lower court was correct in not considering whether to government's position was substantially justified in the ''fees for fees'' section of the case.

Lawyers for the refugees argued against Supreme Court review.

CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 4) UPI - Jim Bakker's cellmate Monday denied tabloid reports the evangelist has turned into a raving lunatic behind bars and said he spends his days comforting the sick and dying at a federal prison hospital.

David Miskavige, in a letter to a reporter, said tabloid reports that the PTL founder is suffering hallucinations and preaches to imaginary congregations are blatant lies.

"I can state with absolute certainty the press accounts of Jim Bakker's alleged activities are not only inaccurate but are pure fabrications," Miskavige said. "In fact, I would go so far as to suggest the author of such stories is himself given to hallucinations."

Bakker, 50, was found guilty last year of fraud and conspiracy stemming from the way he raised and spent money at PTL, the Fort Mill, S.C., ministry he founded and lost over a sex scandal. He was sentenced to 45 years in prison and is being held at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn.

Tabloid reports in recent weeks have suggested Bakker keeps other inmates awake at night, howling loudly and preaching to imaginary congregations. Miskavige said that is far from the truth.

"He is a considerate roommate who is in full control of his faculties," said Miskavige, whose letter did not mention what crime he committed. "All reports to the contrary are sheer fantasy."

Bakker, who shares a cell with Miskavige and two other inmates, earns 11 cents an hour performing janitorial duties at the medical center, where he is not permitted to preach.

But Miskavige said Bakker has found a place for himself ministering to the sick and dying. "He spends his time at this hospital facility working in the hospice program where he is a companion to the gravely ill and dying," Miskavige wrote. "He devotes substantial amounts of time to the Stop Smoking Clinic."

Miskavige said the soft-spoken Bakker provides an excellent example for the other inmates. "He conducts himself in an honorable manner and in the process is an excellent example of what we should all strive to be - a man who walks humbly with his God, ever mindful of St. Paul's admonition that though you have faith enough to move mountains, without charity you have nothing."

Bakker's stormy trial was interrupted by a panic attack in which Bakker crawled under his lawyer's couch, resulting in the judge sending him to a federal prison psychiatric ward for testing. But the prison psychiatrist who examined him found Bakker completely sane.

(JUNE 4) UPI - ABC, ignoring Jim Valvano's troubles at North Carolina State, signed the former Wolfpack basketball coach Monday to pair with Brent Musburger on college telecasts.

Valvano, who also will appear on ESPN, reportedly will earn $900,000 over three years. ESPN is owned by ABC-Capital Cities.

North Carolina State's basketball program was put on probation last winter and barred from participating in the NCAA Tournament after it was determined that players sold complimentary shoes and tickets. The school also was ordered to repay $405,756 from tournament earnings because former player Charles Shackleford admitted accepting loans while still in school.

''We checked with people in the college basketball community and with the NCAA and there was a lot of work done behind the scenes,'' ABC Sports President Dennis Swanson said. ''We're satisfied what while there were difficulties at North Carolina State, Jim was exonerated. What North Carolina State was ultimately put on probation for was that players sold tickets and shoes.

''Life goes on. Hopefully, come Dec. 1 (the date of Valvano's first game), we'll be on a new page.''

Valvano and N.C. State's board of trustees reached agreement April 7 for him to leave a 10-year position that produced 209 victories and the 1983 national championship.

The coach was dismissed after public discussions that included the threat of a lawsuit by the school to avoid honoring a buyout clause in his contract. The school ultimately paid Valvano $238,000 and he received $375,000 by the school's athletic booster organization, the Wolfpack Club.

Some within the school saw Valvano and his program as an embarrassment, an exemplar of the despisement for academics and overemphasis on winning. Others, especially Wolfpack fans, saw Valvano as a scapegoat for institutional failures that were not Valvano's alone.

''Eighteen months ago, it probably would've been easier to walk away from this,'' Valvano said Monday. ''But I said then that I wanted to stay and be part of the solution. When all was said and done, I never tried to distance myself from accountability. It was an unfortunate experience, but at the same time, it's time to look forward.

''It is hard to read things that are written about you. The fact is that it was a major story. I'm not sure that anyone has gone through a more thorough examination. But I was not implicated. I take the responsibilty for the actions of others, but culpabilty and responsibilty are two different things.''

Valvano said his perspective from 23 years of coaching will translate well on television.

''I'm going to attempt to share my experience,'' he said. ''I want to dissect the game - both Xs and Os and how the coaches see it - but also how it intertwines with the university and the NCAA.

''I'd like to be entertaining. I think Dick Vitale has changed a great deal what an analyst does. Every game is an event to see what Dick does. Al McGuire was the first to bring what the coach felt. Billy Packer is very analytical. But you want to be yourself. I think there's a lot of humor and emotion in the game.''

Vitale and Keith Jackson will remain as an ABC team. Swanson said the pairs will work an equal number of games and that neither is considered superior to the other.

ESPN said Valvano will work both in the studio and as a game analyst. His schedule with the cable network has yet to be worked out.

OTTAWA (JUNE 4) UPI - Canada's political leaders, hoping to avert a breakaway by French-speaking Quebec, resumed talks Monday over a constitutional amendment that grants the province of Quebec special powers to promote its language and culture.

''Keeping a united Canada is the principle we are operating under,''

Alberta Premier Don Getty told reporters before entering the meeting. But Getty said the provincial leaders were no closer to their goal after a five-hour dinner meeting Sunday with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Three years ago, Mulroney and leaders of the 10 provinces negotiated the Meech Lake Accord, a proposed constitutional amendment that recognizes Quebec's mainly French-speaking population and empowers it to promote and protect the French language and culture.

Disagreement over those powers then arose, threatening the fragile and often hostile relationship between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province's distinct French society. Quebec will only sign the constitution if the Meech Lake Accord gains the required approval of 10 provincial legislatures before June 23 to be ratified.

Three smaller provinces - Newfoundland, Manitoba and New Brunswick - have refused to approve the accord on grounds Quebec would abuse its proposed new powers and use them to pass laws that would be a disadvantage to the English-speaking and other minorities in the province.

New Brunswick Premier Frank McKenna, whose provincial government opposes the amendment, confirmed the provinces would begin discussing their differences in detail Monday. McKenna is seeking a legally binding companion resolution to the constitutional amendment that would address concerns over the distinct society clause and Senate reforms.

But Quebec is adamant that the Meech Lake accord be approved in its present form.

The constitutional impasse has preoccupied Canadians for months. Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa has said the province will consider separation if the Meech Lake Accord fails. Public-opinion polls indicate most Quebecers and leaders in the business community would support separation.

The dissenting provinces also are seeking a guarantee that Canada's government-appointed Senate would be reformed along the lines of the U.S. Senate, with equal and elected representation from all provinces.

Such an institution would give smaller provinces the voice they lack in the elected House of Commons, where representation if based on population, giving Quebec the greatest presence.

Last week, Mulroney warned in Parliament that failure to approve the Meech Lake Accord would threaten the future of the country and send a damaging signal to the international community.

''It is time to build a unified country once and for all with Quebec,'' said Mulroney, who has personally vilified the leaders of the dissenting provinces.

One option being discussed at Sunday's dinner was a political statement setting out the premiers' vision of a reformed Senate rather than a legally binding companion resolution. But that is unlikely to satisfy the dissenting provinces because it would contain no guarantee the Senate would actually be reformed.

Another obstacle is the Meech Lake Accord's requirement that all provinces approve of future Senate changes. The dissenting provinces would prefer a more flexible formula. But Quebec, which would likely oppose a Senate in which it has the same representation as smaller provinces, insists it must have a veto over proposed changes.

Talk of separation is nothing new for Quebec. A 1980 referendum on separation, held after a decade of violence and debate on the issue, was rejected by a slim majority of ''non'' votes. In the referendum, the business community lobbied strongly against separation.

Today, English-speaking Canada appears more cynical about Quebec's desire to remain in Canada and is less ready to make concessions for the sake of unity.

Recent events in Quebec have only sharpened the cynicism. In Montreal, the Catholic School Commission is holding public hearings into its proposal to ban the use of languages other than French on school property.

Last year, the Quebec government ignored a Supreme Court ruling that struck down its language law, which requires all commercial signs to be written only in French.

The Quebec government instead enacted a new law that outdoor signs be in French only, although indoor signs could be in any language.

SEOUL, South Korea (JUNE 4) UPI - U.S. Ambassador Donald P. Gregg denied Monday there was any American role in a bloody 1980 pro-democracy uprising in Kwangju and rejected dissidents' charges of U.S. interference in South Korean politics.

Gregg's letter to the hard-line dissident National Democratic Alliance of Korea was a response to one the group sent to the embassy May 23 listing anti-American allegations.

The group blames the United States for the Kwangju tragedy on grounds it allowed South Korean troops under its operational control to quell the civil uprising in which nearly 200 people were killed.

The dissidents' letter, addressed to Secretary of State James Baker, also accused the United States of being behind the three-party merger in February that gave birth to a gigantic ruling party under President Roh Tae-woo.

''I read your letter with considerable sadness because you continue to misunderstand the roles of the United States in 1980,'' Gregg said. ''The Kwangju incident of 1980 was a tragedy for your country. Koreans killed Koreans.''

The ambassador reminded them the United States cooperated with an investigation of the incident by the Korean National Assembly and gave a full reply to all questions posed.

Gregg, attaching a copy of the reply to his letter, said the document ''clearly shows the United States supported democratization and non-violence in 1980.''

''The Kwangju incident was a Korean affair. Only Koreans can solve it. Replying to false allegations that the United States was reponsible only serves to delay the necessary healing of the wound,'' Gregg said.

The Kwangju revolt was sparked by a sweeping government crackdown on political opposition. Rebels held the city for nine days before army troops quashed it.

Gregg also said the charge that the United States directs South Korean politics ''is both false and insulting to your own society.''

''The success or failure of Korean democracy will depend on what Koreans do. Your organization professes to support democracy. If it does, then its efforts would be better directed at democratic activities and in taking responsibility for building democracy,'' Gregg said.

LONDON (JUNE 4) UPI - Stock prices closed slightly higher in quiet trading Monday on the London International stock exchange as investors looked to Wall Street for direction.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which surged 26.3 points Friday, closed up 7.6 points at 2,379.0. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 11.0 points to 1,893.4.

Volume amounted to around 430 million shares compared with 499 million shares changing hands on Friday.

Analysts noting the light volume said many institutional investors remained sidelined because of the Whit holiday in Europe.

On the economic front, the Central Statistical Office reported Britain's retail sales volume rose a revised 1.2 percent in April from March and was up 2.6 percent from April 1989.

In a seperate report, the government agency reported new consumer credit extended by finance houses, building societies, other specialist credit grantors and retailers totaled a seasonally adjusted $6.17 billion down slightly from $6.21 billion in March but up from $5.62 billion in April 1989.

Both reports had little impact on investors.

Analysts said the closely watched Financial Times 100-stock index, which bolted 105.8 points last week and has recently been inspired in part by peak performances on the Wall Street, lost some of its edge after the Wall Street opened.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Boots, the pharmaceutical company, gained 19 cents to $4.94 on speculation the company would merge two of its subsidiaries.

Rank Organization climbed 49 cents to $13.30 on hopes its bid for Mecca Leisure will be successful. Mecca eased 1 cent to $1.40 on talk of its rejection of the Rank bid.

In the insurance sector, C.E. Heath gained 26 cents to $8.81 in anticipation of higher results next week.

Elsewhere in Europe, financial markets were closed in West Germany, France the Netherlands, Switzerland and Sweden for the Whit holiday. Trading will resume on Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 4) UPI - Frederick Mellinger, who introduced naughty lingerie to post-World War II America through his Frederick's of Hollywood chain, died of complications of pneumonia. He was 76.

Mellinger, who died Saturday at his home in the Brentwood area, had also been suffering from Alzheimer's disease, said George Townson, chairman and president of Frederick's of Hollywood.

Mellinger, who often said, "Sex appeal is always in style," ran the firm until his retirement in 1984 and during his tenure popularized such styles as push-up bras, crotchless panties and G-string bikinis. "He created and nurtured a legend of glamorous lingerie for mainstream America," Townson said. "Very few people could have done what he did."

Mellinger, a native of the Lower East Side of New York City, began his career in the lingerie industry at the age of 14. Lying about his age, he was hired as a clerk at an "intimate apparel" firm in the garment district.

During World War II, Mellinger was stationed in the Midwest and, like millions of other GIs, he had a pinup of Betty Grable showing off her famous legs. He would use the photo to survey his Army friends about what kind of fashions they wanted for their wives and girlfriends and, taking his results back to New York, opened Frederick's Fifth Avenue in 1946, a mail-order business selling mostly black lingerie.

A year later, Mellinger moved his operation to Los Angeles and began selling lingerie from a small shop in Chinatown before moving to Hollywood. The famous Frederick's flagship store on Hollywood Boulevard - painted purple on the outside and cranberry and peach inside - opened in 1960.

Frederick's of Hollywood grew both through its mail-order business - with catalogs featuring barely clad models, sex toys and X-rated videos - and through its outlets, which first opened in the 1960s and grew to 164 by the late 1980s. Frederick's went public in 1972 and its stock is traded on the American Stock Exchange.

The dapper, mustachioed Mellinger attributed his success to his own sense of what men wanted. "I don't listen to Paris designers ... they don't dress women for men," he would say.

In the early 1980s, the company sales began to slump due in part to competition from the Victoria's Secret chain, which offered a softer, less provocative look. When Townson took over from Mellinger in 1984, Frederick's started toning down its racy fashions, opting for a more mainstream look. Its 1989 sales topped $80 million, with 37 percent of that in mail-order sales and the rest from its 164 stores.

Townson said that flaship store and the company's distribution facilities will be closed at noon Monday to allow employees to attend Mellinger's funeral services, which will be private.

He is survived by his widow, Harriet, a son, a daughter and five grandchildren.

MAPUTO, MOZAMBIQUE (JUNE 4) UPI - The International Committee of the Red Cross sought the release Monday of two Swiss delegates kidnapped by right-wing RENAMO guerrillas during a relief mission in the war-ravaged province of Zambezia, officials said.

Troops were fanning out across the central region following several tracks left after the abduction Friday, Mozambican authorities said.

ICRC headquarters in Geneva confirmed Brigitte Kehrer, 37, and Thierry Tribolet, 31, both Swiss nationals, were abducted in famine-stricken Ile district by RENAMO forces.

The delegates were returning with a relief convoy of eight trucks and a pickup after delivering clothing and food to the village of Nampevu, where government troops recently regained control.

The eight trucks returned safely but the pickup carrying Kehrer and Tribolet was later found burned. Authorities speculated the two had been abducted.

The convoy had no military escort and provincial authorities said the relief team ignored warnings that the area was unsafe for travel. The ICRC is the only relief agency among a dozen in Mozambique that admits to having regular contact with RENAMO.

The rebels have fought the socialist government in Maputo since shortly after independence from Portugal in 1975. They kidnapped three ICRC delegates and a local Red Cross woker in March 1989. These detainees were released two weeks later and the rebels said that abduction was a mistake.

Two more ICRC delegates are being held by kidnappers in Lebanon. In eight months, their captors have not made themselves or their demands known.

An ICRC official said the Geneva headquarters was in contact with RENAMO on the abduction, while the local Maputo office was working with Mozambican authorities.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Chile's new democratic government will continue the economic policies of the Pinochet dictatorship and will seek to regain U.S. trade preferences, the Chilean ambassador said Monday.

Patricio Silva Echenique also told a news conference that the government of President Patricio Aylwin will strive to have lifted restrictions on Chilean weapon purchases in the United States.

Aylwin, a Christian Democrat, was sworn in March 11 as the democratically elected president, succeeding the mititary regime that overthrew socialist President Salvador Allende in a bloody coup in 1973.

The new government will maintain strict fiscal, monetary and trade policies,which have made Chile a model of economic stability and growth in Latin America, Silva said.

''Prices will be absolutely free and and the main economic decisions are going to be taken by the market,'' the ambassador said. Such policies are the only way to make sure that ''resources will go to the private sector '' he added.

The ambassador said Chile depends upon exports of $9 billion to pay off its $16.5 billion foreign debt. About $1.5 billion of Chile's exports go to the United States.

An obstacle to expanding sales to the United States is Chile's exclusion from the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences, which reduces import tariffs. Chile was barred in 1987 as a result of the Pinochet government's restrictions on labor union activities.

Getting U.S. tariffs lowered is crucial for Chile to increase exports of new products such as methanol, Silva said.

Currently, Chilean methanol is subject to a 18 percent tariff in the United States, but if the nation regains trade preference status, the methanol tariff would be about 4 percent, the ambassador noted.

Other export lines that would benefit are those produced by small- and medium-scale Chilean industries.

Exclusion from the generalized system of preferences also means that Chile cannot benefit from the activities of Overseas Private Investment Corp., the U.S. government agency that provides guarantees for U.S. private investments abroad, according to Silva.

Taken together, the ambassador estimated the cost of these exclusions at $80 million to $120 million a year in trade and a similar amount in U.S. investments.

Silva said he will plead Chile's case with U.S. authorities in coming months and voiced his hope that his country will be reincorporated into the generalized system of preferenced before President Bush's expected visit to Chile in September.

To back up Chile's request to be reinstated in the U.S. system, Silva will present proof that his country now respects unions' rights to organize, strike and bargain for better wages and working conditions.

Chile will also seek U.S. lifting of the 1979 restrictions on access to the U.S. weapons market imposed by Congress in the wake of massive human rights violations.

Access to the U.S. weapons market will mean better competitive conditions and lower prices for Chilean military purchases, Silva said.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 4) UPI - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and other Israeli leaders Monday denounced Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's warning that Jewish emigration might be curtailed unless Israel stops emigrants from settling in the occupied territories.

The officials reiterated Israel's repeated claim that it is not government policy to direct the newcomers to the West Bank and Gaza Strip, the mostly Arab areas occupied by Israel since the 1967 Six-Day War. Only an insignificant number have made their homes there, the leaders said.

''It is regrettable that President Gorbachev has been misled by Arab propaganda,'' said Simcha Dinitz, chairman of the quasi-governmental Jewish Agency, which is involved in the settlement of immigrants.

''All the talk about Soviet Jewish immigrants settling in the territories is totally unfounded and is the result of Arab propaganda aimed at concealing their real objective, which is their total opposition to any immigration to Israel and to the continued existence of Israel,'' Dinitz told the Israel Association of Industrialists.

Shamir, speaking at the same meeting, rejected what he termed Soviet interference. He repeated Israel's longstanding position that Israeli citizens may live wherever they choose.

''We cannot accept limitations and impose limitations on this or the other category of settlers in the state of Israel, limitations which will dictate to them where it is permissible and where it is forbidden for them to go,'' Shamir said.

Dinitz said that, less than 0.6 percent, or 285, of the 49,000 Soviet Jews who have arrived in Israel since April 1989 settled in the occupied territories.

That figure does not, however, include Soviet immigrants who settle in the Jerusalem neighborhoods that were within Jordanian territory before the 1967 war and have since been annexed to Israel.

Israeli officials maintain that most of the Soviet Jews who have flooded Israel since Gorbachev relaxed emigration policy settle in the coastal metropolitan areas surrounding Tel Aviv and Haifa.

But according to U.S. calculations, which include the annnexed areas of Jerusalem, about 10 percent of the new immigrants are settling in occupied areas.

Some 130,000 Soviet Jews are expected to move to Israel this year, compared with fewer than 13,000 last year, leaving Palestinians worried many new emigrants will settle in the occupied territories and mostly Arab East Jerusalem. That would complicate any territorial concessions Palestinians might receive in a Middle East peace accord.

During a joint news conference Sunday with President Bush that ended their four-day Washington summit, the Soviet leader said his country might reconsider the issuance of exit permits unless Israel guaranteed the newcomers would not settle in occupied territory.

Gorbachev said he was criticized by Egypt and Syria for permitting the large-scale emigration of Soviet Jews who end up in the occupied territories.

The Soviet leader said that, if Israel continued to allow the settlements,

''we must give further thought to it in terms of what we can do with issuing permits for exit.''

''And some people are raising the matter in these terms in the Soviet Union: As long as there are no assurances from the Israelis that this is not going to be done by them, to postpone issuing permits for exit,'' Gorbachev said.

Foreign Minister Moshe Arens said Monday he does not expect any change in Soviet emigration policy, telling the Knesset Committee on Foreign Affairs and Defense that the newly concluded U.S.-Soviet trade agreement is contingent on continue free emigration.

Secretary of State James Baker said Sunday that, while the United States opposed the new settlements in occupied land, it does not believe the matter should be tied to the rights of Jews to leave the Soviet Union.

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 4) UPI - The Solidarity newspaper Monday criticized Lech Walesa, the movement's founder, for sacking a close associate as though he were running an ''absolute monarchy.''

The editorial blast came on the first anniversay of Solidarity winning national elections that led to its forming a non-communist government in Poland.

Walesa last Friday dismissed Henryk Wujec, a leading union activist and secretary of the Civic Committee, a group of labor activists and intellectuals led by Walesa.

''The way Wujec was (fired) from his job could only take place in a monarchy, and only absolute monarchy,'' the Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper said.

It speculated that Walesa hit at Wujec because he did not support the union leader's abortive bid for the state presidency a few weeks ago.

A statement from Walesa's press office in the northern seaport of Gdansk said Wujec was dismissed because he was linked with the Solidarity parliamentary caucus, which has goals and aims that differ at times from those of the union.

The Solidarity caucus is led by Bronislaw Geremek, who does not see eye to eye with Walesa on the government of Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

The developments have generated specualtion that Walesa felt Geremek exerted too much influence over Wujek.

The criticism of Walesa comes a year after Solidarity won by a landslide in parliamentary elections, leading to its takeover of the government three months later.

Trybuna, the newspaper of the former Communist Party, attacked the Solidarity administration on the anniversary, saying it is becoming a monopoly political force.

The world can witness a parodox of history in Poland, Trybuna said, because ''the force which took over power under the slogans of freedom and democracy does not permit democracy to develop.''

As the result of the win over the communist regime in last year's parliamentary elections, Solidarity formed a government and appointed Mazowiecki as the first non-communist head of government in Eastern Europe.

The convergence of views by Trybuna and Gazeta on the crisis of the fledgling democracy in Poland was taken by political analysts as a signal of growing conflict inside the union and the government over how to run the country.

Geremek, in an interview carried by the official news agency PAP, said the development of democracy carries many dangers, including populism, nationalism and ''a temptation to rule with a strong hand.''

It was a clear reference to Walesa, who said recently if he were president he would accelerate political reforms by passing presidential decrees.

Gazeta said Walesa recently vowed to declare war on the Solidarity government because he felt it has failed to speed up political reforms. He said Walesa got rid of Wujec for disapproving of his plans.

On May 13, Walesa accused the premier of ''manipulating'' democracy and suggested he would withdraw his support.

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 4) UPI - A poll indicated Monday that a plurality of voters believe novelist-candidate Mario Vargas Llosa won Peru's first televised presidential debate, a confrontation that could influence this weekend's runoff election.

A widely respected polling organization, Grupo Apoyo S.A., said that out of a sampling of 1,080 Peruvians in Lima and six large cities, 48 percent said Vargas Llosa was the winner, while 37 percent said his rival, Alberto Fujimori, 51, won the debate.

Another 12 percent of the sample called the debate a tie while 3 percent had no opinion.

The two candidates debated 2 1/2 hours Sunday night in their only one-on-one encounter before the June 10 runoff election.

The two men were the top finishers in the April 8 first-round election, when Vargas Llosa won 27.6 percent of the vote to 24.6 percent for Fujimori.

Until the debate, the two candidates, according to public opinion polls, had been running neck-and-neck.

In April, polls favored Fujimori, who opposes so-called ''shock'' treatment to control inflation. In recent weeks, Vargas Llosa, who advocates reducing the centralized government and stimulating a market economy, pulled up in the polls, which most recently have shown him running about even.

In the debate, Vargas Llosa displayed a good academic grasp of the technicalities of economics and government - a characteristic that some pollsters say can also hurt his mass appeal - and he answered questions without notes, while Fujimori used texts as an aid and spoke more in generalities than specifics.

Vargas Llosa hit hard at Fujimori's support for the incumbent Apra Party government of President Alan Garcia, who is now unpopular because of runaway inflation and a generalized economic crisis.

Fujimori promised to combat inflation ''without lowering salaries.''

Vargas Llosa, who is leading a rightist coalition, vowed to lead the war against political terrorism, the narcotics trade and corruption.

Fujimori criticized his opponent for promising to personally lead the campaign against the Shining Path guerrillas and other terrorists and proposed that ''solidarity'' be built between the armed forces and ''the people.''

In a personal attack, Fujimori quoted the novelist as admitting he once used drugs, which Vargas Llosa said he did only as an an experiment ''a couple of times'' when he was 14.

The debate ended on a controversial note when Fujimori displayed a headline of the newspaper Ojo that said Vargas Llosa won the debate.

Fujimori said the headline was a trick to mislead voters since it was written before the debate began.

The director of Ojo, Fernando Viana, denied that he had put the front page of his newspaper in type before the debate ended and said Fujimori displayed a falsified front page.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker headed for Europe Monday and a series of meetings with his Eastern and Western European counterparts, including another session with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Baker and Shevardnadze will attend a 35-nation gathering in Copenhagen of the foreign ministers of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. CSCE, made up of those nations that signed the Helsinki Agreement in 1975, has gained new importance as a forum for dealing with the swiftly changing situation in Central Europe, including the forthcoming unification of Germany.

At their Washington summit last week, President Bush and President Mikhail Gorbachev were unable to agree on a compromise formula on the military future of Germany, and so they turned it over to their foreign ministers, asking them to come up with possibilities to bridge the Soviet and American positions.

The United States insists on a unified Germany remaining a full member of NATO, while the Soviet government insists that is not acceptable to a country like the Soviet Union, which suffered devastating losses from two German aggressions in this century.

After the meeting in Denmark Baker will fly to Turnburry, Scotland, for a meeting of the NATO foreign ministers, where he will report on his talks with Shevardnadze and on last week's Bush-Gorbachev summit.

Shevardnadze and Baker are also expected to discuss a revival of the stalled talks between NATO and the Warsaw Pact on Open Skies, the U.S. proposal for opening up the air space of the 23 nations of both pacts to military reconnaissance flights by planes from the other military bloc.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - The racketeering trial of former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos, who collapsed in court last week, was put off for one week Monday while she recuperates from a stomach inflammation.

Judge John Keenan told lawyers he would tell the jury Tuesday that the presentation of evidence would be delayed until June 12, according to attorneys in the case and court sources.

Wearing a black dress covered with a black shawl, Marcos left the New York Hospital-Cornell University Medical Center on the Upper East Side in a wheelchair shortly before noon Sunday.

A few feet away from her black Mercedes sedan, the heavily made-up Marcos stood up and walked slowly to the car. "I feel much better," she whispered as she sat in the back seat of the sedan.

Marcos, 60, collapsed Thursday during her racketeering trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, spitting up blood before she was carried from the courtroom on a stretcher. Her face pale and eyes closed, she was loaded into an ambulance with an oxygen mask over her mouth.

Marcos is being tried on charges that she and her late husband, former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, conspired to buy New York real estate, art and jewelry with $222 million stolen from their homeland.

After Marcos's collapse, Judge John Keenan recessed her trial until Tuesday. A Marcos family spokesman, Roger Peyuan, said doctors would suggest Marcos get a few more days rest, however.

Doctors diagnosed Marcos as suffering from erosive gastritis, an acid-related stomach condition that is not life-threatening, said Cialone, a spokeswoman for New York Hospital-Cornell University Medical Center.

The condition, in which the stomach lining erodes, requires intravenous medication to suppress production of acid. Cialone said Marcos's condition had stabilized by Sunday and she was released into the care of her personal physician. The incident on Thursday was the third in which Marcos, who suffers from high blood pressure, has collapsed in court since her trial began April 3.

Dressed in her customary black, in mourning for her husband, Marcos had been sitting at the witness table listening to her trial lawyer, Gerry Spence, question an associate of her co-defendant, former Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi.

After Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella began his questioning, Marcos suddenly slumped over, her face flat on the table, as spectators gasped.

A Marcos attorney, John Bartko, said when Marcos collapsed, she murmured, "No, no, no." Asked what she meant, he replied, "She wanted the trial to go on. She didn't want this to happen to her."

(JUNE 4) UPI - President Bush opened a Cabinet meeting today by saying he was ''very pleased'' with the results of the superpower summit. The meeting began with prolonged applause from members of the Cabinet. Gorbachev and Bush reached agreement on several issues, but were UNable to resolve issues concerning the military role of a re-united Germany and breakaway Baltic states.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl says the superpower summit has paved a smoother road to German re-unification. Kohl says he welcomes accords to reduce strategic nuclear weapons and ban chemical weapons. And although presidents Bush and Gorbachev stalemated on the thorny issue of a unified Germany's alliance, Kohl says their meeting was still a great ''psychological'' success.

The Gorbachev tour of San Francisco turns nostalgic as the Soviet leader and his wife, Raisa, meet with former President Reagan and his wife, Nancy. The Reagan-Gorbachev reunion at the Soviet Consul General's residence was delayed this morning without explanation. The two couples will chat over coffee before Gorbachev tours California's Silicon Valley, seeking high-tech and investment help for the ailing Soviet economy.

The Labor Department says American worker productivity is at its worst level since the 1981 recession. The government report shows productivity sank two-point-seven percent in the first quarter of 1990... with retail and wholesale business being hit hardest. The data shows that inflation problems exist because business costs... like wages and benefits... rose in many parts of the economy, while output slacked off.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry today showed up smiling for his first day in court. The mayor encountered a protest by the crime-fighting group Guardian Angels on his way into the courthouse. Barry faces 14 counts of perjury, cocaine possession and conspiracy to possess cocaine.

Atheist Madalyn O'Hair attacked today's Supreme Court ruling that upheld a law allowing religious groups to meet in public schools. In a case brought by Omaha, Nebraska, schools, the high court upheld the 1984 law with only Justice John Paul Stevens dissenting. O'Hair says the ruling means- in her words- ''intellectually immature youngsters may be indoctrinated with religion and this is perfectly acceptable and must be paid for by tax dollars.''

Also today, the high court ruled that state bar associations canNOT give compulsory dues to political parties against an individual member's wishes. The case is one in a series dealing with so-called ''integrated unions'' which collect dues for both administrative and political purposes.

Federal investigators have smashed a Mafia drug ring in New York which they say is responsible for killing as many as seven people. CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 4) UPI - NASA is gearing up to haul the shuttle Columbia back to its hangar for repairs pending a final test Wednesday to locate a fuel leak that could delay launch to August, after a July mission by another spacecraft, officials said Monday.

But NASA managers are debating a variety of options and no official decisions are expected until after the test Wednesday on the slim chance engineers find a problem that can be fixed at the launch pad. But few managers held out any hope such an easy-to-fix leak would be found. "I think they've pretty much resigned themselves to rolling back," said a NASA engineer who asked not to be named.

Following a series of fruitless tests last week, engineers worked through the weekend conducting still more checks to pinpoint a fuel leak that spewed hydrogen gas into Columbia's engine compartment last Tuesday, disrupting the ship's countdown and delaying launch indefinitely.

After pumping helium through Columbia's main engine fuel line plumbing

Saturday and Sunday, technicians once again were unable to locate the leak, which apparently only shows up in the presence of supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel, chilled to minus 423 degrees Fahrenheit.

Officials strongly suspect the leak is located in the area where the shuttle's primary 17-inch-wide fuel line butts up against the belly of the orbiter. A critical seal in the 17-inch "quick disconnect" fitting is one likely culprit, although the problem could involve internal mechanisms.

The trouble for NASA is that engineers cannot fix the quick disconnect fitting without first unhooking Columbia from its external tank. And that can only be done using a giant overhead crane in the Vehicle Assembly Building 3 1/2 miles from the launch pad.

Such a move would delay the shuttle's launch until at least the first week in July. Depending on the nature of the problem, the ship could be grounded until early August after a July military flight by the shuttle Atlantis, according to internal NASA planning schedules.

To resolve the issue once and for all, engineers plan to pump liquid hydrogen back into Columbia's external tank starting at 8 a.m. Wednesday. The frigid propellant then will be circulated through the shuttle's fuel lines, duplicating the conditions present when the leak first showed up.

Because the leak has not been found in a battery of room-temperature tests engineers are convinced it must be in the critical 17-inch disconnect system, which is where the fuel lines and external tank separate from the shuttle after the ship reaches orbit.

NASA managers are debating a variety of options for what to do in the likely event Columbia is hauled back to the VAB for repairs. If Columbia's problems can be easily fixed in the VAB, the veteran spaceplane could be rolled back to the pad and launched in the first week of July. In that case, Atlantis would be launched around July 30.

But if Columbia has to be hauled back to its hangar for more extensive repairs, sources said, Atlantis would be next in line for launch. Here is one launch schedule option under study by NASA, assuming Columbia must be rolled off launch pad 39A:

- June 11: Columbia is hauled back to the VAB.
- July 11: Atlantis blasts off around 8 a.m. on a secret military flight.
- Aug. 9: Columbia is launched almost three months behind schedule.
- Oct. 5: The shuttle Discovery carries the European-built Ulysses solar probe into space.
- Oct. 30: Atlantis carries the Gamma Ray Observatory satellite into orbit.
- Dec. 1: Columbia is launched on a Spacelab life sciences research flight.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Despite a May 31 press release conceding defeat in its battle to unseat the board of directors of Kollmorgen Corp., Vernitron Corp. now says it may have won at least part of the proxy fight.

Stephen Bershad, chairman and chief executive officer for Vernitron, said in an inteview Monday that a crucial Kollmorgen stockholder has apparently voted for at least some of the six Vernitron nominees proposed at Kollmorgen's May 31 annual meeting.

Bershad said that Mario Gabelli, a New York money manager who owns more than 16 percent of Kollmorgen stock, has reportedly voted in favor of at least part of Vernitron's slate.

Ellen Horing, vice president of Gabelli & Co., declined to comment on whether Gabelli voted for Kollmorgen's slate or Vernitron's.

Horing said that Gabelli, in voting, ''just tried to do what was right for our shareholders,'' alluding to stockholders of GAMCO Investors Inc., a Gabelli investment management affiliate.

Previously, Gabelli had said he might abstain from voting at the Kollmorgen annual meeting.

A final tally of the voting will be ready in the next few days, according to Bershad.

Bershad said that the rumored Gabelli vote had been partly responsible for Vernitron's decision to reduce its stake in Kollmorgen's shares outstanding.

Vernitron sold 77,000 of its 593,700 Kollmorgen shares on May 31 and June 1, reducing its stake to 4.8 percent from 5.5 percent of Kollmorgen 10.7 million common shares outstanding.

The stock sale, announced in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing released Monday, allows Vernitron to avoid SEC public disclosure requirements for groups or individuals that hold over 5 percent of a company's outstanding shares.

''I don't know who won the proxy (battle) and that is another reason why we just think it is better to be below the radar here with our holdings,'' Bershad said.

''We are in the process of evaluating alternatives and I just don't want to have to amend a Schedule 13D everytime we embark on a different program '' he added.

Bershad also indicated that even if Vernitron had lost the proxy battle, he was not ready to end his battle for control of Kollmorgen.

''Regardless of whether we won or lost, there are obviously alternatives we can pursue and there are still a number of shareholders out there that would like to see something happen and who might be looking for some leadership other than from Kollmorgen,'' the Vernitron executive said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) UPI - The Soviet Parliament passed a law Monday that gives cooperatives and individual businesses the same legal status as state-owned companies.

The new law, which takes effect Jan. 1, 1991, gives all businesses more control over their profits and calls for a uniform tax system for businesses.

''The law provides equal conditions for economic activities of enterprises of various types - state-run, lease-holding, collective, cooperative and individual,'' the official Tass news agency said.

Parliament passed the law on enterprises as President Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reform adviser struggled to defend planned price increases that are another part of the perestroika reforms.

Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin acknowledged in an interview with the official Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, Monday that Soviets' living standards will likely decline next year but dared anyone who thinks they have a better economic plan to ''come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Abalkin accused critics of the government's strategy for overhauling the battered Soviet economy of trying to incite crisis for political gain.

He said the controversial proposal to increase prices is a ''thankless, dirty job'' necessary for moving the country toward free enterprise.

''Yes, real volume of consumption will not increase all at once,'' Abalkin said in defending the economic program Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov introduced in Parliament May 24. ''Starting from Jan. 1, 1991, the standard of living will not rise and may even decrease.''

But, noting that there is no alternative proposal to save the Soviet economy on the table, Abalkin said: ''If somebody has such a variant, let him not hide in dark corners but come into the open with it for the public to judge.''

Under the strategy to create a ''modified market economy,'' which must be approved by the legislature, the now-subsidized consumer price of bread and other grain products would triple July 1, with other prices rising Jan. 1.

Abalkin said the plan has three main elements: ''free price formation'' and competition between producers, ''economic regulators'' including new tax, financial and credit systems, and a welfare network of social protection.

Announcement of the program last month set off a wave of panic buying across the Soviet Union, forcing authorities in Moscow and other cities to introduce a passport system limiting purchases to local residents.

Radical lawmakers have sharply criticized the econonic-reform strategy, saying it is too cautious and has few concrete provisions beyond burdensome price hikes.

''There remain forces interested in the worsening of the economic situation because any improvement would lead to an increase of confidence in the government and mean the collapse of their political ambitions,'' Abalkin said in an uncharacteristically bitter counterattack.

Important regions of the vast country have indicated they may implement their own economic plans regardless of what the central government does.

Renegade Communist Boris Yeltsin, the popular newly elected Russian federation president, has criticized the Kremlin's program and said his giant republic should puruse a separate strategy.

The parliaments in the Ukraine and Byelorussia, two of the Soviet Union's most productive republics, have formally rejected the central plan.

The city of Moscow on Saturday established the country's first commodities exchange in a bid to lure people away from the black market and provide them with badly needed goods.

''As a human being, I can understand thinking there is an easy and quick way'' to solve the nation's economic crisis, Abalkin said. ''But as an expert and a member of the government, I have no right to indulge in harebrained schemes or to just smooth things over.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - A national consumer organization assailed credit life insurance policies Monday as a ''ripoff'' that overcharge Americans by nearly $1 billion every year.

The policies are sold along with loans on cars and other expensive items and promise to pay off the debt if the borrower dies.

''Credit life is not needed by most borrowers,'' the Consumer Federation of America said. ''Most consumers are already protected by other life insurance policies or by other assets.''

''The families of those with neither may have higher priorities than repaying the debt if the borrower dies,'' the federation added.

Overcharges appeared to be especially serious in the Southeast, with the protection costing from $155 in Maine to $674 in Alabama and Louisiana on a $10,000, 48-month auto loan at 12 percent interest, the group said.

In many cases, ''borrowers either don't know they've purchased the product think its required, or are manipulated in other ways by sellers,'' said Stephen Brobeck, executive director of the federation.

''That is why many banks, finance companies, and car dealers sell credit life to over 90 percent of those financing installment purchases,'' Brobeck said.

In a study entitled ''Credit Life Insurance: The Nation's Worst Insurance Ripoff,'' the organization said 43 percent of the $2.1 billion in credit life premiums collected in 1988 was paid out in claims.

''Since this loss ratio should be at least 75 percent, policyholders were overcharged $910 million in this year,'' the study said.

''The incentive to lenders is that they receive generous commissions from credit life insurance companies,'' it said. ''These commissions can exceed 70 percent of premiums, which encourages lenders to select high-priced products.''

The federation advises consumers to purchase sufficient amounts of term insurance from reputable life insurance companies to cover their obligations after they die. For about $125-$150 a year, a person in their 30s in good health can get a term policy paying $150,000 in death benefits.

A spokesman for the life insurance industry offered mixed advice on the matter.

''We know credit life insurance has become an increasingly small part of the life insurance business,'' said Benno Isaacs of the American Council of Life Insurance in Washington.

''Many banks, however, sell credit life insurance and the subtle pressure they can place on the consumer is the reason we think banks should not be allowed to sell insurance,'' Isaacs added.

Nonetheless, if consumers want credit life insurance, Isaacs said, ''We recommend they shop around.''

NEWARK, NJ (JUNE 4) UPI - A hydrochloric acid leak at a chemical plant halted service on Amtrak's busy Northeast Corridor rail line and two commuter lines for almost two hours Monday, delaying thousands of riders.

About 2,000 gallons of acid spilled from a tank at the Donner & Smith Chemical Co. when a seam burst. Officials said the chemical was quickly contained and apparently little went into the air.

The Fire Department's hazardous materials unit ordered rail service shut down as a precaution at 10 a.m., 90 minutes after the leak was reported. The company is in an industrial area adjacent to two rail lines near Newark International Airport.

Two men, one a truck driver making a delivery to a neighboring company and the other a worker in the neighborhood, were treated at a hospital and released within a few hours.

Sue Martin, an Amtrak spokeswoman, said at least six trains on the line connecting New York with Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington were delayed for up to two hours. During the morning, Amtrak normally runs two trains an hour each way.

An extra southbound train was added between Philadelphia and Washington to relieve the crush.

About 2,000 riders on NJ Transit's Northeast Corridor, North Jersey Coast and Raritan Valley lines were also inconvenienced. NJ Transit spokeswoman Sandra Check said buses were brought in to carry riders to Newark.

The leak began as a truck driver finished loading a triple tank at Donner & Smith, Police Detective Daniel Collins said. The fire department used foam to contain the acid and prevent its vaporizing.

Hydrocholoric acid in its liquid form can cause severe burns and can cause lung damage if vaporizes, said John Hagerty, a spokesman for the Department of Environmental Protection. But he said air samples by the DEP showed little impact from the spill.

Rail service was restored shortly before noon.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - President Bush gave the Cabinet a rosy report Monday on his summit with Mikhail Gorbachev while the White House acknowledged a veiled Soviet threat on Jewish emigration could affect strides toward expanded trade.

''I am pleased with the results,'' Bush told reporters before a Cabinet review of the talks, ''and I think the reception from the American people was rather clear. There are some problems. We never said there wouldn't be. We had a chance to describe the problems.''

Bush reported ''very, very positive'' reaction from U.S. allies after conferring by telephone Sunday with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Other allied leaders were briefed through diplomatic channels.

Kohl predicted in Bonn that the summit, despite its failure to narrow U.S.-Soviet differences over security questions raised by the unification of Germany, would improve conditions for that process to go forward.

''We'll have to wait and see what the response is from around the world,'' he said, ''but so far our experts have been very pleased.''

Bush also praised the results of the summit during an Oval Office photo session with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who told him, ''I hope that we take advantage of what you have achieved.''

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush's post-summit consultations included a call to former President Reagan, who was updated to prepare for his own meeting Monday with Gorbachev.

Though the summit concluded with warm talk of goodwill, personal rapport and greater trust and cooperation, Fitzwater admitted that Gorbachev's warning to Israel on settlements in the occupied territories could become ''a problem.''

At news conference Sunday with Bush, Gorbachev suggested the Soviets might stop issuing exit visas to Jews if Israel did not stop relocating them in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Gorbachev was joined by Bush in opposing the immigrant settlements, but the prospect of retaliation loomed as a threat to a planned expansion of U.S.-Soviet trade relations.

Gorbachev returned home with a landmark trade agreement designed to spur U.S. business involvement in the Soviet Union. Bush, however, conditioned its implementation - and an offer of coveted most-favored-nation trade status - on the promised enactment of liberalized Soviet emigration laws.

While uncertain of how serious the Gorbachev threat should be viewed, Fitzwater acknowledged any retreat from the free emigration of Soviet Jews would complicate the granting of new trade privileges to the Soviets.

''I don't want to start linking these things,'' he said, ''but yes, we view it with concern generally because we want open emigration.''

With the German issue foremost among the questions left unanswered by the summit, Bush will meet at the White House on Friday with Kohl and next Monday with East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere.

The two German leaders will be on separate unofficial visits. Symbolic of the dizzying change transforming the postwar political order, de Maiziere will be the first East German prime minister invited to the White House.

During a visit to Moscow in late April, de Maiziere said a united Germany could remain in NATO if the alliance altered its ''strategy and structure.'' He admitted ''a difference of opinion'' with Gorbachev on that matter.

The role of NATO, its military makeup and its future relations with the Warsaw Pact are among the issues that came into play during summit discussions on how to assuage Soviet security concerns about German membership in NATO.

Also on the table is the role of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which the Soviets would like to become a principal forum for East-West diagloue and the United States wants kept secondary to NATO.

Although the Soviets have called for new institutions to manage the security of Europe, Fitzwater reaffirmed U.S. policy that existing institutions - possibly with revised missions - can adequately assume those responsibilities.

Fitzwater said Bush told Kohl and Thatcher he tried to convince Gorbachev ''that Germany should not be a threat to the Soviet Union, that they have earned their place in the new Europe'' and that its place in NATO ''would be a stabilizing influence.''

While drawing some degree of encouragement from Gorbachev's agreement that the United States, along with the Soviet Union, must remain in Europe, Fitzwater repeated Bush's assessment that the summit had produced ''a better understanding of our positions'' but ''no breakthroughs.''

''The German question is clearly going to be resolved over a period of time in an incremental kind of debate and consideration,'' he said. ''It's not going to be resolved in any dramatic announcement either from us or from the Soviet Union unilaterally.''

Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze are set to pick up where the summit discussions of Germany left off in talks this week at a CSCE conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

BEIJING (JUNE 4) UPI - Foreign reporters and the U.S. government filed protests Monday, accusing government security forces of beating and detaining journalists while they covered the tense first anniversary of China's crackdown on the democracy movement.

Accounts of serious brutality and detentions of reporters and technical crews reported by Western news organizations through Sunday night and into Monday were collected by U.S. Embassy officials.

Many reporters said troops and paramilitary People's Armed Police brandished pistols and AK-47 assault rifles at traffic checkpoints in an attempt to seal much of Beijing's university district, long a hotbed of Chinese dissent.

At the State Department in Washington, spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler condemned Chinese harassment of and threats against foreign newsmen. She said the U.S. government had protested the action in Beijing and in Washington.

Most of the brutality was reported outside Beijing University, where more than 1,000 students staged a raucous protest late Sunday to mark the first anniversary of the army assault on Tiananmen Square that crushed the democracy movement. Beijing University was a key staging ground of the student-led movement for greater freedom that was suppressed last June 3-4 with serious loss of life.

The president of the Beijing Foreign Correspondents' club, Jim Munson of Canadian Television, said he was still gathering accounts of mistreatment and brutality and would file a formal protest on behalf of all the club's members.

"I have every intent to protest to the Foreign Ministry against these beatings and unnecessary detentions of foreign journalists who have a right to cover news in an open city called Beijing," Munson said.

Los Angeles Times correspondent Dave Holley protested to the Foreign Ministry Monday that he and his wife, Fumio Asahi, were seriously beaten by paramilitary police outside Beijing University. Asahi said soldiers beat her with the butt of an automatic rifle, leaving welts on her back.

The British news agency Reuters sent what correspondent William Kazer called "a nasty note" to the Foreign Ministry protesting several instances of mistreatment by police.

Reuter photographer Richard Ellis said security forces kicked and beat him near Tiananmen Square and smashed his camera. Security forces roughed up CBS News photographer Brad Simpson and slightly damaged his camera as he tried to film the beating of Ellis. Kazer and fellow Reuter correspondent Guy Dinmore reported being detained for more than 30 minutes outside the Great Hall of the People on Tiananmen Square.

ABC News filed a strong protest with China's ambassador in Washington after Beijing bureau chief Todd Carrel and his camera operator reported being detained for several hours and being forced to sign an apology.

Four European free-lance reporters were detained for three hours early Monday for covering the Beijing University demonstration without accreditation as journalists. Two American students were detained for similar reasons but released.

BEIJING (JUNE 4) UPI - Armed soldiers beat onlookers and threatened reporters late Monday at Beijing University, attempting to prevent a second night of defiant student protests exactly a year after Chinese troops crushed the student-led democracy movement.

Troops armed with AK-47 assault rifles used truncheons to beat two African students from Burundi in the 11 p.m. incident at the south gate of the walled campus, where worried officials had met through the day to assess Sunday night's apparently spontaneous demonstration.

Tiananmen Square, the heart of last year's demonstrations for greater freedom, was closed for the fourth straight day, this time for official driver safety training in advance of the Beijing Asian Games in September.

Police cordoned off the square's north plaza and kept pedestrians away from the Monument to the People's Heroes, the obelisk that became headquarters for the student-led protests that Chinese troops violently crushed last June 3-4.

An American television crew witnessed police hauling off a man from the square for an unknown offense, but otherwise the capital was reported calm Monday amid heavier than usual security.

Police roadblocks blanketed the city soon after nightfall, blocking all routes to the university district in northwest Beijing. One motorist said she was stopped seven times during an 11-mile drive across town and was turned away from Beijing University.

More than 100 Chinese onlookers and 15 journalists were milling outside the south gate when a convoy of helmeted security forces roared up to the group and ordered them at gunpoint to leave.

A Canadian reporter said several aggressive soldiers waved AK-47 assault rifles in his face to drive home the point.

University officials held an emergency meeting to discuss Sunday night's noisy march through campus by more than 1,000 students, who pelted police with rocks and bottles from dormitory windows. Bottle-tossing has come to symbolize contempt for senior leader Deng Xiaoping, whose name sounds like the Chinese term for ''little bottle.''

One student said department heads visited Beijing University dormitories to warn students that the ''consequences would be great'' if they protested again.

There was no word on whether any students had been detained for Sunday's raucous protest. The Beijing Public Security Bureau and the university foreign affairs office refused to answer inquiries.

Bottle-tossing protests at Qinghua and People's universities prompted uniformed police to enter both campuses, but students did not dare to demonstrate.

Qinghua students rained bottles on a procession of police on motorcycles, hitting at least one officer, witnesses said. People's University students dropped white paper flowers, which they said were meant to mourn those killed in Beijing last year. By morning, paper flowers blanketed the dorm grounds.

The official news agency Xinhua took the unusual step of reporting the Beijing University demonstration, and suggested that ''many foreign students'' were among the instigators.

In an editorial in Monday's People's Daily, the official Communist Party newspaper, the government acknowledged the anniversary and warned that ''stability is above everything.''

PARIS (JUNE 4) UPI - Second seed Monica Seles, insisting she is less than pleased with her form, swept the final 11 games Monday against Laura Gildemeister to advance to the quarterfinals of the French Open.

Gabriela Sabatini, the fourth seed suffering through a disappointing season, was eliminated by No. 11 Jana Novotna, 6-4, 7-5. After overcoming a 5-1 deficit in the second set to draw even at 5-5, Sabatini had her serve broken for the eighth time.

Seles, who made her Grand Slam debut at in Paris a year ago at the age of 15, reaching the semifinals, could face 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati in this year's semis.

After falling behind 4-1 against Gildemeister, the last woman to defeat her three months ago, Seles overwhelmed the 26-year-old Peruvian, 6-4, 6-0. Seles yielded merely four points in the second set, which she cleaned up in 16 minutes.

In Tuesday's quarterfinals, Seles plays sixth seed Manuela Maleeva, against whom she has yet to drop a set in five meetings, and the unseeded Capriati goes against No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez.

''The last two months I've been playing really well, feeling and controlling the ball very well, something which I haven't been doing too well here,'' said Seles, a Yugoslav who now lives in Florida. ''I have been able to get through a couple of tough matches, so I'm hoping that I'll slowly start getting my form and my game back together.

''I think today I was playing better and who knows, maybe my game will be even better tomorrow. With the second week starting, I'm starting to get used to the courts and the surroundings.''

Two more men's seeds were upset by non-seeded players. Frenchman Henri Leconte, a wild-card entry, scored a popular 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 2-6, 6-3 victory over No. 8 Andrei Chesnokov, and Jonas Svensson of Sweden defeated No. 15 Guillermo Perez-Roldan, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Leconte, who will play Svensson in the quarterfinals, now has a 6-0 career record in five-setters at the French Open.

Completing the quarterfinal bracket with victories were seventh seed

Thomas Muster and two unseeded players, Goran Ivanisevic and Thierry Champion. Muster beat No. 10 Martin Jaite, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3, 6-2, and 18-year-old Ivanisevic ousted Niclas Kroon, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

Champion, a qualifier ranked No. 191 in the world, fought off double match point in the fourth set and went on to upset Karel Novacek, 6-3, 4-6, 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3.

Four of the eight men's quarterfinalists are unseeded, and only three of the top 10 seeds - No. 3 Andre Agassi, No. 4 Andres Gomez and Muster - have survived this far.

Even after losing her serve in the 11th game of the second set, Sabatini had a break point in the 12th game. But from deuce she netted an easy backhand to give Novotna her third match point. Novotna converted this one when Sabatini's backhand hit near the top of the net and bounced back.

''It was just a bad day today,'' said the 20-year-old Argentine, who was bothered by the wind at Center Court. ''I didn't feel very comfortable playing. I was hitting the ball too late. From the beginning I didn't feel very good playing my game.''

In the third game of the second set, Novotna fell near the baseline while running to her left. The match was halted for five minutes while a trainer taped Novotna's right ankle.

When play continued at deuce, Novotna completed the service break, and in the next game Sabatini gave away four consecutive points with unforced errors.

There were seven breaks in the first eight games of the match as Novotna built leads of 4-0 and 5-1.

Novotna said she let up in the second set after blowing two match points at 5-1.

''I relaxed mentally and Gabriela took advantage of it,'' she said. ''I'm still ahead 5-2, so I felt if I don't do it now I can do it later. But then Gaby started playing much better and suddenly it was 5-all.''

Gildemeister broke Seles in the fourth game, then saved two break points against her to take a 4-1 lead. But she was unable to win another game in the Court One match.

Gildemeister, from Peru, double-faulted on break point to open the second set, and Seles closed out the second game with a pair of aces.

Leconte, after allowing a two-set lead to evaporate, won the first seven points of the fifth set, but allowed a triple break point in the second game to slip away.

The 26-year-old left-hander, ranked 33rd in the world after falling to No. 161 early this year, gained the only break of the set in the eighth game. He went up 15-40 on a forehand volley at the net and followed with his third service winner of the game.

''He can win unbelievable points, but he can lose them too,'' said Chesnokov, ranked No. 10. ''My problem was that when he went to the net, I was in a rush.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The productivity of American workers plunged 2.7 percent in the first quarter of the year in the worst showing since the recession of 1981, the Labor Department said Monday.

The data - far worse than expected by private analysts - indicates inflation remains a serious threat because business costs, such as wages and benefits, increased in many sectors of the economy while output dropped.

''It was sort of depressing, but I don't want to overstate it,'' said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust in Chicago. ''When the economy slows down you get poor productivity performance.''

Retail and wholesale businesses were especially hard hit.

''It's bad. It doesn't look good for inflation,'' warned Donald Ratajczak, an economist at Georgia State University. ''It doesn't look good for real earnings.''

Including farmers, productivity was down 2.1 percent over the fourth quarter of last year, the Labor Department said.

Output increased 1 percent in U.S. non-farm businesses and hours worked increased 3.9 percent during the first quarter, according to revised statistics released by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

''The first quarter productivity decline was the first in a year, and the largest since a 5.5 percent decline occurred in the fourth quarter of 1981 '' the Labor Department said.

During January, February and March, non-farm productivity increased 0.5 percent, while output advanced 3.3 percent, the report said.

Hourly compensation increased 4.1 percent in the first quarter of 1990, but with inflation taken into account it actually declined 3.7 percent, the government said.

Unit labor costs increased 7 percent over October, November and December, it added.

''It's going to be hard for people's wages to keep ahead of prices when they're producing less,'' Ratajczak cautioned, noting many businesses are already limiting hiring to slash mounting costs.

''It's a troubling situation,'' the economist said. ''If we try and pass off the higher costs of poorer production we're going to lose out to foreign competition.''

The implicit price deflator - a gauge of inflation linked to the index - was up 4.5 percent over the preceding quarter, the report also said.

But the Labor Department reported that U.S. manufacturing productivity ''increased rapidly'' during the first quarter of the year - leaping by 4.9 percent despite the poor showing by other sectors of the economy.

The productivity of workers building durable goods, those expensive items made to last three or more years, shot up 4.6 percent, while the productivity of workers making non-durable goods jumped 5.5 percent, the department said.

All the statistics in the report were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors and were calculated at an annual rate.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court ruled Monday that police officers armed with a warrant have the right to seize evidence in ''plain view'' during the search of a suspect's property even if the items were not listed in the warrant.

The high court, in a 7-2 ruling, said the Fourth Amendment allows seizure of evidence by police without a warrant even though its discovery is not inadvertent as long as the evidence is visibly exposed.

The case was brought before the court by Terry Horton, who argued that California police violated his privacy by seizing weapons from his home when the warrant only authorized a search for stolen property.

Horton was convicted of armed robbery after the trial court refused to suppress the weapons seized as evidence. The appeals court upheld the trial court's opinion.

On appeal, the Supreme Court rejected Horton's contention that a valid warrant must specifically describe the items a law enforcement officer expects to seize.

''In this case the items seized ... were discovered during a lawful search authorized by a valid warrant,'' the court said in an opinion by Justice John Paul Stevens, from which William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented.

''When they were discovered, it was immediately apparent to the officer that they constituted incriminating evidence. He had probable cause not only to obtain a warrant to search for the stolen property but also to believe that the weapons and hanguns had been used in the crime he was investigating.''

Further, the court said, ''We see no reason why (an officer) would deliberately omit a particular description of the item to be seized from the application for a search warrant.

''On the other hand, if he or she has a valid warrant to search for one item and merely a suspicion concerning the second ... we fail to see why that suspicion should immunize the second item from seizure if it is found during a lawful search for the first.''

Brennan, in his dissent, said that when an officer with probable cause to seize an item fails to mention that item in his application for a search warrant ... and then seized the item anyway, his conduct is ... unreasonable.''

(JUNE 4) UPI - Donald Trump reportedly is having a cash flow problem. A report says the real estate tycoon is so short of hard cash that his bank creditors are pressing him to sell off some of his holdings. He reportedly doesN'T have the money to meet interest and principal payments due in the next few months.

Jury selection has begun in the drug and perjury trial of Washington D-C Mayor Marion Barry. The mayor smiled and waved as he approached the courthouse, but did NOT talk to reporters. Crime-fighting Guardian Angels protested outside, holding up signs that read- ''Barry, doN'T delay, resign today.''

Weather cleared overnight across much of the Midwest and Southern Plains states. Authorities are assessing the damage caused by weekend tornadoes and thunderstorms that killed at least 16 people. A tornado that struck East Texas last night was followed today by thunderstorms, heavy rains, high winds and hail.

Sikh extremists are believed to be behind three bombings that have killed eight people in India's northern Punjab state. The blasts came as police were put on alert to prevent violence on the sixth anniversary of an Indian army assault against extremists. Officials say they expect the death toll to rise.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 4) UPI - Colombian President Virgilio Barco, delivering the commencement address at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said Monday "narco-terrorism" endangers his nation and threatens the United States as well.

"The greatest threat to our democracy is narco-terrorism and the insatiable worldwide demand for drugs which fuels it," Barco told graduates of his alma mater. "In the past, we usually saw extremist ideologies as the most serious threat to democracy, but now drugs and organized crime are even more dangerous, not only to our democracy, but to yours as well."

Barco's four-year term as president, which expires in August, has been plagued by violence surrounding the drug war and efforts to stem the power of the Medellin drug cartel.

"Some have asked how I managed the job of president at such difficult times. I tell them it is nothing compared to taking the oral Ph.D. examinations at MIT," he said to laughter and loud applause.

Speaking to 1,712 graduates and 8,000 spectators, Barco chose to focus not on the drug wars in the South American nation, but on the future he faced as he left the campus on the banks of the Charles River.

Barco, who received a bachelor's degree from MIT in 1943 and later pursued his doctorate at the prestigious research university, said as a young graduate he faced a world undergoing changes similar to those now sweeping the globe.

"So much was happening so fast. Social, political, and economic orders were turned upside-down by events around the world. Overnight, it seemed, borders were changing in Europe."

With the end of the Cold War, world leaders are now able to see beyond the East-West rivalry, Barco said. Economic prowess rather than military might will determine the new superpowers, Barco said.

Newly established democracies will fold unless they can achieve economic success, the Colombian president warned. "For these countries to solidify their political gains, they will need economic success. From Poland, to Argentina, to the Philippines, newly free people expect economic growth and improved living standards and, in order to maintain stability, those expectations must be met," he said.

He called on the United States and other prosperous nations to assist those countries, adding, "The best way to foster North-South cooperation will not be through military means, but rather by guaranteeing access of Latin America's democracies to economic prosperity and change."

Barco warned that the opening of formerly closed markets should be approached with caution, Barco warned. "In our rush to embrace free market forces, let us not lose sight of the fundamental role of government, as it embodies the free and collective will of the people. There is a role for both market forces and the state in solving social problems."

He also called on industrialized nations to work to preserve the environment, saying his admininstration has already set aside more than 40 million acres of rain forest in the Amazon - "an area larger than the six New England states together" - as Indian reserves.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said Monday that President Bush ''effectively abandoned the Lithuanians'' and was leaving it to Congress to press Moscow on the question of the Baltic states.

Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev signed a trade agreement at their just-completed summit, and Bush said there was no linkage between the issue of Lithuania and sending the pact to Congress for its endorsement.

''By promising most-favored-nation (trade) status without any regard to past or future Soviet action in Lithuania, President Bush has effectively abandoned the Lithuanians,'' Mitchell said.

''That was unfortunate and unwise,'' he said, ''but it was clear from his remarks that he expects Congress to do that which he was unwilling to do, to insist upon meaningful change in Soviet policy.''

The question of how Moscow handles the drive by Lithuania and potential moves by the other Baltic states to leave the Soviet republic is certain to play a role in congressional debate on the trade agreement, which is unlikely to be sent to Congress until the Soviet Union adopts free emigration laws.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., told a rally of Lithuanian supporters gathered on the grounds of the Capitol, ''The United States Senate will not give new trade benefits while the Soviet noose continues to strangle Lithuania.''

''We will not compromise on the issue of freedom,'' D'Amato said.

Referring to economic sanctions Moscow has imposed, Mitchell said the talks between Moscow and Lithuania must be ''fair and responsible'' and such discussions cannot be fair ''when one side has the other by the throat.''

The Senate leader said he favors a normalization of relations between the United States and Soviet Union ''but obviously things cannot occur in a vacuum. ... Whether and when it occurs is up to the Soviet leadership.''

Of the summit, Mitchell said the apparently good personal relationship Bush and Gorbachev developed ''is a positive result,'' as is the extent to which relations between the superpowers are improving.

He said he was disappointed that the final disagreements on a strategic arms reduction tready were not resolved, as was the question of how a unified Germany will fit into NATO. He also expressed disappointment that significant progress was not made toward finishing a conventional forces treaty.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., termed the superpower meeting ''a consolidation summit'' because it consolidated a variety of agreements that had already been reachead.

''What the summit did not do was make bold progress toward a post-Cold War era of cooperation,'' Aspin said.

''This summit was conducted largely under the superpower rules in force when Moscow and Washington were the leaders of powerful cohesive and opposing blocs,'' he said. ''Those rules are being rewritten.''

In addition to the trade deal and a variety of commercial and cultural agreements, Bush and Gorbachev signed a statement detailing strategic arms reduction efforts so far, a deal to cut deeply into existing stocks of chemical weapons and protocols on the verification of nuclear tests conducted under two treaties that have been awaiting ratification since the 1970s.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) UPI - Wheat futures rallied from their lows and were higher at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade, but prices were lower on the rest of the floor.

Wheat made contract lows early and traded lower much of the day, then turned higher during the final minutes. Most of the late activity was attributed to bargain hunting and speculative buying.

Gains in wheat were limited by improving harvest conditions.

Both corn and soybeans were pressured by predictions of fair weather until midweek and the lack of overseas demand.

Corn made session lows in active trading, but rallied near the close on short-covering.

Soybeans were sharply lower in response to the favorable weather and indications that farmers made excellent progress with soybean planting last week. The weakness in soybean oil and meal also kept soybean futures on the defensive.

Country movement was light and basis levels were steady to firm.

At the close, corn was off 1 to 2 1/4, soybeans down 8 to 10 1/4, wheat up 1 1/4 to 5 and oats down 1 to 2.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - President Bush told Congess Monday that he has determined a waiver to the trade act permitting most-favored-nation trade status for Czechoslovakia should be continued.

In a message, Bush said, ''The Czechoslovak government has already instituted reforms ensuring freedom of emigration for all its citizens. The refrom government of Vaclav Havel has implemented sweeping liberal emigration policies, eliminating virtually all the emigration restrictions of the previous communist regime.''

He said that under new travel regulations, potential emigrants for the Eastern Europe need only a valid passport and a foreign immigrant visa. Czechoslovak citizens no longer need exit visas to travel.

Furthermore, all pending bilateral family reunification cases have been resolved, and new laws have been passed guaranteeing freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of association and freedom of the press, he said.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Constitutional Court Monday declared Egypt's parliament null and void, ruling that elections held two years ago were unconstitutional.

It was the first such decision in the country's history.

Government officials said they did not foresee an immediate political crisis for President Hosni Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party.

One official, who asked that his name not be used, said in an interview that new parliamentary elections would be held within 60 days, but ''we don't know yet which electoral system will be used.''

The ruling will not affect Mubarek's position because he has three years remaining on his second six-year term in office, the official said.

The Court verdict, issued in May but not published in the Government Gazette until Sunday, went into effect Monday and said the 1987 parliamentary elections were unconstitutional because they were held on party political lines.

According to the 1971 constitution, at least half the elected members of the 458 member People's Assembly should have been farmers or workers, elected ''in his own individual capacity in each constituency.'' Only the remaining deputies could have stood on a party slate, the verdict quoted the constitution as saying.

Mubarak's ruling NDP won the lion's share of seats in the parliament, which was elected for a 5-year term. Egypt adopted a law allowing multi-party democracy in 1953, after the overthrow of the monarchy.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 4) UPI - One of the shuttle Discovery's 60-foot payload bay doors may have been damaged Monday when it was briefly bent in an accident during routine ground processing, officials said.

With the shuttle Columbia grounded on pad 39A with a fuel leak, the incident happened about 8:30 a.m. EDT in Discovery's hangar, where the spaceplane is being prepared for blastoff Oct. 5 on a high-priority flight to ferry the European-built Ulysses solar probe into space.

Engineers were getting ready to close Discovery's clamshell-like payload bay doors when an overhead bridge crane system inadvertantly moved, pulling the aft edge of the right-side payload bay door upward ten to 12 inches.

A top NASA engineer said there was no clear evidence of any damage, although a structural inspection will need to be conducted to make sure. "The most annoying thing to me is it's going to take some time and valuable resources to look into this," he said.

The payload bay doors were designed to open and close in the weightless environment of space. To shut the doors in Earth's gravity, an overhead crane and an elaborate counterbalance system is used to minimize the forces acting on the fragile panels.

For some reason, the overhead bridge crane was moved Monday at the wrong moment, causing the aft center corner of the right-hand door to "flex for a short period of time," NASA said in a statement.

Other officials said a "popping" noise was heard but that the door returned to its proper shape after the incident occurred. "Possible damage to flight hardware and ground support equipment is being assessed," the statement said.

Malone said details were sketchy, and "there may not be any damage to flight hardware." But she added, "I think there is some to the ground support equipment, pulleys or cables or something."

Discovery's payload, the Ulysses probe, was built to fly over the north and south poles of the sun. To reach such an orbit, Ulysses first must be fired to Jupiter so it can utilize the giant planet's gravity for a slingshot assist up and out of the plane of the solar system and back toward the sun.

Because of the positions of Earth and Jupiter, NASA only has 18 days to launch Ulysses, starting Oct. 5, or the flight will have to be delayed for 13 months while the planets return to favorable positions. For that reason NASA can ill-afford any major problems with Discovery.

SANTA MONICA, CA (JUNE 4) UPI - Pop superstar Michael Jackson, hospitalized after complaining of chest pains during a dance session, underwent a series of diagnostic tests Monday, a spokesman said.

Hospital officials said in a statement that Jackson's physican, Dr. Steven Hoefflin, had ordered the tests. However, officials did not say how long the singer might be hospitalized, nor did they specify what sort of tests were involved or shed any light on his exact condition.

About a dozen fans, most young girls, had stationed themselves outside St. John's Hospital and Health Center, waiting for word about Jackson, who was admitted to the facility about 9 p.m. Sunday. A few spent the night, a hospital security official said.

Jackson, 31, was rehearsing dance steps, which he uses as a form of exercise, at his Encino home when he began experiencing the pains Sunday night, his spokesman, Bob Jones, said.

The clean-living, lean pop star, who shuns alcohol, cigarettes, and junk food, has no history of health problems. But Jones said the recent deaths of his maternal grandmother and of entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. had put Jackson under some stress. In addition, the excruciatingly shy star has been working on a new album, entitled, "Decade."

Jones was unsure whether Jackson was fasting on Sunday, a practice he often engages in to purge his body of impurities. "I know he sometimes does that, and Sunday could be the day," Jones said. Jackson appeared on television Sunday night in a taped ABC tribute to Davis.

One of Jackson's brothers, Jermaine, visited the hospital early Monday morning, but did not speak to reporters and it was not immediately clear whether other family members had come to see him. His younger sister, LaToya, sent a dozen black roses from London, her spokesman said.

"He's known to have had this sort of problem when he's overexhausted or overworked," LaToya said in a phone interview. "It's nothing new." She said that along with the roses, she sent her brother a get-well card, signing it with her secret code name in order to make certain it got to Jackson.

A hospital spokeswoman would not say whether Jackson was admitted to a room near his friend, actress Elizabeth Taylor, who has been undergoing treatment at the facility since mid-April for a near-fatal bout with pneumonia.

Jackson ventured from his singing brothers, the Jackson 5, with the Grammy-winning solo album - "Off the Wall" in 1980. He has recorded only two albums in the past seven years - "Thriller" in 1983 and "Bad" in 1987. The albums sold a combined 60 million-plus copies, earning him an estimated $100 million.

When sales of "Thriller" hit the 24 million mark, the Guinness Book of World Records halted printing of its 1984 edition to include Jackson as history's best-selling solo performer. Seven Top ten hits emerged from the LP.

GABORONE, BOTSWANA (JUNE 4) UPI - Black leader Nelson Mandela arrived in Botswana on the start of a 45-day foreign tour Monday, warning that lifting sanctions against South Africa now ''would be tantamount to stabbing the liberation struggle in the back.''

Kicking off a tour of Europe, Canada, the United States and Africa, Mandela set the tone for his most extensive foreign trip since his February release from 27 years' imprisonment saying continued economic sanctions would help to force an end to South Africa's institutionalized system of race segregation.

The near-legendary 71-year-old leader of the African National Congress and his wife, Winnie, received a red-carpet welcome from President Quett Masire when they arrived in the diamond-rich country bordering South Africa.

Tribal dancers performed on the tarmac and women ululated before the Mandelas were escorted into town along Nelson Mandela Drive.

After meeting privately with Masire, president of the former British protectorate since 1980, Mandela addressed a crowd of 15,000 at the national stadium. He appeared fit following a six-day medical examination and surgery for the removal of a cyst on his bladder.

''Apartheid is still alive but the ANC is even more alive,'' Mandela declared. Mandela praised South African President Frederik de Klerk for his courage in releasing him from prison and lifting a 30-year ban on the ANC. But he said the ANC would not agree to a formal suspension of its armed struggle and hold talks with the government until several conditions are met.

These include the release of all political prisoners, the return of exiles and the lifting of a nearly four-year-old state of emergency.

The state of emergency, which South African newspapers with links to the government said may be modified or lifted within the week, prompted a severe tightening of economic sanctions against Pretoria in 1986 by the European Community, Canada and the United States.

Before leaving Johannesburg, Mandela said lifting the emergency, which the government declared in a bid to curb widespread rioting over the continued exclusion of the black majority from power, would be a ''victory for the liberation movement.''

During his own nine-nation European trip last month, de Klerk pressed for an easing of sanctions as a reward for his reform efforts. Mandela insists that until the pillars of apartheid are abolished, sanctions must remain in force.

''If sanctions are now ended then this would be tantamount to stabbing the liberation struggle in the back,'' Mandela said.

From Botswana, Mandela is scheduled to depart Tuesday for Lusaka, Zambia, and then for Paris.

Mandela also plans to visit Switzerland, West Germany, France, and Italy. He is slated to meet Pope John Paul II at the Vatican before heading to Canada on June 18. Mandela is to arrive in New York to a ticker tape parade June 20, and then he plans to visit Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Miami and Los Angeles before departing on June 30 for Ireland and London.

In Washington, Mandela is scheduled to meet President Bush and address a joint session of Congress.

On his way back to South Africa, Mandela will visit Uganda, Ethiopia, Kenya and Mozambique.

''This visit is intended to inform Europe, the U.S.A. and Africa of the political situation in the country today, and any development that we expect,'' Mandela said.

''The question of sanctions is going to be uppermost in the course of my meetings with foreign heads of state.''

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (JUNE 4) UPI - Two Japanese groups announced plans Monday to make a major investment in a nearly-completed $200 million retail complex on the fabled Rodeo Drive shopping area in Beverly Hills.

The two groups - Kowa Real Estate California Inc. and USA Sogo Inc. - have agreed to buy a 40 percent interest in the Two Rodeo Drive project for an undisclosed price from AMEC-Power-Malkin Partners. The selling partnership consists of AMEC PLC of Great Britain, Power Corp. PLC of Ireland and Scott D. Malkin Interests Inc. of New York.

The 136,000-square-foot Two Rodeo project is expected to enlarge the retailing space on Rodeo - a three-block stretch peppered with high-priced boutiques, jewelers and galleries with names like Chanel, Gucci and Sotheby's - by nearly 60 percent when it opens in the fall.

The deal comes at a time when Rodeo Drive, the heart of Beverly Hills' ''Golden Triangle,'' has maintained a strong attraction to free-spending shoppers for more than a decade. As a magnet for both the jet set and tourists, Rodeo Drive is the fourth most popular visitor destination in the Los Angeles area after Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm and Universal Studios.

The announcement also said that Kowa and Sogo's ownership interest will be increased from 40 percent to more than 90 percent when the 23-store project debuts. That deal will involve the acquisition of the 40 percent share of Berisford Rodeo Property Development Ltd., which is a unit of Berisford International PLC of London, and an undisclosed portion of the 20 percent share developer Douglas Stitzel owns through Stitzel Properties Inc.

Stitzel estimated that the final purchase price by Kowa (a unit of Kowa Real Estate Investment Co. Ltd. of Tokyo) and Sogo (the real estate investment arm of Japanese department store chain Sogo Co. Ltd.) will be ''well in excess of $200 million.''

The Two Rodeo Drive project, across Wilshire Boulevard from the historic Beverly Wilshire Hotel, is 70 percent pre-leased, with some familiar high-end names - Cartier, Cristian Dior, Charles Jourdan and Tiffany - signed up as tenants. Long-term leases have annual rents that run as high as $225 per square foot.

The half-block project has a strong European flavor, with marble, bronze doors, limestone sidewalks, two fountains, copper roofs and even cobblestones on Via Rodeo, the crescent-shaped street that runs through the middle of the project and is closed to vehicles.

Stitzel has stressed that his use of Via Rodeo provides four street fronts rather than two, by curving upward into the middle of the block. The idea is to fit four or five tenants into the same space where the traditional development would have two.

''The most valuable asset you can give a tenant is prime street footage,'' Stitzel has said.

For many years, the site was occupied by a savings and loan building, a car dealership, a few small boutiques and a parking lot, but in 1987, Stitzel organized the financing to buy and develop the property in 1987. To help secure city approval for the project, he agreed to build a 600-space underground parking lot with two hours of free valet parking in an area that is chronically short of parking.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Supreme Court ruled Monday that an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a fellow prisoner is not required to give Miranda warnings to an incarcerated suspect before asking questions that may elicit an incriminating response.

The high court, in an 8-1 majority, said Miranda warnings informing suspects of their rights are not neccessary when suspects are unaware they are speaking to a law enforcement officer and give a voluntary statement.

The court, however, said such warnings must be strictly enforced by law enforcement officers in situations where the possibility of coersion exists or where a suspect may feel compelled to speak for fear of safety.

A coercive atmosphere is not present when incarcerated suspects speak freely to someone they believe to be a fellow prisoner, the court said. As a result, undercover officers are permitted to be deceptive by taking advantage of a suspect's misplaced trust.

The case was brought before the court by Lloyd Perkins, an inmate at an Illinois jail who was awaiting trial on aggravated battery charges.

An undercover agent was placed in Perkins' cell at Montgomery County jail after a prisoner told police Perkins discussed details of an unsolved murder.

Perkins bragged to the undercover officer sharing his cell that he killed Richard Stephenson in 1984, and Perkins was subsequently charged with murder.

The trial court granted Perkins' motion to suppress the statements he made to the undercover agent. The state appealed and the apellate court upheld the ruling, saying undercover agents seeking to illicit incriminating evidence from incarcerated suspects were prohibited under the Miranda doctrine.

The high court, in an opinion delivered by Justice Anthony Kennedy, said ''conversations between suspects and undercover agents do not implicate the concerns underlying Miranda.''

''When a suspect considers himself in the company of cellmates and not officers, the coercive atmosphere is lacking,'' the court held. ''The tactic employed here to elicit a voluntary confession from a suspect does not violate the self-incrimination clause.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Corroon & Black Corp. and Britain's Willis Faber PLC said Monday they have agreed to merge and create the world's fourth-largest insurance brokerage firm with projected revenues of $1 billion this year.

''The new company, to be called Willis Corroon PLC, will be incorporated in Britain, and the merger is expected to be completed in the third quarter of 1990,'' a Corroon spokesman said.

The merger is subject to regulatory approval in the United States and Britain, and to a vote by shareholders of both firms, he said.

The agreement was approved by directors of both companies June 1, during board meetings held in New York and London, where the U.S. and the British insurance brokerage firms are respectively based.

The agreement was reached just a month after Corroon reported a sharp drop in earnings for the first quarter of 1990, with net income amounting to $9.1 million, or 48 cents a share, down from $12.9 million, or 72 cents a share, in the year-ago period. The company attributed the drop in earnings to a decline in life insurance business.

''Our position has been - and continues to be - that 1990 will be a difficult year, and we can expect severe pressure on our profit margin,'' Chairman Richard Miller said when releasing the figures in April, while stressing the need to strengthen international operations.

The first-quarter results followed a severe decline in Corron's earnings in 1989, to $36 million, or $2.10 a share, from $115.8 million, or $6.77 a share, in 1988.

Willis Faber, however, reported in April that its pre-tax profit for 1989 rose 15 percent to 62.5 million pounds, from 54.4 million pounds in 1988.

Willis Faber's revenues for 1989 were about $400 million and Corroon's about $456 million.

Under the June 1 agreement, Willis Faber would issue 7.8 new common shares for each Corroon common share. On the day the agreement was reached, Willis shares closed at 291 pence, or $4.98, on the London International stock market, which would place a value of $38.15 for each Corroon share.

Following the disclosure of the agreement, Corroon shares were down $2.125 to $34.375 in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the slide reflected uncertainty regarding Willis Faber's future strength on the London International stock exchange since Corroon's share price will be pegged to Willis Faber's value at the time the merger is completed. They also pointed to possible fluctuation in the parity between the dollar and the pound, with a weaker pound negatively affecting Corroon's dollar value.

Insurance industry analyst James Guenther with Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago said the merger forges a strong alliance between two insurance brokerage firms which play a leading role in two different markets.

''It is likely to be a good combination, based on the profile of their respective businesses, because Willis Faber is dominant in Britain, while Corroon is major U.S. player,'' Guenther said. ''We are not looking at redundancy, but at a combination of companies that operate in different markets.''

The agreement calls for Corroon shareholders to receive American Depositary Receipts, each of which represents five common shares of the new company. Willis Corroon will be traded on the New York and the London stock markets.

Corroon said it will pay regular dividends to its shareholders for two more quarters, on July 1 and October 1. The new company will start paying dividends January 1991.

The company said the Willis Faber dividend is projected to correspond to 58 cents a Corroon share, after British tax credits are taken into account or an increase of about 70 percent compared to Corroon's current dividend of 34 cents.

The two companies are to get an equal representation on the new board, with Roger Elliott, chairman of Willis Faber, to be chairman of the new company, while Corroon's Miller would become chief executive officer of Willis Corroon.

Willis Faber and Corroon rank fifth and sixth, respectively, among the world's leading insurance brokerage firms. Willis has about 6,000 employees and Corroon approximately 5,000.

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (JUNE 4) UPI - Three young England soccer fans were sentenced Monday to 20 days in jail and fined $160 in the first convictions for hooliganism in connection with the World Cup.

Andrew Brockway, 24, Lee Forster, 25, and Robert Neill, 21, all from Birmingham, England, were convicted of the theft of sheets and criminal damage to a hotel room.

They were brought to court in handcuffs and officials confirmed all three have previous police records. The jail sentences means the three will be unable to view any of England's first-round matches, all scheduled to take place in the Sardinian capital.

The trio was arrested Sunday after paying their bill at a pensione in the center of Cagliari. The owner of the Victoria Pensione said the room used by the group had been totally devastated.

Police arrested them in a bar and later found sheets from the room in their luggage.

The closed-door judicial process lasted four hours. Officials said the soccer fans denied causing willful damage, insisting that it was accidental and they took the sheets to use later on a beach.

Magistrate Licina Serra said that the sentences were not suspended in order ''to protect the community.''

Thousands of police are on alert on the rugged island of Sardinia, where violence-prone hooligan supporters of England and Holland are expected to gather in force by the time the tournament kicks off Friday.

England begins first-round Group F play June 11 against Ireland in Cagliari.

The British government has been urging the Italians for months to be tough with troublemakers. No decision was announced on whether the trio would be deported when their sentences have been served.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - President Bush's China policy came under renewed fire on the first anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre Monday as a key senator and a recently escaped Chinese student leader attacked Bush as overly cautious.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and student leader Chai Ling made their statements in advance of Capitol Hill meetings this week at which Democrats will devise a response to Bush's May 24 recommendation that China keep its most-favored-nation trade status.

Mitchell said congressional leaders would discuss whether they would try to block Bush's recommedation - which drastically reduces the price of Chinese goods in the United States - or attach conditions to it.

''The rulers of China are hoping the world will forget what happened 12 months ago. And President Bush, by renewing most-favored-nation trading status for China is doing what the Chinese government wants done,'' Mitchell said.

Mitchell said he felt compelled to speak out Monday because Bush had yet to make a public statement on the anniversary of the June 3-4 crackdown.

''It is doubly tragic for Americans that the silence of the Chinese regime on this anniversary date is echoed in our own country by our own president '' he said. ''The Chinese people must be told that the president's silence does not represent the view of all Americans.''

In a speech in Bloomfield, Mich., Vice President Dan Quayle noted the anniversary, saying that Bush ''will never forget those brave individuals who support freedom'' and will support countries that ''share our values.''

Chai, 24, a leader of the pro-democracy demonstrators who recently escaped with her husband from China after 10 months as one of its most wanted fugitives, criticized U.S. officials for continuing to ''drag their feet.''

Chai will meet congressional leaders this week to discuss human rights in China. She also wants to meet Bush, but had not gotten a response from the White House, said David Phillips of the Congressional Human Rights Foundation, which is helping arrange Chai's trip.

''I would like to tell him some things that I know about,'' Chai said. ''Maybe President Bush doesn't know what the effect (of his policies) is.''

Chai, who rose to prominence with a speech that rallied support for a hunger strike in Tiananmen Square, told a news conference that Bush was mistaken when he said Chinese students backed his trade decision.

She also said the president gave the Beijing government a propaganda victory when he secretly sent national security adviser Brent Scowcroft to China soon after the massacre.

''Some people said, 'You see, China is feared. ... The United States is afraid of our government,''' Chai said. ''I think President Bush should not continue ... this conservative policy toward China.''

Chai said there is still widespread opposition to the government in China and credited sympathetic peasants, workers and officials with helping her escape.

''Brutal force and terror can never win the hearts of the people. That is true all over China. That was the reason I could escape successfully,'' Chai said.

''I am determined to fight,'' she said. ''I say to the people of America, please do not forget the people of China.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - Former President Gerald Ford gave President Bush his support Monday for two of Bush's most criticized foreign policy stances - a go-slow approach to Lithuanian independence and continued warmth toward China.

But Ford, a 13-term congressman who as vice president rose to the Oval Office in 1974 when Richard Nixon resigned, also had some harsh words for his old institution, especially what he called ''the incumbent Congress.''

The former president made his remarks to a luncheon at the National Press Club.

Ford called the summit between Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev ''a meaningful sucess ... (that) laid the foundation for subsequent agreements'' and praised the two ''quite frankly ... for admitting certain differences.''

On one of those key differences - the drive for independence by the Baltic republic of Lithuania - Ford said Bush was correct in allowing Gorbachev some manuevering room while insisting on the consistency of the U.S. position that never recognized the incorporation of Lithuania and the other Baltic states into the Soviet Union.

''I think at this point we have to be somewhat understanding of what Mr. Gorbachev faces,'' Ford said, noting that Gorbachev has spoken of a five-to-seven year timetable for working out Lithuania's relationship to the Soviet Union. ''We have to give him (Gorbachev) that time in a reasonable sense.''

He said that while he ''starts out with a sympathy'' for the Lithuanians, the United States ''has to have a reasonable, balanced approach'' and ''for a time, at least, I will take the position'' Bush is doing the right thing.

''I strongly support the view of the president (with regard to China policy),'' Ford said in response to a question. He called the options facing Bush following the massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators a year ago ''difficult'' but said Bush's decision not to impose sanctions while criticizing human rights abuses was ''on balance ... the right one, and I support it.''

He blamed the current trend toward an ''incumbent Congress,'' in which large numbers of House members are almost automatically re-elected, on the growth of a sophisticated gerrymandering that eliminates ''competitive'' House seats, the influence of political action committees - especially business PACs created by the 1974 legislative reform act - and ''perks'' enjoyed by House members, including large staffs on federal payrolls that challengers cannot afford.

LONG BEACH, WA (JUNE 4) UPI - Hundreds of Northwest residents turned out on a squall-battered strip of sand to help Long Beach, Wash., beat out Myrtle Beach, S.C., by building the world's longest sand castle on what is advertised as the world's longest beach.

An estimated 1,000 people worked during the weekend to fashion a continuous sand structure featuring four sword-wielding Mutant Ninja Turtles attacking two dragons with tails stretching more than three miles in each direction. The resulting 6.53-mile-long sculpture stretched nearly 1.5 miles farther than a creation done by hundreds more sand-castle buffs from Myrtle Beach.

"We came, we fought, we are victorious," David Glassona, Long Beach assistant city clerk, said Monday. "We kicked sand in their face." Mayor Fred H. Rutherford proclaimed Monday "VLB (Victory in Long Beach) Day."

Rutherford will be treated to an expenses-paid trip to Myrtle Beach to inspect "the conquered territory," said Nabiel Shawa, city manager. "He'll fly the Long Beach flag over the City Hall of Myrtle Beach."

Rutherford, who was "not out of bed yet," Shawa said, was not available for comment Monday morning. Myrtle Beach officials vowed to make another record attempt over the Fourth of July weekend.

"All we're going to say right now is it will be longer than 6 1/2 miles and less than 100," said Eric Eiesland, spokesman for the Myrtle Beach-area Chamber of Commerce. "We might have to check with Charleston (S.C.) and go through there, too." Charleston is about 80 miles south of Myrtle Beach.

Long Beach officials, who claim their beach is the world's longest, said people from surrounding towns near the southwest Washington coast as well as Seattle, Bellevue, Tacoma, and Olympia, Wash., and Portland and Astoria Ore. braved repeated rainstorms to construct the sand creation.

One heavy rainstorm Sunday washed out part of the sculpture, Shawa said, but it was repaired before professional surveyers measured the dragons' tails and declared the creation a continuous structure. The Long Beach creation more than doubled the previous world record of 3.04 miles - also set by Long Beach last year.

Teams of sand sculptors began working on the centerpiece of the structure Thursday, and hundreds more people arrived Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Most of the structure was built Sunday, Shawa said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Lithuania, its economic life threatened by the Soviet oil blockade, is getting the cold shoulder from major western oil companies because they fear losing future Soviet business, a Lithuanian representative said Monday.

''Big oil companies are weighing the advantage of going into Lithuania with the disadvantages of losing business in the Soviet Union,'' said Linas Kajelis, a Washington consultant acting on behalf of the Lithuanian government.

''They're afraid of being blacklisted by Moscow if they're too friendly with the Baltic states right now,'' Kajelis said in a telephone interview.

The smaller oil companies are the ones expressing the most interest in coming to the aid of the government of president Vytautas Landsbergis, said Kajelis, who said he was asked by the Lithuanians to help in a rescue effort.

''They've approached most of the major oil companies in the United States and Europe. I don't know of any they haven't approached,'' a knowledgeable U.S. industry source said.

''They're looking for everything - tankers, equipment, oil,'' he said.

Soviet officials have been applying pressure on large international companies by in effect saying ''why not work with us here in Moscow instead of sending supplies to Lithuania,'' Kajelis said.

The pressure is not confined to the oil industry. Kajelis said electronic manufacturers such as Japan's Sony Corp. and and South Korea's Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd. have backed off from locating in Lithuania after Soviet pressure.

No comment could be obtained from Lithuanian ambassador Stasys Locaraitis in Washington.

The major oil companies also appear to be following the lead of President George Bush. Bush has appeared to skirt the Lithuanian declaration of independence from Moscow in March although Washington has never recognized the 1940 Soviet military takeover of the country.

The Soviet Union, which supplies Lithuania with all its crude oil, retaliated by imposing an oil blockade in April that is crippling the Baltic state.

In his White House news conference Sunday, Bush several times made clear Lithuania's plight would not deter signing a trade agreement and granting Moscow most favored nation status.

''The linkage is between the trade agreement and the emigration legislation,'' said Bush, referring to a pending Soviet law that would ease emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

Two weeks ago, Texaco Inc., the third largest U.S. oil company, agreed on a cooperative research effort to explore the potential of Soviet oilfields and a similar effort by Chevron Corp. was reported over the weekend.

Also two weeks ago, the French state-owned Petroleum Societe Nationale ELF Aquitaine was awarded Moscow's first contract to a foreign company for the exploration and production of oil in the Soviet Union.

Kajelis, a former White House and Pentagon official in the Reagan administration whose parents came from Lithuania, said he was ''drawing up a strategy to revise the system of buying crude oil from Russia.''

The thrust of his efforts is to obtain money from U.S. financiers to buy Soviet crude oil or form partnerships with U.S. or other foreign oil companies to obtain foreign crude for Lithuania's refinery.

The refinery's refined products would then be sold for world market prices and the revenues used to buy more crude, Kajelis said.

The consultant said he submitted a list of techncial questions from U.S. companies several weeks ago to the Landsbergis government in Vilnius such as whether the flow of the 50-mile pipeline from the refinery at Mazheikiai to the port of Klaipeda can be reversed to carry crude imports.

''If a technical solution (for crude imports) can be found, the question is whether the Soviets would let a damn ship dock. If we offer the Soviets world market prices for their crude, would they do it or would they spite their faces by maintaining the embargo?'' Kalejis said.

He added, ''If the Soviets won't allow crude into Lithuania either from the East or West, there is no need to find western partners.''

The consultant indicated he was somewhat unhappy with the time it is taking the Landsbergis government to reply to his list of questions.

''They're not going about this in a very businesslike manner. They have little experience in this type of thing, perhaps because of the 50 years spent in the Soviet Gulag,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - U.S. expertise in food processing could help the Soviet Union adapt more quickly to the economic reforms sought by the Kremlin, a Soviet agricultural official said at a so-called food summit Monday.

Also at the meeting, Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said he believed Soviet difficulty in paying for grain purchases was only a temporary problem.

The three-day meeting was scheduled to include the signing of a U.S.-Soviet agreement for cooperation in exchanging information about food processing opportunities. The meeting, attended by U.S. and Soviet food industry leaders, was sponsored by the Food Industries Interional Trade Council.

Although the United States is the pre-eminent grain merchandiser to the Soviet Union, it sells only limited quantities of other foods. Last year, wheat, corn, soybeans and soybean meal accounted for $3.4 billion of the $3.6 billion in agricultural exports to the Soviets. The Kremlin bought $15 billion worth of goods from other nations.

In a speech, Vladilen Nikitin, who holds an office comparable to Yeutter, described the intention of the Gorbachev regime to reduce food subsidies and create more direct links between consumers and producers. He said the food processing industry has been hampered by waste, outmoded equipment and a limited variety of products.

Nikitin said the trade agreement signed by Gorbachev and President Bush would open the way for U.S. firms to invest in Soviet enterprises.

''As far as our goals,'' he said during an impromptu news conference, ''we want to reduce the time that is necessary to restructure our economy by using the help of American companies.''

Asked what guarantees U.S. firms would have of being paid for their products, Nikitin responded that Soviets would deal honestly with U.S. investors.

Nikitin holds the title of first deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers and chiarman of the State Commission of the Council of Ministers on Food and Procurement.

There have been reports over the past few months that the Kremlin was slow in paying for its grain purchases. Yeutter told reporters he was aware of the problem, which he called ''troublesome, worrisome.''

''I see this as a short-run challenge,'' he said.

In a recent report, Agriculture Department economists said little increase was likely in the level of Soviet agricultural imports because of limits on hard currency and Soviet efforts to increase domestic production.

U.S. share of the Soviet market, however, might increase from the warming in superpower relations, they said. The gains would come at the expense of other Soviet suppliers.

The new U.S.-Soviet trade agreement holds the potential for the Soviet Union to qualify for U.S. export credit programs. However, the Economic Research Service report said the Kremlin ''has made little use'' of credit programs offered by other Western governments and it said analyses have suggested the programs ''have only small benefits in expanding exports.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 4) UPI - Despite tough tactics, Russian President Boris Yeltsin failed Monday for a third time to win parliamentary approval of his cabinet candidates, raising questions about his mandate to lead the Soviet Union's largest republic towards radical change.

Yeltsin, who won leadership of the Congress of People's Deputies and Russia's effective presidency last week by only four votes over a required majority, used his powers as chairman to force a vote on unopposed candidacies for the final two posts in the four-member Cabinet.

The strong-arm tactic, which came after Yeltsin last week twice failed to win approval for his nominees, was rebuffed when deputies did not give the candidates needed majorities.

But the dogged former Moscow party boss said he would call another vote on the same candidates Tuesday.

Many deputies criticized the decision, saying it contradicted the conciliatory image Yeltsin projected last week as he tried to win moderate legislators' support for his presidential bid.

''Now the chairman has rejected the democratic principles he himself proclaimed,'' said Vladimir Prytkov, a centrist lawmaker from Gorky.

''He got scared by this deadlock and decided that by proposing single candidacies he could get out of this situation,'' said Leonid Kogan, a deputy from the Urals who shares many of Yeltsin's views. ''But in fact he just exacerbated the confrontation.''

The defeat of Sergei Shakrai, a legal scholar, and Ruslan Khasbulatov, an economist, seemed to show the limits of the populist Yeltsin's ability to asuage moderate fears that he is hostage to elitist academics who are the brains behind his program.

But Khasbulatov blamed the setback on ''forces outside the walls of the Congress,'' including the hostile attitude of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Khasbulatov told United Press International that Gorbachev's opposition was a mistake, since Yeltsin could be the lightning rod for popular discontent over market reforms.

''It would be in the interests of ... the president to let (Yeltsin) form a government without trouble,'' Khasbulatov said. ''I think this would even make life easier for Gorbachev.''

Yeltsin's action Monday came after a coalition agreement collapsed last week when legislators rejected a radical Yeltsin candidate while approving two relative conservatives. A second vote Friday also ended with failure for Yeltsin's candidates.

The defeat enraged radical legislators who fear that a conservative cabinet will foil Yeltsin's reform plans.

''They want to surround him with their own people so he can't do anything '' said Sergei Nosovets, a young radical from Omsk in Siberia.

Nosovets and other deputies from the Democratic Russia bloc, the backbone of Yeltsin's parliamentary strength, said that it was likely he would keep nominating the two candidates until they are chosen.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - Prices were sharply higher at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Monday in active trading after a late rally fueled by gains in financial issues and by computerized program buying.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.31 Friday to top 2900 with a record high close of 2900.97, jumped 33.74 to 2934.71, according to an unofficial tally.

Advances led declines 1,099-462 among the 2,004 issues crossing the NYSE tape at 4 p.m. EDT. Volume amounted to about 176,000,000 shares, compared with 187,860,000 traded Friday.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

In early going, prices drifted after the record high close Friday, when the Dow industrials topped 2900 for the first time ever.

Analysts said investors were slightly cautious after the runup of the past couple of weeks and took a breather from their aggressive buying in early trading.

But by mid-afternoon, financial issues led prices higher. Analysts said strength in those stocks stemmed from the improved outlook for interest rates after the weak report Friday on May employment. Investors began to feel the news might hasten any move by the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates.

Treasury issues were up as much as 1/4 point with their yields lower on the day after surging Friday on the weak job data.

Computerized program buying, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, then entered the market and fueled additional gains, analysts said.

On the trading floor as of 3 p.m. EDT, L.A. Gear was most active, down slightly, regaining most of its early decline. The stock plunged Friday after the company said it expected earnings for its quarter ending May 31 of 50 to 60 cents a share, sharply below the 91 cents earned a year ago.

BCE followed, up slightly. First Interstate was third, surging as the financial sector rallied. Philip Morris was also active, sharply higher.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was unchanged and IBM was up, while American Express played a big part in bolstering the Dow industrials, sharply higher.

American Southwest Mortgage Investments led the Amex issues, sharply lower.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - More than 15,000 U.S. military dependents in the Philippines have been told they can return to the United States if they wish because of the increased threat to their safety, military authorities said Monday.

Pentagon and Pacific Command spokesman said an order was posted May 27 streamlining the process under which service personnel can ask that their dependents be sent home.

''It was in reaction to the continuing and increased threat to Americans '' said Air Force Lt. Col. Tom Boyd, spokesman for the Pacific Command in Hawaii.

Two U.S. servicemen were killed near Clark Air Base last month.

Clark is the largest Air Force facility in Asia and Subic is the largest naval facility west of Hawaii and is the logistics hub of the U.S. Seventh Fleet.

Boyd said there were more than 12,000 dependents at Clark and with those at Subic Bay Naval Station the total overall was about 15,800.

The change also will allow dependents of civilian Defense Department employees to be sent home if they wish.

The United States is currently negotiating with the Philippine government to extend the leases at the two military facilties for which it now pays about $480 million a year. The leases expire in September of next year.

In Washington, Lt. Cmdr. Ned Lundquist, a Pentagon spokesman, said the change in the departure program was not a reaction to the latest killings but was done ''to enhance the security of U.S. military personnel and dependents that are there. By returning dependents it decreases the vulnerability of our people.''

Lundquist said military personnel at overseas assignments under what is known as ''command sponsorship'' - there at the direction of the supervisory command - can bring dependents at government expense. Once the dependents are there, the program allows them to aks for their return home at government expense for such things as divorce, medical reasons, danger and the like.

He said the change in policy streamlines the application process for service personnel who want to ask that their families be sent back home.

Boyd said he did not know how many personnel have asked to send their families home since the policy change took effect.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - A senior administration official said Monday the U.S.-Palestine Liberation Organization dialogue is in jeopardy because PLO leaders have not condemned last week's attempted guerrilla attack on a Tel Aviv beach.

The official said that although PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat ''has attempted to disassociate himself from the attack,'' he has not taken two other steps insisted upon by the United States: a public condemnation of the attack and taking steps to remove Abul Abbas from the PLO Executive Council.

Abul Abbas has taken credit for planning the Tel Aviv attack. He also was involved in the October 1985 hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, in which U.S. citizen Leon Klinghoffer was killed.

In the eyes of the United States, the official said, the attack and the inadequate response by the PLO ''has clearly placed the U.S.-PLO dialogue in jeopardy.''

''There is no deadline as yet,'' the official said, ''but since the dialogue is in jeopardy we want to give Arafat and the other PLO leadership the opportunity to do what we have asked of them.''

The official said the U.S. demands were given to the PLO in three meetings last week in Tunis between U.S. ambassador Robert Pelletreau and PLO officials.

In a related action, the official said the Arab nations, blocked by a U.S. veto in the U.N. Security Council last week, are expected to move the fight over Israeli actions in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to a special session of the General Assembly in Geneva.

The official, speaking to a small group of reporters on the condition of anonymity, said the United States will again refuse permission for Arafat to come to New York to address the General Assembly.

As it did in 1988, the General Assembly is expected to vote to move to Geneva to hear Arafat, where an Arab group will propose a United Nations team to investigate the alleged excessive use of force by Israeli soldiers in the occupied territory.

The United States has no veto authority in the General Assembly, but Israel is expected to refuse permission for the U.N. team. So, the official said, ''The purpose would be to take us over there and beat us by a vote 150-2, or something like that.''

Before the move to convene the full General Assembly, the Arab nations are expected to put forward new resolutions in the Security Council in the next 24 hours, trying to find language that the United States will not veto.

The U.S. official said, ''Given the trend, we expect them to be increasingly radical. We are prepared to veto everything that goes beyond the Secretary General designating a personal emissary to go on a fact-finding mission.''

The U.S. veto in the Security Council created widespread resentment in the Arab world, where some leaders had expected the United States to approve a relatively mild resolution calling for three Security Council members to send a fact-finding team to the Israeli occupied territories.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev took a trip down memory lane today before moving on in search of more U-S high-tech and investment help.

Gorbachev held a brief reunion with former President Reagan at the Soviet consul general's residence overlooking San Francisco Bay.

Reagan says he and the Kremlin leader talked about- in Reagan's words- ''the same things we have been talking about the past five years, some of the things we started.''

But Reagan is refusing to take sole credit for the changes in Eastern Europe, saying any praise should go to both he and Gorbachev.

While the former superpower rivals met, so did their wives. Nancy Reagan denied any tension, dismissing past reports of conflict as ''misunderstanding.''

Gorbachev followed the meeting with Reagan by heading to the nearby Silicon Valley to pitch closer economic ties between the United States and his nation.

Gorbachev is speaking this afternoon at Stanford University, a major research center for the high-tech industry. He will also address about 150 corporate and political leaders before heading back to Moscow late in the day.

Canada's political leaders are into their second day of talks to try to avert a constitutional stalemate that threatens to fracture the nation.

The war of words is over the controversial Meech Lake Accord... a proposed constitutional amendment which promotes and protects French-speaking Quebec language and culture.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and leaders of the nation's 10 provinces negotiated the accord three years ago, after Quebec refused to sign the 1982 constitution on grounds that it did NOT recognize the province's distinct French society.

But other provinces have since refused to sign the deal because they fear Quebec will use its new powers to pass laws that would hurt English-speaking provinces.

The constitutional impasse has pre-occupied Canadians for months.

Quebec has threatened to secede unless the Meech Lake measure is passed.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Jury selection is under way in Washington, D-C, for the federal drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry.

The mayor smiled and waved, but did NOT speak to reporters as he walked into the courtroom accompanied by his wife and mother.

A crowd of about 25 members of the Guardian Angels jeered, holding signs reading- ''Barry doN'T delay, resign today.''

The proceedings opened nearly five months after the mayor was arrested for allegedly smoking crack cocaine.

Barry faces a possible 26-year prison term and a one-point-eight-Million-dollar fine if convicted of all 14 counts against him. The charges include perjury, cocaine possession and conspiracy to possess the drug.

The process of picking a panel to hear the charges comes after talks between prosecutors and defense attorneys failed to reach a plea bargain.

Barry reportedly agreed to plead guilty only to misdemeanor charges... but prosecutors wanted a felony conviction, which would make Barry ineligible to be mayor of the nation's capital.

One attorney describes a Supreme Court ruling today as- ''an answer from God which gives students free speech.'' But atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair criticizes the ruling as the ''end for secular school.''

Justices voted 8-1 to uphold the constitutionality of the federal Equal Access Act that allows religious groups to meet in public schools.

The ruling upholds a 1984 law in a case brought by Westside Community Schools in Omaha, Nebraska.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor rejected arguments that the act violates the First Amendment ban against government endorsements of religion.

Four justices agreed with the decision... but NOT the reasoning behind it.

Justice John Paul Stevens was the lone dissenter, saying the act comes close to an outright command to allow organized prayer in schools.

In other rulings today- the court ruled that state bar associations may NOT spend compulsory dues on political activity against the wishes of its members.

The court also decided that an undercover officer posing as a prisoner does NOT have to warn a fellow inmate that information he gives may be used against him.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Chinese troops today widened a huge net of security over Beijing to try to discourage protesters from demonstrating on the anniversary of the Tiananmen massacre... but the plan did NOT work.

More than one-thousand students rallied at Beijing University... the cradle of last year's democracy movement. Witnesses say the protesters seemed to appear spontaneously in the campus courtyard, where they hurled bottles and denounced top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping .

On-lookers and journalists were milling outside the school's south gate when troops armed with assault rifles ordered them to leave.

One Canadian reporter says several soldiers waved a rifle in his face.

A graduate student says he was in shock when he heard the singing and shouting outside his dormitory window because he never dreamed anyone would dare protest.

The Beijing students' cry was matched in rallies held in cities throughout the world, including the United States.

About 20-thousand residents in Hong Kong... which China takes over in 1997... gathered last night, calling for democracy.

American worker productivity bottomed out in the first quarter of the year... the worst showing in nearly 10 years.

The Labor Department says U-S productivity plunged two-point-seven percent.

The data was far worse than expected by private analysts. It indicates that inflation remains a serious threat because business costs, such as wages and benefits, increased in many sectors of the economy, while output dropped.

Retail and wholesale businesses were especially hard hit.

Robert Dederick, chief Economist at Northern Trust in Chicago, says that a slower economy often triggers a productivity slump. He called the news ''depressing.''

(JUNE 4) UPI - Clear skies in the Midwest and Southern Plains states are giving authorities the chance to size up the damage from weekend tornadoes that flattened buildings and killed 16 people.

Indiana was particularly hard hit, as at least 50 tornadoes threatened to blow the state off the map.

Residents in the southern part of the state ... where seven people died... say the damage resembles a war zone.

Indiana Governor Evan Bayh yesterday imposed a state of emergency and called out the National Guard to help with the clean-up and to guard against looting.

In Illinois, 22 tornadoes... 14 of them within one hour... ripped through 10 counties, killing one person in her home.

An especially ferocious tornado also caused extensive damage overnight in East Texas. The twister damaged buildings, uprooted trees and left most residents in Jacksonville without power.

One resident who has lived in the area for 65 years says he has seen tornadoes come and go, but has NEVER seen one as destructive as the one that struck last night.

ATLANTA (JUNE 4) UPI - American Telephone & Telegraph Co. unveiled Monday some two dozen computer products designed to help the company complete its plan of forming a full computer networking capability during the 1990s.

The products were introduced to computer manufacturers, buyers' representatives and the trade press during Comdex Spring '90, the annual industry trade show at the Georgia World Congress Center. About 60,000 persons are attending the show, which runs through Wednesday.

Richard A. McGinn, president of AT&T's computer systems business, said two of the most important new products from his company were the StarServer E and the Starserver FT.

''What we're announcing today is more than a set of computers,'' said McGinn.

''We're announcing a major step toward completing our networked computing vision,'' which he said is marked by the characteristics of ''robust networking capability and granular growth options.''

''We are also reaffirming that customers require choice in the character, operating systems and capability of their servers and desktop systems integrated by high-functioning networking solutions,'' McGinn said.

According to the company, the StarServer E system, designed by AT&T Bell Laboratories in Morristown, N.J., has the ability to double or triple performance by adding two or three central processing units, McGinn said.

''The StarServer E is the first machine in its class to have true symmetric multiprocessing capability,'' he said, explaining this capability, jointly developed with Pyramid Technology Corp. of Mountain View, Calif., let systems grow in performance without bottlenecks.

In a symmetric multiprocessing system, all processors have equal capabilities and can perform the same functions. Each processor can run standard user applications as well as all the various portions of the operating system.

Also, any task can be executed on any processor and can migrate from processor to processor as the load of the system changes.

McGinn said the StarServer FT is a fault-tolerant UNIX server, designed to provide customers with the option of protecting their networked solutions for critical business applications with the most reliable computer architecture available.

As their name implies, fault-tolerant computer systems are designed to continue operation even when key components fail.

The StarServer FT is the result of AT&T's agreement with Tandem Computers announced earlier this year.

''With the addition of fault-tolerant capabilities, we can help our customers design networks of AT&T equipment with an enormous range of processing capability, as well as a range of security and reliability,'' said McGinn.

L. Scott Perry, marketing and support vice president of AT&T's data support group, said he saw enormous growth potential for the two StarServer systems and AT&T's other product lines.

''Over the next few years we see double-digit growth in sales,'' said Perry.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Monday it cleared the way for the Nippon Credit Bank Ltd. of Tokyo, the world's 32nd largest bank, to operate as a bank holding company in the United States.

The Fed said it approved the bank's application to acquire 100 percent of the outstanding voting shares of Nippon Credit Trust Co., of New York, and offer "wholesale banking and trust-related services in the metropolitan New York-New Jersey banking market." "The board has determined that consummation of the transaction would be in the public interest," the Fed said in its order.

But Fed Governor Martha Seger expressed a dissenting vote, saying foreign banks "have an unfair competitive advantage ... over domestic banking organizations" because of lower capital requirements overseas.

"In addition, I am concerned that while some progress is being made in opening Japanese markets ... U.S. banking organizations, in my opinion, are still far from being afforded the full opportunity to compete in Japan," Seger said. A number of Japanese banks and financial institutions operate banking, securities, and related subsidiaries across the United States.

Nippon Credit Bank, with total assets estimated at about $118 billion, engages in a variety of banking activities on a world-wide basis, the Fed's order said. In addition to ranking as the world's 32nd largest bank, Nippon Credit is the 17th largest banking institution in Japan, the Fed said.

In the United States, the Tokyo bank operates a branch in New York, with total assets of about $5.4 billion, and a related agency office in Los Angeles, which has total assets of about $2 billion, the Fed said.

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 4) UPI - Hercules Inc. said Monday it will add a 4.6 percent surcharge to the price of all of its resin and rosin products to help offset costs of environmental products.

The charge will be added as of July 1 to resins and rosins supplied in the United States.

William Hosker, president of Hercules Resins Group, said the business expects to spend more than $100 million for some 100 capital projects and operating expenses related to environmental compliance over the next five years.

''The Hercules Resins Group has been absorbing environmental costs to date but cannot continue to do this because of their escalation,'' Hosker said.

Hercules' work on environmental compliance for its resin division has centered on reducing emissions of pollutants, improving cleanup and developing new testing and monitoring methods.

Hosker said the company has spent $50 million on investments at resin plant treatment facilities to meet or exceed existing federal, state and local government standards.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - With no direction from European markets that closed for a bank holiday, the dollar was slightly lower in listless trading against major currencies Monday in New York, analysts said.

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6880 marks, off from 1.6980 late Friday. The dollar was quoted at 152.50 yen, up from 151.85 late Friday.

Other dollar rates: 1.4320 Swiss francs, off from 1.4370; 5.7000 French francs, off from 5.7297; and 1,240.5 Italian lire, off from 1,247.

The British pound fell to $1.6790 against $1.6823.

Meanwhile, gold continued to weaken in New York after sinking to its lowest price in over eight months in London trading.

Analysts said currency trading was slow and quiet because markets in Frankfurt, Zurich, Paris and Brussels were closed for Whitsun bank holiday.

The dollar came off morning highs as traders saw a good opportunity to take profits, said Bob Hinton, vice president of foreign exchange at Harris Trust & Savings Bank.

''With the holiday in Europe, the dollar didn't get any kind of push from those markets at all,'' he said. ''When the Americans came in and looked at the levels here, and with no direction from Europe, it was a good level to take some profit.''

Traders expected intervention from West Germany's Bundesbank but none appeared to materialize, he said.

Continued political uncertainty over the German monetary union kept the mark ''somewhat vulnerable,'' Hinton added.

The dollar closed higher in thin, quiet trading against the major European currencies, strengthened by the weaker mark. Gold moved sharply lower.

''What we're seeing is the dollar up just slightly on the back of a weaker mark,'' said Ken de la Salle, a currency analyst at National Westminster PLC in London.

''It's a very quiet day because of the bank holiday,'' he said. ''There might have been some purchasing of U.S. bonds, which would keep dollar buying up.''

In London, the pound retreated against the stronger U.S. unit to close at $1.6760, vs. $1.6830 at Friday's close.

The dollar rose in Milan to 1,251.20 lire from 1,246.75.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar drifted slightly higher against the yen in listless trading. The dollar closed at 152.42 yen, up 0.25 yen from Friday's close of 152.17 yen. Dealers said market caution kept the dollar in the doldrums for most of the day.

Masafumi Koyama, chief customer dealer at the Bank of Tokyo, said no one was enthusiastic about buying the dollar at the high end of the 152 range.

''But at the same time, nobody is so confident to sell dollars in large amounts,'' he said.

Gold hit an 8 1/2-month low in London following sharp falls in New York late Friday, dealers said. The bullion market was nervous following reports the Soviet Union was carrying out a number of swap transactions in gold to raise money for short-term financing needs, a London metals specialist said.

Gold closed at $356.25 an ounce against $362.75 an ounce Friday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $358 an ounce, off from $359.25 Friday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled June spot contract gold at $358.60 an ounce, off from $359.20.

Silver moved slightly lower in London at $5.06 an ounce against $5.07 an ounce.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.07 an ounce, unchanged. Comex June spot silver ended at $5.049 an ounce, up from $5.046.

VATICAN CITY (JUNE 4) UPI - Sports-minded Pope John Paul II gave his blessing to 36 World Cup soccer referees Monday, calling on the officials to help work for ''the highest ideals of sportmanship'' on the field.

The 70-year-old Polish pontiff, an avid sportsman who skied into his 60s, met with the group, whose members will direct 52 World Cup matches beginning Friday when World champion Argentina faces Cameroon.

''Everything must proceed according to the highest ideals of sportmanship, of fair play, of respect and friendship in human relationships,'' John Paul said during the meeting in a Vatican hall. '''Italia '90' will be a true spectacle and entertainment if it is also a great display of human values.''

The United States soccer team has qualified for the World Cup finals for the first time since 1950. The 1994 World cup is to be held in the United States.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - A group of volunteers honoring men who served in the Vietnam War will place roses along the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Father's Day, organizers said Monday.

Each of the roses will be accompanied by messages written by loved ones to men who died in the war and whose names are engraved in the memorial.

Ann Stingle, spokeswoman for the Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, said her group began the program last year so friends and relatives of fathers who died in the Vietnam War can express themselves.

''But we had people express gratitude for fathers who weren't killed and those who placed them for all veterens,'' said Stingle.

''It isn't a formal ceremony ... but it is certainly done with a lot of feeling,'' she said.

Stingle said volunteers will place the roses in small plastic tubes at the base of the panel that lists the name of the loved one at sunrise on June 17. Each rose will have the individual's name and message attached.

''He was home for Mother's Day; we buried him Father's Day. From his loving Mother and Family,'' was one of nearly 100 messages placed at the base of the memorial last year.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - The stock market overcame some early blahs to stage a late rally and send the Dow industrials to yet another record high, their first close significantly above the 2900 level. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.31 Friday to the previous record of 2900.97, jumped 34.22 to 2935.19. The transportation average also set an all-time high, jumping 18.43 to 1207.85.

Broad market gauges set records as well. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.18 to 200.21, a record high and its first close ever above 200. The price of an average share jumped 40 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 4.24 to 367.40, another record high.

The rally was broad-based as advances pounded declines 1,104-464 among the 2,011 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume was 175,520,000 shares, compared with 187,878,590 shares traded Friday.

What looked like a dull Monday session in the early going, turned into a record-setting day in the afternoon. Prices staged a dramatic turnaround, led by financial issues.

Analysts said strength in those stocks stemmed from the improved outlook for interest rates after the weak report Friday on May employment. Investors began to feel the news might hasten any move by the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates. Treasury issues were up as much as 1/4 point in afternoon trading with their yields lower on the day after surging Friday on the weak job data.

Computerized program buying, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, then entered the market and sent prices surging. Analysts said momentum from the market's recent run to record highs simply carried prices still higher.

"It sounds trite but there's just a lack of selling," said John Burnett, senior vice president and head trader at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "The buyers are still there. It seems like every morning another portfolio manager wakes up and says, 'I've gotta be in this market."'

Burnett said program buying definitely helped fuel the rally. "There were programs, without a doubt. You could see them kicking in every fifteen minutes or so."

While he noted that financial issues were big gainers, he said it was important not to forget that those stocks got "torn apart" during the market's weakness after hitting all-time highs at the beginning of the year and are still well below their highs. "They're still playing catch-up a little bit," he said.

Dale Tills, manager of institutional equity trading at Charles Schwab & Co. in San Francisco, said he sees a new phenomenon driving prices up. "What's really coming into play now seems to be a shift out of bonds and into equities," he said, which is a sign that lower interest rates are expected and that bonds are not seen as such stiff competition for stocks any more. He also noted that more and more money is coming in to stock mutual funds which is feeding the market's momentum.

With Monday's close, the Dow industrials are within striking distance of the 3000 century mark. "The momentum could boost us to 3000 pretty quickly but we're getting pretty overbought after today's move," Tills said. "We could see a correction in the next day or two before moving higher."

On the trading floor, L.A. Gear was most active, down 1/8 to 30 5/8, regaining most of its early decline. The stock plunged Friday after the company said it expected earnings for its quarter ending May 31 of 50 to 60 cents a share, sharply below the 91 cents earned a year ago.

BCE followed, up 1/4 to 34 1/4. Philip Morris was third, up 1 1/4 to 44 1/2. First Interstate was also active, surging 5 5/8 to 44 7/8 as the financial sector rallied.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 1/4 to 43 5/8, Boeing jumped 1 5/8 to 86 3/8, IBM rose 7/8 to 120 3/8, American Express gained 1 3/4 to 31 1/2, and Philip Morris rose 1 1/4 to 44 1/2, both in active trading.

As for some other actively traded financial issues, Federal National Mortgage Association rose two to 43 5/8 and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. surged 3 3/8 to 79 7/8. Among the banks, Security Pacific rose 1 7/8 to 42 1/4, and in the insurance sector, Travelers rose 1 1/8 to 31 7/8.

But one insurer did not fare very well. Corroon & Black tumbled 2 1/4 to 34 1/4 after news of its merger with Willis Faber, a british insurance broker, in a stock swap.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 211,486,090 shares, compared with 223,862,800 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.57 to close at 364.40. Advances led declines 321-281 among the 829 issues traded. The price of an average share added 11 cents. Composite volume totaled 15,111,300 shares, compared with 16,878,170 shares traded Friday. Wang Labs Class B led the Amex issues, up 1/2 to 4 5/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 3.48 to 465.61.

DALLAS (JUNE 4) UPI - Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Monday new taxes are likely to result from the current budget talks between the White House and Congress but that the Bush administration will not call them taxes.

''We're going to get some. But the administration will spell them out under different syllables,'' the Senate Finance Committee Chairman told a Greater Dallas Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Speaking on a wide range of issues, Bentsen gave few details of the possible outcome of the current budget summit aimed at finding ways to reduce the federal budget deficit, which the administration says could reach as high as $200 billion.

Bentsen said new revenues could total about $20 billion, of which $15 billion will be in taxes and another $5 billion in user fees.

If no compromise is reached at the budget talks, there will be across-the-board spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman balance budget law which requires the deficit to be reduced to $64 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

But both Democrats and Republicans say they want to avoid those automatic cuts because they would be devastating to both defense and domestic programs.

Such cuts would be especially severe in Texas because of its fragile economy and its significant exposure to defense contracts.

Bentsen said Congress might accept cuts in the Medicare program but noted they will not be as high as the $5.6 billion the administration has proposed because of the impact on hospitals which now depend on Medicare for a large part of their revenue.

He said he would prefer that government spending be reduced but that if taxes are raised, any increases should be used for deficit reduction.

On other matters, Bentsen said that the recipients of future U.S. foreign aid should be required to use it to buy U.S. goods and services.

Other developed countries like Japan and Germany are providing mostly ''tied aid'' to developing nations, he said, while much of the current U.S. foreign aid has no such strings attached.

CHICAGO (JUNE 4) UPI - R.R. Donnelley and Sons Co., North America's largest printing concern, Monday announced plans for a major new commercial printing facility in South Daytona, Fla.

The company said it has acquired an unoccupied 150,000-square-foot building and adjoining property for the new facility, to be known as Donnelley's Daytona Division.

The plant, slated to begin operations in mid-1991, will provide about 150 jobs.

Jack Oberhill, president of Donnelley's Magazine Group, said the plant initially will produce catalogs and magazines for major U.S. retailers and publishers. He pointed out, however, that the Daytona Division will have the capacity to expand to other kinds of printing.

''Our Daytona Division will be a state-of-the-art facility that sets a new standard for catalog and magazine printing and distribution,'' said Barry Schoder, president of Donnelley's Catalog Group.

R.R. Donnelley and Sons produces catalogs, newspaper inserts, magazines, books, directories, computer documentation and financial printing. It operates nearly 100 plants in the United States and in the United Kingdom, Ireland, Mexico, the Caribbean and the Far East.

NEW YORK (JUNE 4) UPI - U.S. consumer confidence remained virtually flat in May, pointing to a sluggish economy but no impending recession, according to a survey conducted by the Conference Board.

The Conference Board, an independent organization which conducts economic surveys worldwide, said its U.S. consumer confidence index stood at 106.7 in May, ''down an insignificant one-half a point'' compared with April.

The index was pegged at 100 in 1985.

''Consumers are slightly less positive about present conditions than in April, but expectations for the future are the same,'' the group said. ''Buying plans have perked up a bit.''

The monthly survey is based on the responses of 5,000 households selected at random throughout the United States.

The index, however, was down 10 full points from its year-ago level at 116.7. The index's highest level in the past 12 months was 120.4 in July, while the lowest was 106.5 in January.

''Although consumer confidence has been running well below the levels registered late last year, there is still no indication that the economy is moving into recession,'' said Fabian Linden, executive director of the Conference Board.

''This is consistent with the readings of the major economic indicators. While many of the numbers point to a softening in the economy, there are few signals suggesting that we are moving into bigger troubles,'' he said.

About 23 percent of the participants said they viewed business conditions in the United States as ''good,'' while an almost equal number, 20 percent said they were ''bad.''

A majority - 50.6 percent - felt that ''jobs are not so plentiful,'' while 22.8 percent said they were ''hard to get.''

For the next six months, a large majority of participants said they expected business conditions to remain unchanged (71.5 percent), employment levels to be stable (67.4 percent), and their income to remain flat (69 percent).

Buying plans perked up in May, with 8.2 percent of the participants saying they would buy a car within six months, the highest level of planned spending in that category in the past 12 months.

About 3.9 percent of the participants said they would buy a home during the same period, also the highest level of planned spending in that category since May 1989.

Planned spendings for major appliances were slightly down, however, with 29.3 percent saying they would buy a new refrigerator, washing machine or television set in the next six months, compared with 31.3 percent in April and 31.9 percent in March, the highest level in the past 12 months.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev held a nostalgic reunion Monday with former Cold War rival Ronald Reagan to review the sweeping political changes in Eastern Europe that they helped foster.

The two leaders, whose diplomacy in the last half of the 1980s helped thaw the Cold War, had not seen each other since meeting in New York City in December 1988. At that time, neither man could forecast the fall of the Berlin Wall and the ascent of democracy behind the Iron Curtain.

''If there is any surprise about what has happened (in Eastern Europe), it would be how quickly change has come about,'' Reagan said as he left the home of the Soviet consul general. ''I couldn't have been this optimistic, to expect it to come about this soon.''

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, arrived at consul general's posh Pacific Heights home 45 minutes later than planned at the request of the Gorbachevs, who were nearing the end of an exhausting six-day visit to the United States.

After the 30-minute meeting, the couples exchanged friendly farewells outside. The Gorbachevs then began a hectic schedule of activities in the San Francisco area.

''We talked about the same things we have been talking about for the last five years,'' Reagan said. ''I'm very pleased with the progress.''

Reagan was asked if he felt a great deal of credit for the change that has taken place in Europe should go to him.

''I think if anyone should be praised it should be shared by the two of us '' the former president said.

During their morning coffee, the Soviet leader gave Reagan a medal for the American people in appreciation for the help and generosity extended to the people of Armenia in the aftermath of the devastating 1988 earthquake.

During his first term as president, Reagan branded the Soviet Union the ''evil empire'' and launched a massive military buildup that punished the Soviet economy as the Kremlin tried to keep up.

But with Gorbachev's arrival on the scene, Reagan began to reconsider his long-held Cold Warrior views. The two men held five summits in just over three years, including the signing of the historic Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty in 1987.

At their just-ended summit, Gorbachev and President Bush built on many of the basic agreements struck by Reagan and the Soviet leader, including progress on a strategic arms reduction treaty that Reagan had pushed for to achieve the eventual elimination of all nuclear weapons.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (JUNE 4) UPI - The Hungarian Parliament stood for a minute of silence Monday to mark the 70th anniversary of the Treaty of Trianon, which carved up Central Europe and inflamed ethnic tensions which survive to this day.

But the solemn moment was disturbed when delegates of the Alliance of Young Free Democrats walked out in protest. Faction leader Gabor Fodor said the group objected to President Gyorgy Szabod's decision to commemorate the tragic moment without prior consultation.

It was the first time the issue of Trianon, a taboo subject during Communist rule, cropped up in the Parliament. When former Communist Party leader Janos Kadar in 1975 brought up the issue of Hungary's territorial losses under the treaty at a Helsinki conference, Hungary's neighbors immediately reported him to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

On Tuesday evening, some 500 demonstrators shouting nationalist slogans demonstrated against the treaty and demanded restoration of a ''greater Hungary,'' the Hungarian news agency MTI said.

The protestors, who were organized by the Christian National Union, a minor political party, marched through downtown and then dispersed without incident.

Its main speaker, Laszlo Romhanyi, called for a re-examination of the treaty but added, ''The changing of borders hsould not be realized in a forceful manner, but rather through legal means.''

The treaty of Trianon was signed on June 4, 1920, in the Grande Gallerie of the Trianon Palace in Versailles, France. The whole ceremony took only 20 minutes, but its provisions stirred tensions that eventually boiled into World War II.

The treaty, one of several signed after World War I to divide the defeated Austro-Hungarian empire into smaller states, haunts Central Europe even today, accounting for the lack of communication between the Romanian and Hungarian governments.

It cut more than two-thirds of Hungary's territory and 60 percent of its population. By contrast, Germany lost 10 percent of its territory at Versailles, signed almost a year before, on June 28, 1919.

The Romanians, who have 2 million ethnic Hungarians in their midst, suspect Hungary wants to reclaim territories lost under the treaty. And Hungarians in and outside Romania doubt the Romanians' sincerity in granting rights to them.

President Woodrow Wilson had endorsed a plan on May 18, 1918, to create a confederation out of six countries on the territory of the collapsed

Austro-Hungarian empire.

The plan would have allowed Hungary to retain 16 million citizens on a much larger territory than now. Transylvania would have been an independent federal state with 2 million people, and Austria, Yugoslavia and Poland would have made up the rest.

Instead, France and Britain carried the argument, allegedly basing their grounds on ethnic considerations and the acknowledgement of self-rule by the nations involved.

But eight years later, British Prime Minster Lloyd George acknowledged in a speech that the documents on which the Allies based their decision were The only statesman who had misgivings at the time was Wilson. He thought it politically irrational to have small and economically lame countries replace the Hapsburg empire, but he finally gave in to French Prime Minister Georges Clemenceau's concept, which ensured France's supremacy in the region.

But Clemenceau's concept of partition by ethnic distribution failed miserably because Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Romania became countries with the same kind of vexatious ethnic problems as Austria-Hungary had.

The effect of the segmentation was worsened by the inability of the victors to guarantee the rights of ethnic groups, who found themselves locked in alien counties and exposed to the revenge of former rival ethnic groups.

The situation simmered for four decades, only to resurface again with the relaxation of communist rule in Eastern Europe.

Not all hope is lost for these countries finally to find peace. There seems to be a developing Central European consciousness, a nostalgic feeling for the empires lost, an expression of solidarity among the new democracies emerging in the region.

If they find a way to elevate themselves above their past vindictiveness, these budding democracies may yet achieve what Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel said in his recent speech to the Council of Europe: ''At the turn of the century, if God wills it, a confederation may emerge.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 4) UPI - Engineers believe they have solved an ongoing problem with the Hubble Space Telescope that has plagued efforts to get its ultra-accurate guidance system operating properly, officials said Monday.

Deputy program manager Jean Olivier said ongoing trouble getting the telescope to lock onto guide stars apparently was the result of computer programming that prevented the instrument from lining up properly on the correct targets.

Instead of orienting guide stars on the ''centerline'' of the guidance sensors' fields of view, the telescope's computer was ignoring such stars unless they happened to end up near the centerline by chance.

In a weekly teleconference with reporters across the nation, Olivier said work to check out the $1.5 billion telescope should proceed more smoothly from now on.

''We're still behind two or three weeks all in all, I would guess,'' Olivier said from the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md. ''The process from here on out, I feel the last thing we found on the (guidance problem) has been one of the things that's plagued us on the whole orbital verification activity and has hampered everything we've done.''

The Hubble Space Telescope was released from the shuttle Discovery into a 380-mile-high orbit April 25 to kick off a 15-year mission to explore the depths of the universe. But a series of problems has plagued the telescope's orbital activation.

Many of those problems were related to the telescope's inability to find guide stars. By locking onto and tracking such stars, the telescope's four five primary instruments can make time-exposure observations.

''I've added up about 14 problems we've had that are totally independent of one another just that had to do with our inability to acquire guide stars,'' Olivier said. ''Every time we solved one of these we thought it was the last one.

''All I can say now is in the past, as we would solve the problem it would be just a few hours before we had another problem. The positive side of what I'm telling you is since we've discovered the (centerline) problem we've had a dramatic change in the ability to acquire guide stars.''

Two problems involving the stability of the telescope have been resolved by getting the observatory's optical system in better focus.

Olivier said early problems with wobbling were caused by the telescope's guidance system trying to lock onto out-of-focus stars. Such blobs of light caused the guidance system to ''search'' for the target's center, which caused the telescope to wobble slightly.

As the focus was improved, however, the telescope's stability improved dramatically.

Only one such problem remains to be resolved: When the telescope moves into and out of sunlight, temperature-induced oscillations in the observatory's big solar panels apparently cause a minor wobble. What will be done about that problem remains to be seen.

''I feel we know a lot about the spacecraft, obviously more than we did, and I feel pretty confident the kinds of things we find in the future will be more isolated than the kinds of things we've been running into in the past several weeks,'' Olivier said.

HARTFORD, CT (JUNE 4) UPI - Animal rights activists failed Monday in a legal bid to stop U.S. Surgical Corp. from using live dogs in developing surgical staples and training doctors in their use.

The state Appellate Court upheld a judge's dismissal of a suit brought against U.S. Surgical and the state Department of Health Services, which ruled the use of the dogs permissable under Connecticut law.

The state's second-highest court concluded the animal rights activists who brought the suit failed to ''present any proof of a specific, personal and legal interest in Surgical's experimental use of dogs.''

The ruling marked the latest round in an ongoing battle between animal rights groups and U.S. Surgical over the Norwalk company's use of live dogs to develop surgical staples and train doctors how to use them.

Repeated protests have been held outside the company headquarters and a self-styled animal rights activist was arrested in 1988 and charged with trying to kill the company's chairman.

The case before the Appellate Court was brought by Julie Lewin of the Fund for Animals and Sarah Seymore and the Friends of Animals.

Lewin asked the Department of Health Services for a ruling declaring the company's use of live dogs impermissible under state laws governing the use of dogs for scientific and educational purposes.

The health department, however, ruled in favor of Surgical and concluded the company's practices were ''essential'' and therefore allowed under the law.

The animal rights activists appealed the decision in Hartford Superior Court where a judge dismissed the suit on the grounds the plaintiffs had not proven the required aggrievement.

The Appellate Court, in a unanimous decision, upheld the trial judge, saying the assertions by the animal rights activists ''amount to no more than speculative fears.''

''Their assertions can be summarized as follows: I am a member of Friends of Animals; I own a dog; my dog may one day be lost or stolen and may then fall into the hands of a dog broker who supplies animals to laboratories; and Surgical may eventually gain possession of my dog.

''A thorough review of the record, however, indicates that none of the evidence presented connects the plaintiffs' pets to Surgical or gives rise to any other legitimate, specific, personal and legal interest of the plaintiffs,'' the court said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - The Louis Rich Co. is voluntarily recalling 27,000 pounds of its ''Louis Rich Bun-Length Turkey Franks'' distributed in six states because the franks may be undercooked, the government announced Monday.

The franks were distributed in Florida, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, New York and Ohio.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service urged consumers to return the turkey franks to the store where they purchased them. No illnesses have been reported.

The turkey franks were sold in clear plastic, one-pound packages in grocery stores. The establishment number ''P-6751'' appears inside the Agriculture Department inspection seal on the label. The packages subject to recall can be identified by the date code ''B JUL 01'' stamped on the label and the words ''Sell by JUL 01 B P-6751'' stamped above the resealable packaging strip.

Louis Rich, of Madison, Wis., initiated the recall after it investigated a consumer complaint and discovered that 1,700 pounds of the franks might be undercooked.

No other Louis Rich products are involved in the recall.

Consumers with questions about the recall can call the toll-free Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. EDT. A tape recording with information about the recall will be provided at other times.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 4) UPI - President Bush told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar at a meeting Monday that the United States will soon release $62.5 million to the United Nations, paying off U.S. dues for the year, a spokesman announced.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater also said Bush wants Congress to provide funds to catch up on other money owed to the United Nations.

Bush reaffirmed to Perez de Cuellar ''his view that the United States should meet its financial obligations to the United Nations, which are solemn international obligations made ... after full consultation with Congress,'' Fitzwater said.

''He expressed his hope that Congress will provide the necessary funds, including payment of arrears.''

During an Oval Office meeting, the spokesman said, Bush and the secretary-general discussed U.N. activities and other matters ''and they noted the increased role the U.N. has been playing in the changing world.''

''The president explained that the United States will soon release an additional $62.5 million to the United Nations to pay current dues,'' he said.

In protest of some U.N. activities - and just to save money - Congress has withheld part of the U.S. assessment for U.N. activities for the last five years. The total arrearage exceeds $400 million.

SAN ANTONIO (JUNE 4) UPI - FBI Director Williams Sessions Monday criticized American lawyers and judges for doing nothing to show support for a judicial system consistently targeted by vengeful and violent drug rings in Colombia.

In a rare departure from his usual public speeches on the workings of the federal agency he now heads, Sessions, a former federal judge, chided an audience of U.S. judges and lawyers in San Antonio for not supporting their peers in the South American country.

Sessions, while a U.S. district judge in Texas, presided over the trial of defendants charged in the only murder of the federal judge in the United States during this century.

Sessions said he remembered the impact on this country of the drug-related slaying in May 1979 of U.S. District Judge John Wood, who was assassinated outside his home in San Antonio.

''Think of the impact in Colombia with the slaughtering of over 200 judges (and law enforcement officials),'' Sessions said about a series of mostly drug-related slayings in recent years.

''Yet we do nothing to support them. We do little and say little about it '' Sessions said. ''We have an obligation ... to somehow express ourselves.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - Unless Third World debtor nations accelerate their economic reforms they risk losing vast amounts of foreign investment to the emerging markets of Eastern Europe, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady told international banking leaders Monday.

The dramatic political changes in the Eastern Bloc have increased an already intense global competiton for capital, Brady told top executives from 103 international banks at the International Monetary Conference.

''In the aggressive worldwide competition for foreign investment, countries which fail to create an attractive investment environment run a real risk of lost opportunities and falling behind,'' Brady warned.

Brady spoke to about 200 executives at a conference luncheon after a closed morning session in which bankers discussed ways to boost the global supply of capital.

''The problem I think many of us see is the trend of private savings not to grow sufficiently fast to meet the investment needs of the world in the '90s,'' British Parliament member Nigel Lawson told reporters at a post-session briefing.

Brady said several Latin American countries, including Mexico, Chile and Venezuela, have made steady progress in reforming their economies, but ''much remains to be done.''

''The countries that move forcefully to privatize state-owned operations, to open trading and investment regimes and to withdraw the government from the marketplace will be the ones that attract the capital to fuel growth '' Brady said. ''In a resource-short world, there is no other answer.''

The shortage of excess capital results from low savings rates in many industrialized nations, particularly in the United States, bankers said. At the same time the U.S. government continues to run huge annual budget deficits.

Brady said he was optimistic the Bush administration will reach a workable agreement with Congress this year to reduce the deficit. The result could be a dramatic drop in interest rates, he said.

U.S. bankers said little can be done to get U.S. consumers to save more until the federal government gets its own fiscal house in order.

''It's going to take a broad-scale attack,'' former Federal Reserve Bank Chairman Paul Volcker said.

Meanwhile, the Japanese continue to save an extremely large portion of their incomes and are investing billions in other nations. Japan's large savings rate in itself should not be a concern, so long as the savings are channeled in the right directions, Volcker said.

''This isn't the time to go around crabbing about Japan having excess savings,'' Volcker said. ''I think we're going to need those savings.''

Brady urged banks of the developed world to continue to work with debtor nations in Latin America and elsewhere that are trying to reduce their massive burdens of foreign debt.

Countries such as Mexico, Chile and Venezuela have demonstrated that they are sincere about reforming their economies and repaying billions borrowed from U.S. banks, he said.

''As more countries embrace the principles of economic freedom, creditors will need to stand ready to lend their support,'' Brady said. ''You in this room cannot simply be bystanders to this process.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 4) UPI - Raisa Gorbachev and Nancy Reagan had a friendly chat over coffee Monday, belying speculation that the former first lady's book ''My Turn'' had rekindled hard feelings between the two women.

While their husbands discussed the rapid change in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev visited in a separate room at the home of the Soviet Consul General and talked about the historic changes their husbands had brought about, the rigors of travel and their first meeting.

Nancy Reagan's much-talked about book and its less-than-favorable portrayal of Mrs. Gorbechev was not a point of discussion. In the book, Mrs. Reagan writes: ''I couldn't believe it. I had met first ladies, princesses and queens, but I had never seen anybody act this way (like Raisa Gorbachev).''

Reagan also characterized the Soviet first lady as ''dry, impersonal and tedious.''

The two women did, however, discuss press reports of their ''stormy'' relationship. In a press release, Reagan's publicist said Gorbachev told her ''she regretted these (press) reports because they were not true.'' Mrs. Reagan responded by saying the reports ''disturbed'' her also.

After meeting privately, the two were all smiles when they joined their husbands for a photo opportunity on a second floor balcony overlooking the Golden Gate Bridge.

Once the meeting was over, the Reagans and Gorbachevs left the Soviet consul General's residence together and warmly bid each other farewell.

When asked about her rift with Raisa Gorbechev, Mrs. Reagan said: ''I think there has been a great misunderstanding about our relationship. The first time we met we were plowing new ground, but since then we've been quite friendly.''

Mrs. Gorbachev, for her part, did not meet with the press. Instead she joined her husband, Mikhail, at his speech at Stanford University.

She was then scheduled to take a shortened whirlwind driving tour of San Francisco.

NASHVILLE, NC (JUNE 4) UPI - A grand jury Monday filed 2,695 counts of securities law violations against two corporations and four men, including Thomas Root, known for a wild ride in his private plane that ended when the craft slammed into the Atlantic and Root swam to safety with a gunshot wound to the abdomen.

The Nash County grand jury returned 24 indictements charging the defendants with violations of North Carolina security laws, false and deceptive trade practices and conspiracy for allegedly selling securities without registering with the state.

Root, 37, is a lawyer from Alexandria, Va., who was flying in his private plane from Washington to Rocky Mount, N.C., on July 13, 1989, when he told an air traffic controller he was having chest pains and put his plane on automatic pilot.

Air Force and Coast Guard jets followed the plane for six hours down the East Coast. The pilots saw Root slumped in the seat. The plane ran out of fuel and spun into the Atlantic Ocean off the Bahamas.

Root amazed rescue crews when he swam from the plane. It was later determined he had been shot in the abdomen. Root told authorities the gun he kept in his plane discharged when the plane hit the water. Gun experts said that was impossible.

Root already had been named in a 33-count federal indictment handed up in March that accused him of defrauding five prospective radio stations while representing them before the Federal Communications Commission.

Root also was charged with obstructing a federal investigation into his Washington law firm, Thomas L. Root P.C. Root pleaded innocent to those charges and was released on bond. A Sept. 21 trial date has been set for those charges.

Also named in Monday's indictment were Sonrise Management Services of Columbus, Ga., and Telemedia Inc. of Maryland. Individuals named besides Root were Ralph Savage, chairman of Sonrise, Eugene White, president of Sonrise, and Carl Hurlebaus, who is a co-owner of Telemedia along with Savage and White.

If convicted, each man faces up to 1,500 years in prison.

Sonrise claims individuals investing in its services would obtain help in applying for FCC licenses for radio stations. More than 1,600 people in 25 states invested more than $16 million.

Rufus Edmisten, the North Carolina secretary of state, said last July he was working up charges against Sonrise and Root, who represented Sonrise and its cients before the FCC.

State law requires that firms selling securities register with the secretary of state's office. Sonrise contends it is not a securities company.

Root and Sonrise also were named in a civil lawsuit filed in Washington in July 1989. The lawsuit claims Root failed to perform his duties as a lawyer for Sonrise.

As a result, the lawsuit says, Sonrise and its clients suffered becasue they did not get FCC approval of applications to operate low-watt FM radio stations. The suit, filed by investors, seeks $584,600 in damages from Root.

Court documents show Sonrise used a network of Amway dealers to sell shares in partnerships to investors who wanted to operate the radio stations.

MOSCOW (JUNE 5) UPI - Scores of baby seals have been found dead in the White Sea two weeks after an estimated 4 million dead starfish washed ashore in the same area, the independent Interfax news agency reported Monday.

A radiology laboratory in Obninsk near Moscow linked the starfish deaths in the White Sea, a large inlet of the Barents Sea in the northwest of the country, to radiation exposure, Interfax said.

Interfax did not cite a radiation source. Two weeks ago, Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said tests failed to find high levels of radiation in the area. The Tass report said scientists were baffled and could find no logical cause for the starfish deaths.

The Interfax account said masses of baby seals have now begun to die in the White Sea.

Starfish were reported to be piling up in a 6- to 8-inch layer along a 18.6-mile stretch of coastline.

SEATTLE (JUNE 4) UPI - Two major regional electronic banking networks have agreed in principle to merge by the end of the year, creating a system that would become the fifth largest in the country with about 6.6 million customers, officials said Monday.

The announcement was made jointly by Richard Brandt, chairman of the ACCEL network and executive vice president of Security Pacific Automation Co. - a division of Security Pacific Bancorporation - and Gerald Pittenger, chairman of The Exchange network and president of Great Western Bank.

In an unusual arrangement, the two networks already share a president, Thomas M. Bass, and will have Bass as president and chief executive officer after formation of the new organization, which has yet to be named.

''With 2,892 ATMs (automated teller machines) in Washington, Oregon, Idaho Montana, Alaska and the western Canadian provinces operating from one network, this merger will provide more convenience, increased availability and less confusion for our customers,'' Pittenger said.

Brandt said the final details of the merger will be worked out during the next four months. He said because The Exchange and ACCEL have used a common data center and have had a common management group for some time, many details of the merger have already been worked out.

The common management of the two systems stemmed from a decision by the banks involved to save money by sharing administrative and processing costs, which Bass said ''made a ton of economic sense.'' He added he knew of no other business where a president oversees the operations of two competitors.

The new network would rank No. 5 among electronic banking systems around the country, with about 7 million transactions a month. The MAC system in the Philadelphia area is the largest, with about 30 million transactions, followed by the NYCE network in New York with 20 million; MPACT in Texas, with 9 million; and the STAR system in California, with 8.4 million.

Bass said the current owners of The Exchange and ACCEL networks would split profits from the combined system on a 50-50 basis.

The Exchange was formed in 1972 as a cooperative venture between 30 financial companies headquartered in Washington and Oregon. They include Great Western, the Boeing Employees Credit Union, Key Bank, Pacific First Federal, U.S. Bank, Puget Sound National Bank, and Washington Mutual Savings Bank.

ACCEL was started in 1984 and is owned by The Exchange owners as well as three large banks, including First Interstate Bank of Washington, Seattle First National Bank, and Security Pacific Bank Washington.

The Exchange has 2,002 ATMs that are shared by 256 member financial institutions with a customer base of about 3.1 million. ACCEL has 1,946 ATMs and 357 point-of-sale terminals shared by 49 member institutions with a customer base of 3.5 million cardholders.

Some of the ATMs currently in use are shared by both The Exchange and ACCEL, which is why the combined network will have 2,892 machines.

EL ALMENDRO, Nicaragua (JUNE 4) UPI - Two top Contra leaders surrendered their weapons Monday to set an example for more than 10,000 rebels who are reluctant to give up their arms after nine years of civil war.

Enrique Zelaya Cruz, known as Commander Henry, and Miguel Angel Sosa, alias Commander Emiliano, handed over their automatic rifles to U.N. peace-keeping forces in a ceremony arranged by the government of President Violeta Chamorro.

''Emiliano is one of the hardest and most dangerous of the Contra leaders '' said Santiago Murray, an Organization of American States offical who is monitoring the disarmament. ''It is important for the leaders to disarm. It sets an example.''

Two civilian Contra leaders - Pepe Matus and Bernardo Pastora - also registered their names Monday among the some 3,500 Contras who have demobilized so far.

Dozens of other Contras also turned in their weapons Monday at El Almendro about 150 miles east of Managua, the center of one of five security zones set up throughout Nicaragua for the disarmament.

The Contras are under an agreement with the Chamorro government to disarm all their forces by June 10, but it was clear on Monday that not even half of the estimated 15,000 Contras were likely to meet that deadline.

''June 10 is not set in stone,'' Zelaya said. ''A lot of us are waiting for the reduction to begin in the Sandinista army to give us more confidence that the war is over.''

Roberto Ferrey, the government's representative to the disarmament and a former Contra leader, said that ''the most they will disarm by the 10th will be 7,000.''

An average of just over 300 Contras a day have been turning in their arms in the past week.

On June 10 Chamorro is scheduled to announce a plan for the reduction of the Nicaraguan army, which is almost entirely loyal to the previous Sandinista government of President Daniel Ortega.

Ortega, who relinquished the presidency to Chamorro on April 25, had said the Contras disarmament was necessary for a peaceful transition.

There were mixed reactions among the Contra regulars about the disarmament.

''I wouldn't mind a ranch, some cows,'' said 23-year-old Florencio Castillo, whose wife and young son are in a refugee camp in Honduras, waiting for his word to return to Nicaragua.

But like most of the Contra troops, the goal of the war in Castillo's mind had been to oust the Sandinistas. To him that meant the army, not just the government.

Castillo turned in his Soviet-designed AK-47 rifle Monday, saying his commanders assured him the Sandinistas were also going to disarm. doubtful he sighed and said he would still be ready to fight. ''If they still want war, we will respond.''

The acknowledged military commander of the Contras, Israel Galeano, alias Commander Franklin, said the Contras were doing their best to comply with the disarmament agreements.

''If we don't comply, it is the fault of the (U.N. and the O.A.S.),'' Galeano said. ''It is not our fault. They can only handle so many disarming troops at a time.''

The United States has promised to provide $47 million for the demobilization process and for humanitarian aid to the Contras once they disarm and return to civilian life.

The Nicaraguan government has set aside a large plot of land for the rebels in the southeast of the country and has promised them, among other things, participation in the force that will police that land.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 5) UPI - The World Bank announced Monday approval of a total of $440.6 million in loans to Algeria, Indonesia, Tanzania and other developing countries.

Public enterprises in Algeria will gain greater access to technical and financial resources through an industrial restructuring project that is being supported by the World Bank with five loans totalling $99.5 million.

In addition, a $50 million loan will be made to Guinea, the West African nation that is seeking to put into effect a program designed to make it easier for entrepreneurs to set up businesses and to enable the private sector to play a more important role in the economy, through the International Development Association, the bank's concessionary lending affiliate.

The multilateral organization said that Indonesia is launching a project to promote domestic use of low-value natural gas as a substitute for high-value oil products with the help of a World Bank loan of $86 million.

Kenya will benefit from an $6 million IDA loan to restructure its Industrial Development Bank and the Industrial and Commercial Development Corporation, two key financial institutions in the East African nation.

IDA is also supporting Madagascar efforts to improve agricultural extension and productivity. The island nation in the Indian Ocean will receive a $3.7 million loan that will benefit 125,000 rural families.

Tanzania will be another beneficiary of IDA lending. The East African nation will receive a $180.4 million loan to rehabilitate its primary and regional road networks, which have deteriorated to the point of undermining the country's economic recovery program.

Yemen, on the Arabian peninsula, will expand the coverage and quality of health care services through a project to be partly financed by a $15 million IDA loan, the World Bank said.

BROWNSVILLE, TX (JUNE 4) UPI - Greyhound Lines, the nation's largest bus company, and five subsidiaries Monday filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, company officials said.

The Dallas-based carrier, which is mired in a three-month-old labor dispute with 9,300 striking workers, filed for reorganization in a U.S.

bankruptcy court in Brownsville, Greyhound spokesman George Gravely said.

Eagle Bus Manufacturing Company, a Greyhound subsidiary, is based in Brownsville. The other affiliated companies affected by the bankruptcy filing are GLI Bus Operations Holding Company, BusLease Inc., Trailways Commuter Transit Inc. and GLI Food Services.

Greyhound asked the court for an immediate ruling that would allow passengers to use tickets that have already been purchased, officials said.

Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer J. Michael Doyle said the action was taken so the company could ''protect its asset base while operating on a business-as-usual basis.''

''We have taken this action to enable Greyhound Lines to continue operation of its total system with its full team of employees,'' Doyle said.

''Greyhound's value to its customers, employees and capital providers is maximized by a full system operation, that is to say, by serving the maximum number of towns with optimum frequency.

''We asked creditors for patience so that we could devote all available resources to running maximum service during the peak summer travel season '' Doyle said.

Under Chapter 11 protection, Greyhound Lines will continue to operate to all points previously served, Doyle said.

''We are now serving locations that provided 98 percent of our revenue last year, and we will continue to do so,'' he said.

Company officials did not say how long they expect Greyhound to remain under court protection.

Greyhound attempted on May 22 to avoid bankruptcy proceedings by offering to buy back $225 million in junk bond debts.

The company offered to purchase up to 85 percent of its 13 percent senior notes, which are due in 1995, for a price of 54 percent of their principal amount of $150 million.

In addition, Greyhound tendered an offer to buy up to 85 percent of its 12 1/2 percent senior subordinated notes, due in 1997, for 27.5 percent of their principal amount of $75 million.

Greyhound also said it needed to borrow another $35 million to boost operating cash and keep the firm afloat while rebuilding from the strike.

About 9,300 drivers and other employees, represented by the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions of the Amalgamated Transit Union, went on strike March 2.

Company officials estimate the strike has cost at least $75 million in lost revenues and increased costs, such as training replacement drivers and increased security at Greyhound terminals.

Greek Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis was in Washington today to meet with Secretary of State Baker. Baker told Mitsotakis that the United States and Soviet Union agree that problems on the island of Cyprus should be resolved. Baker was referring to the ongoing conflicts between Greek forces and Turkish troops who still control part of Cyprus 16 years after invading the island.

Foreign media and the Bush administration are filing protests with China's government accusing Chinese state security forces of brutality during the first anniversary of the crackdown in the Tiananmen Square. U-S Embassy officials in Beijing collected reports of journalists being seriously beaten and detained as they tried to cover the anniversary of the suppression of the pro-democracy movement.

A health and safety report card published today shows some contradictory practices by the American public. The seventh annual survey of U-S health behaviors found more Americans are watching how much fat they eat and buckling their seat belts. But the poll also reveals that fewer people are obeying speed limits or resisting their sweet tooth.

(JUNE 4) UPI - Gorbachev wraps up summit trip... the drug trial of Washington's mayor begins... federal agents crack New York Mafia drug ring... and 19 Indiana counties are declared disaster areas. U-P-I has it all, next:

Soviet President Gorbachev wound down his six-day summit visit to the United States today, as President Bush in Washington painted Congress a rosy picture of his talks with the Soviet leader.

Bush says he's pleased with the results of the summit. He also reported ''very, very positive reaction'' from U-S allies.

But the White House conceded that a Soviet threat to stop issuing exit visas to Jews if Israel continues relocating them in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip could affect movement toward expanded trade.

Gorbachev traveled to California's Silicon Valley and Stanford University, as well as San Francisco... where he and his wife Raisa held a reunion with former President Reagan and his wife, Nancy.

The Soviet leader's trip to the Silicon Valley was designed to win top-level corporate and high-tech contacts for much needed U-S business and investment help for his nation's struggling economy.

Gorbachev held a short, nostalgic reunion with former ''Cold War'' rival Ronald Reagan. The two men reviewed the sweeping political changes in Eastern Europe that they helped set into motion.

Their wives met for a friendly chat over coffee where they discussed the media's reports of their so-called ''stormy'' relationship.

Gorbachev received a warm greeting Standford... 40 miles south of San Francisco... where he declared ''the Cold War is now behind us, and let us NOT wrangle over who won it.''

He also expressed hopes that Stanford's internationally known scientists would work with their Soviet colleagues on issues such as environmental protection, arms control and the conversion to peace-time economies.

(JUNE 4) UPI - The Bush-Gorbachev summit is history... but a so-called food summit addressed more U-S-Soviet issues in the nation's capital today.

A Soviet agricultural official told the Washington meeting that U-S expertise in food processing could help the Soviet Union enact economic reforms more quickly.

The Soviet official says the trade agreement signed by Presidents Gorbachev and Bush should lead to U-S investment in his homeland. He says the Kremlin hopes American companies will help Soviet efforts to restructure its economy.

As far as U-S concerns, Agriculture Secretary Yeutter dismissed concern over reports that the Kremlin has been slow in paying for U-S grain imports. Yeutter says he believes the problem is only a temporary one.

In Moscow today, the Soviet Parliament voted to give struggling private businesses the same legal status as state-owned companies.

The new law will take effect January 1st, and is designed to give firms more control over their own profits and production.

Federal agents say they smashed a Mafia drug ring and arrested 20 members, including a reputed mobster who allegedly dismembered some of his victims.

U-S Attorney Andrew Maloney announced the arrests today in New York City, saying they include reputed Bonanno crime family soldier Thomas ''Tommy Karate'' Pitera. Maloney says agents seized more than 60 guns, knives, saws and several murder and torture manuels at Pitera's home.

Pitera and other members of the ring are charged with killing at least seven people, including an F-B-I informant slain in 1988.

Maloney says Pitera and 31 other members of his crew are also charged with racketeering and other counts. 12 suspects remain at large, but some are expected to turn themselves in tomorrow.

Maloney says the gang sometimes dismembered its victims, burying the body parts on the fringes of a Staten Island bird santuary. Police plan to begin digging outside the santuary next week, and expect to find as many as six bodies.
